Federal housing aid?

Yes

principal emphasis was on providing the tools by which private enterprise could do most of the job of providing homes at prices and rents which families could afford.

This was to be accomplished by improving on the aids to private enterprise which had been in existence since the early thirties, and by providing certain new aids, also to private enterprise.

But at the same time we recognized, from the experience of the past, that private enterprise could not cope with slums or take care of the housing needs of low-income families. So we provided for federal aid to local communities willing to tackle these two jobs. The low-rent program was extremely modest. It called for only 100,000 low-rent dwellings a year for five years. The slum clearance assistance was likewise modest. But we hoped that this public effort would stimulate a much broader attack by local communities and private enterprise. In the same bill we also proposed an attack on the farm housing problem through federal credit and subsidies.

We thought that by this kind of program we could achieve a unity between private enterprise, local communities, and the federal government toward a solution of our housing problem—the kind of a voluntary unity that General Eisenhower writes about. But the private home-building and financing industry did not choose to join in that unified effort. Because of what I consider misguided leadership, these interests succeeded in preventing this legislation from coming to a vote in the House of Representatives in 1946 and 1948 after it had been passed in the Senate both years by substantial majorities.

Stripped of all the side issues, the principal objection cited by opponents is that the program is socialistic, and that it marks the intrusion of government into a field served by private enterprise.

There are two answers to that. The first is that this program would be primarily a private-enterprise program, that direct participation by government would be limited to a small segment of the housing field which private enterprise has never served in the past and cannot reasonably be expected to serve in the future.

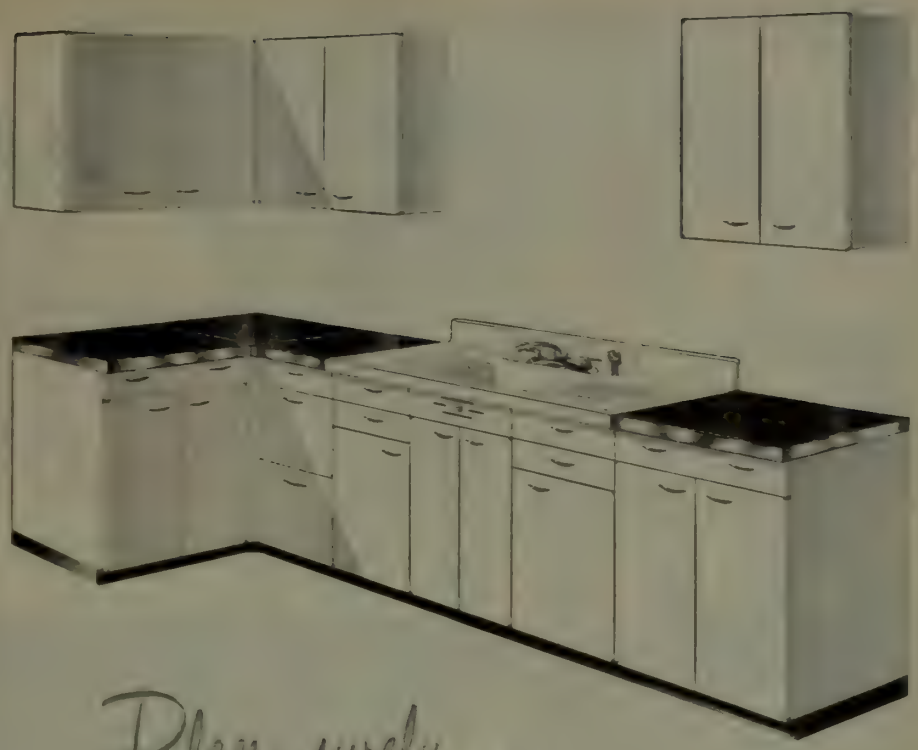
The second answer is that American people have never refused to utilize the resources of their government when their needs could not be satisfied otherwise. Our post office, streets and roads, airports, and water and sewage systems are some well-established enterprises of government, developed in the public interest. Some of you may not know that fire protection, now recognized as necessary public functions, was once left to private enterprise. Government has helped private enterprise, too. It helped the railroads to open up the West. It is now providing financial assistance to the merchant marine and, through mail subsidies, to commercial airlines.



Those who are so alarmed about government participation in our housing program always neglect to mention the extent to which government is helping them today in their own business of building and financing homes. That F.H.A. loan on your house is representative of a 15-billion-dollar credit insurance business being performed by your federal government. The government went into that business back in 1934. It did so because nobody else was doing the job and because, without F.H.A. people couldn't afford the cost of financing homes, and the building industry could not get back on its feet. This insurance business has been growing ever since, with the grateful blessing and encouragement of home-building and finance. If you got your money from a bank, it was available in part because the government insures bank deposits. If you went to a savings and loan association, you were borrowing funds insured by still another government undertaking.

Those government enterprises have helped you finance your home, but, by taking most of the risk out of home-building and finance, they've helped your lender, your builder, and his supplier. That is the reason why the home-building industry doesn't object to this kind of government participation. In fact, it lobbies for it.

I endorse these aids to private enterprise. In fact, the new provisions of the F.H.A. insurance program which were enacted last year were lifted almost bodily out of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. They're part of the major emphasis our program places on helping private enterprise fill most of America's housing needs.

But while government is engaged in these big enterprises, it ought to be doing something about reducing housing costs. It ought to be giving attention to our festering slums and to the urgent housing needs of those with low incomes. If we fail to do these things, we shall be confessing that the richest and most powerful democracy on earth cannot deal effectively with one of

End o Pest . . . all the protection most gardens need against the 3 major types of pests—chewing insects, sucking insects and fungus diseases. Comes ready-to-use in a handy dust gun of new and exclusive design, and in economy size for larger areas.

End o Weed . . . improved lawn weed control destroys over 100 different weeds. Kills leaves, stems, roots and all—yet won't harm ordinary grass. Just mix with water, then spray, using exclusive "Side-Spray" applicator or any ordinary spraying device.

MAY GARDEN GUIDE

In all sections:

- Keep picking faded flowers in garden unless needed for seed
- Water transplanted trees and shrubs thoroughly in dry weather
- Keep after weeds with the hoe
- Repair slopes washed by melting snow and spring rains—planting time is short
- Support weak-stemmed plants
- Start spraying or dusting as soon as insect pests show up

SOUTH

Feed lawns with complete plant food (about 25 pounds per 1,000 square feet). Plant centipede and St. Augustine grasses in Lower South, Bermuda grass and Zoysia matrella in Lower and Middle South. Spray lawns with 2,4-D weed killer.

Spray or dust roses regularly with an all-purpose mixture; feed about 5 pounds plant food per 100 feet of bed. Prune hardy climbing roses which have finished blooming.

Plant heat-loving annuals like balsam, cockscomb, zinnias, and marigold; also plant cannas, dahlias, ismene, montbretias, tuberoses, and zephyranthes except in Florida and Gulf Coast.

Dust azaleas and camellias with sulfur if red spider gets bad—grayish foliage is a sign of this pest. Use an oil emulsion for scale, but pick a cool day for application. Spray with DDT in oil emulsion for white fly on gardenias.

Transplant palms in Lower South. Prune spring-flowering shrubs if you haven't already; it's still not too late. Divide or plant both hardy and half-hardy waterlilies.

—W. Elbridge Freeborn

TEXAS-SOUTHWEST

Plant seeds or seedlings of petunias, verbenas, coleus, and other shallow-rooted flowers to fill empty spots left by spring-flowering bulbs. Plant morning-glories and moonvines where screens are wanted quickly; soak seeds before planting.

Prune rambler roses and wisteria immediately after flowering to encourage new growth.

Spray euonymus with miscible oil to control scale; spray hollyhocks to prevent rust. Hand-pick and burn bagworms.

Plant seeds of tithonias, sunflowers, and princess feather (amaranthus) in full sun; plant lantana, stocks, wallflower for late-summer bloom. Sow columbine seed as soon as matured, preferably in shade of a bush or shrub.

Dig, divide, and reset bulbs of habranthus lily and Guernsey lily (Lycoris radiata) for early fall bloom.

—Marian Price Scruggs

CENTRAL-EAST

Stake perennials, especially tall ones like delphinium and phlox, to prevent flowers from breaking stems. Tie together sprawly plants like iris, peony, and Shasta daisy.

Spray and dust garden every 10 days. Use a DDT and rotenone mixture for cyclamen mites on delphinium and thrip on gladiolus. Use nicotine sulfate for aphids; spray every four days until under control. DDT will control flea beetle on vegetables.

Trim evergreens just before new shoots appear. Don't cut out more than last year's growth if you can avoid it.

Take special measures if you must start a lawn this late—use seed containing annual rye, and mulch with peatmoss or straw after seeding. Cut new grass as soon as it is tall enough. Use 2,4-D weed killer on established lawns; on new lawns wait until grass has been cut several times.

Continue planting vegetables. Peas may be planted up to early May. Make a small planting of radishes, lettuce, spinach, and onion sets every 10 days. Delay putting in Lima beans and cucumbers and other vine crops until ground is warm.

—Harvey Bicknell

PACIFIC NORTHWEST

Spray or dust rosebushes every 10 days, water once a week if weather is dry. Give each bush one ounce complete plant food (4-12-4) every two weeks and water it in.

Set out transplants of broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, and kohlrabi; transplant tomatoes only after frost danger is past. Plant cucumber and squash in rich soil after May 15.

Sow seeds of hardy and half-hardy quick-growing annuals like zinnias, marigolds, annual phlox. Set out slow-growing annuals like snapdragon, stocks, and petunias started indoors; wait until May 20 to plant morning-glories, salvias, cannas and other flowers which don't grow well until ground is warm. Place house plants outdoors in a shady spot.

Place poison bait around strawberry plants to kill strawberry weevil grubs; spray broad-leaved evergreens against the same pest with lead arsenate about May 15.

—Ada V. Turner

CALIFORNIA

Cut delphiniums back to the soil and feed and water to encourage new shoots. Pinch out tips of chrysanthemums every few weeks to keep plants branchy. Move gerberas and Transvaal daisies; remake old canna beds by dividing clumps.

Add sulfur to soil or use one of the new special plant foods for acid-loving plants like azaleas and rhododendrons, especially if they are turning yellow.

Keep roses free of black spot by dusting every 10 days with a dust containing both sulfur and lead arsenate. Spray gladiolus for thrips; put out bait for snails and slugs.

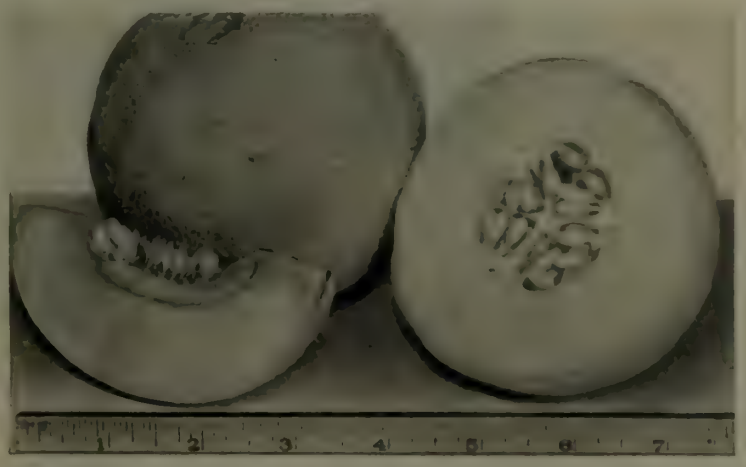
Midget vegetables

If you're short on garden space, try these Tom Thumbs among vegetable plants

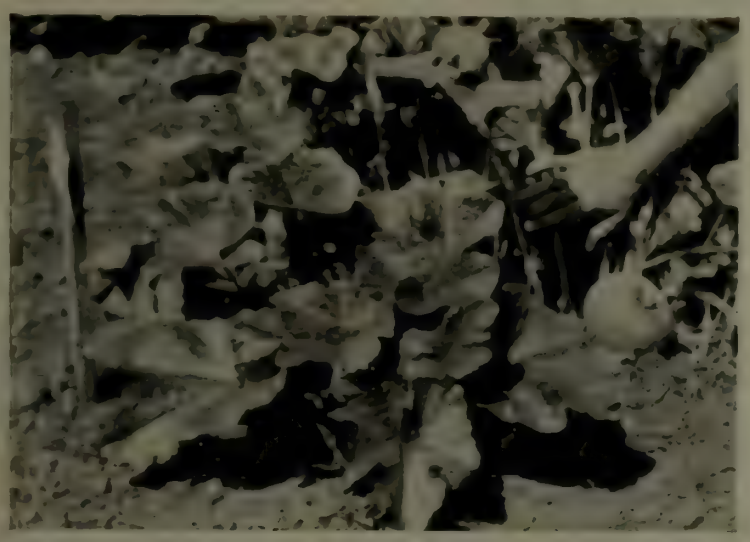
By Harry T. Foster

Did you ever eat a whole watermelon as just one serving? Do you like your cucumbers grown to perfect dill-pickle size? Do you like them mild as apples? Would you like to try freezing your own sweet corn and get a product so full of flavor, yet so delicate and sweet that family and guests say "You've found it—this is it."

Midget vegetables, still new to most home gardeners, are the answer. Sow seeds this month in full sun.



Watermelon that grows individual servings is called New Hampshire Midget. As you see, the melons when fully ripe are not over 8 inches long. They come early, have few seeds, and a rind so thin they're practically all sweet heart meat. Plant in sunny, sandy soil



Tiny Tim tomatoes make delightful garnishes. For a picnic or garden meal they're a salad in themselves when served on the stem and as cold as can be. Can be grown in boxes, large pots, or window boxes

Golden Midget sweet corn matures 4-inch ears of very sweet corn on amusing 30-inch stalks. With cobs no thicker than a pencil, it freezes very quickly, can be packed 6 to 8 in a quart size freezer carton

New Minnesota Midget muskmelon has vines that ramble not over 3 feet, and fruit like golden honeydrops less than 4 inches through Cheyenne Bush pumpkin assures you the best of pie makings, and small orange pumpkins for Jack o' lantern time. It's decorative, too

A cucumber: Probably no milder, better tasting one exists than the chubby Mincu. Vines spread only 4 feet, and the fruits set early. Originated at Minnesota State, it's a good one for the North

Make your gardening easier with tougher Koroseal Garden Hose

THE minute you lift Koroseal garden hose you'll know why. It's one-third lighter than other hose—a six year old can tote 50 feet with ease. With all its lightness it actually carries more water than other types of hose of the same dimensions—and so speeds up your watering.

You can leave Koroseal garden hose out in the sun and air day after day and forget it. Every test has shown it won't crack or oxidize after years of this treatment.

It's a marvel for punishment. It has been jumped on, run over by a truck, dragged over concrete and rough stones—without damage.

And here's another extra on this Koroseal garden hose—it has a new and approved coupling, which won't pull out and yet can be tightened or reattached at any time.

Choose Koroseal garden hose in either bright red or green. Its glossy surface won't hold dirt—so it's easy to keep clean. From the raw material to the finished product it is made by B. F. Goodrich—manufacturers of hose for more than 76 years.

B. F. Goodrich Rubber Hose

For lower-cost but also extra-quality hose, B. F. Goodrich makes rubber garden hose, stoutly reinforced with cord yet lighter than most rubber hose and built to last for years.

For Koroseal or rubber hose, see your retailer or call The B. F. Goodrich office in your city for dealers' names. The B. F. Goodrich Company, Industrial and General Products Division, Akron, Ohio.

For flowers to brag about—

Grow dahlias

By Elizabeth Russell Mack

Like all male dahlia enthusiasts, Conrad E. Faust insis that his favorite flower has few equals. These exhibitio size blooms in his Atlanta garden back up his argume

Growing dahlias is a man's hobby. American males have taken this handsome flower with its multitude of types and colors as their own—and will scream if their wives even try to pull up a weed near their dahlias.

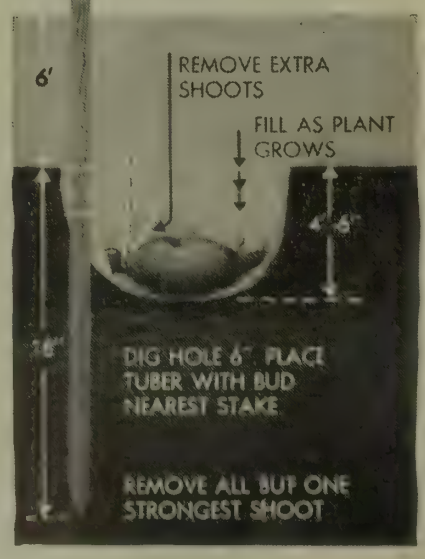
Conrad E. Faust of Atlanta is a typical male as far as dahlias are concerned. He is president of the Dahlia Society of Georgia, and a vice-president of the American Dahlia Society. When he argues that few other flowers give such handsome returns in brilliant bloom for the time and energy spent on them, he has 20 years of experience and 600 dahlias in his garden to prove his point.

He maintains that any man can grow dahlias of exhibition quality by following seven simple rules. His suggestions are just as good in Maine or Minnesota as they are in his own garden in Georgia. Mr. Faust's suggestions:

1. Don't plant too early

It's easy to get impatient when spring comes, but don't plant right after the last frost. Dahlias planted too early mature in hot weather an produce poor flowers. Even in his mild Georgi climate Mr. Faust waits until May 15 to Jun 15. Those dates are recommended in the Nort also.

2. Take care of your soil



Dahlias aren't fussy about soil, provided it deeply cultivated, well drained, and has plent of humus. They also need full sun to produc good flowers.

Compost or other humus should be dug in the dahlia bed every year. Cultivate the surfa soil until plants are about a foot high. After th feeder roots are near the surface and likely to damaged by cultivation. Use mulch the rest the season to keep down weeds and conser moisture. Plant bulbs as shown in sketch; s inches deep (a little deeper if soil is light; slight less if tuber is small and soil heavy). Cover wi two inches of soil.

3. Give plants enough room

Since dahlias are heavy feeders, their roc

need plenty of room to spread. The large varieties need at least three feet between plants. Smaller dahlias used for mass effects can be placed one to two feet apart.

4. Top and disbud plants

Pinch out the tops of dahlia plants after the second set of leaves has developed. This makes the plant branch to form four flower stalks instead of one.

If you want huge, exhibition type of blooms, leave the tip bud but go down the stem removing side buds, except for the two bottom ones on the stalk which are needed to produce later flowers.

Disbud only large types; pompons and other small dahlias should have masses of flowers.

5. Use care in feeding

Soil too rich causes more failures with dahlias than too poor soil. Work two good handfuls of bonemeal into soil for a distance of about 2 feet around the spot where each tuber will be planted.

When plants start growing, work about one tablespoonful of complete plant food into the top inch of soil in a ring a foot or more out from the stalk. Feed every two weeks in slowly increasing amounts.

Don't use high-nitrogen plant foods or stems will become soft and plant will grow leaves at the expense of flowers. It often helps to add a small amount of wood ashes to supply the potash dahlias need.

6. Stake dahlias well

Dahlias, being soft-stemmed, break easily. Conrad Faust likes to use sections of the steel rods used for reinforcing concrete as stakes since they don't rot or mildew. However, wooden stakes are perfectly good and easier to get.

For large dahlias stakes should be five to six feet high and driven 18 inches into the ground. Knot the cord on the stake and then tie loosely about the plant.

7. Dig and store tubers carefully

After the first frost has killed the tops of your dahlia plants, cut off stalks and dig the roots. Loosen soil around the clump and raise the roots carefully so as not to break any tubers from the stem. Turn upside down in the sun for a few hours to let any juice drain from the hollow stalks. Then dust with sulfur, wrap in paper or cover with dry sand, peatmoss or sawdust, and store in a cool, dry spot.

Varieties and types

In selecting your dahlias you can choose among several thousand named varieties, ranging in size from the dwarfs up to the giant-flowered, six-foot-tall exhibition types. As for colors, the only thing you can't have is a blue dahlia.

It would be impossible to name a list of the best ones because every dahlia lover has his own list of favorites. Mr. Faust, like all dahlia fanciers, has formed preferences.

In the formal decorative type he likes the white Real Glory. Among the informal decoratives his favorites include Cherokee Brave (maroon), Mrs. Hester Pape (purple-red) and the gorgeous golden Kirsten Flagstad.

Among cactus types he names purple Zenith, Snow Ball, and Pink Flamingo. And among the semi-cactus he likes Rhythm, Colonel Little, and Roselyn Straight.

For flowers to brag about—

Photographs: Suter, Hedrich-Blessing, Watson

The gladiolus has few equals for beauty, whether it's in a vase or growing in the garden. You'll probably want to grow enough glads for both purposes

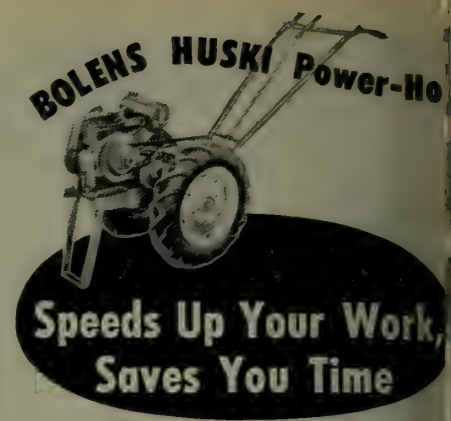
By George Graves

Executive Counselor, New England Gladiolus Society

Don't leave glads out of your garden plans for this summer. One season of growing them will let you understand why gladioli are a top favorite with so many people.

The gladiolus isn't a one-purpose flower. Its endless variety of colors can satisfy any personal taste or color scheme. It's ideal for garden planting among other flowers. On the other hand, it's just the thing for men who want to grow flowers only for cutting or bragging about because glads can be planted in rows in any extra bit of space.

If you're a beginner, you may become bewildered trying to decide which varieties to plant. There are more than 2,000 name varieties—and more coming each year.



The best plan for the beginner is to make his selections on the basis of color from among the show winners of former years. You'll find a suggested list of excellent varieties on a later page.

Buying your bulbs

Most catalogs and seed stores offer gladiolus bulbs in several sizes. No. 1, large; No. 2, medium; and No. 3, small—all will produce flowers. Anything smaller than No. 3 will be less than an inch in diameter and can't be depended on to bloom. Anything over an inch in diameter will be almost certain to bloom, and the bigger the bulb the better the flowers.

More important than bulb size is its freedom from disease. Buy from a reputable nurseryman to be safe.

(Editor's note: Gladiolus bulbs are also called "corms," which is their correct botanical classification. However, common usage makes it all right for you to call them bulbs.)

Soil and sun

Gladioli require much the same growing conditions as most vegetables and garden flowers. They like lots of sun, and a fertile, well-drained soil. They don't like to compete with tree and shrub roots, nor do they grow their best crowded up against a foundation. If you plant in such places, be sure to supply extra food and water.

Before planting, dig complete plant food into the bed, about 4 pounds for each 100 feet of row. Plant food used later in the summer should be watered in immediately after applying to let it get to the roots at once. Don't use

How to treat your bulbs before planting

Treat gladiolus bulbs before planting to kill thrips and some of the common diseases of glads. Fill a tub with water and add 1¼ tablespoonfuls of Lysol for each gallon of water

Wrap bulbs in several thicknesses of newspaper and label each variety. Burlap or cloth sacks are good for large quantities. Avoid paper bags; they often come apart in the liquid

Place packages in the solution and keep them entirely submerged for three hours. If necessary, use bricks or stones to keep them below the surface

After three hours, remove bulbs and place them on a coarse screen to drain. Plant while still damp. Corrosive sublimate, one tablet to each pint of water, can be used instead of Lysol to treat your bulbs raw manure since it may spread infection if it touches the bulbs.

If you're willing to spend money each spring for new bulbs, you won't have to use plant food. A large bulb contains enough reserve food to produce good flowers. Feeding insures that there will be bulbs large enough to bloom next year.

How to plant

Plant glads as early in the spring as the soil is fit to work. Set bulbs six inches deep in light soil, four inches deep if soil is heavy. Fill the hole only half full when making the first spring planting to let bulbs get extra warmth from the sun, and fill rest of hole after growth starts. Large bulbs should be about seven inches apart.

The blooming season can be stretched by making succession plantings, by planting bulbs of several sizes, and by using varieties which take different lengths of time to mature.

Care after planting

Start shallow hoeing when first leaves come through the ground. Glads suffer when forced to compete with weeds.

The worst insect enemy is the gladiolus thrip, a very tiny, black, winged insect. It sucks the juice from the plant, giving leaves a silvery appearance at first and then causing them to turn brown. Thrips also cause deformed flowers and prevent many flower spikes from opening at all.

Thrips on bulbs should be killed before planting as shown earlier. In the garden, start dusting or spraying with DDT when leaves are six inches tall. Apply once a week (oftener if rain comes) right through flowering time.

Water is very important—in fact, it's usually the greatest single factor in successful gladiolus growing. Rain seldom supplies enough moisture so make sure the bed gets an inch of water every week. Start watering when there are five leaves on the plants.

Cutting the flowers

Cut the flower spikes ordinarily when only one or two flowers are open. The rest will open in water indoors. Cut spikes off cleanly and at a slant. Put the spikes in water at once. Laying them down for any length of time will make the tips take on a permanent curve.

Leave at least five leaves on the plant since it must continue growth to mature the bulbs for next year.

Care after blooming

Keep weeds under control even after the blooming period is over. However, you can let up on watering except in very dry weather. Thrips control can also be relaxed unless there is serious infestation.

Digging time for the bulbs depends on the planting date. Lift them when growth has stopped but before foliage turns brown, cut off tops, and store in an open box to let them cure for a month. An

Lament for a Fallen Foe

Ancestral dandelion, ancient foe,
Scion of half the weeds upon my lawn,
I grieve because tomorrow's rosy dawn
Shall know thee not. My hand must lay thee low.

Thy far-flung progeny shall fade and droop
Beneath the spray gun's ignominious mist.
But not for thee the slow disgraceful twist,
The blackened leaf, the stem's distorted droop.

For thee the knife, swift, terrible and bright—
One straight sure stroke across thy thumb-thick root.
There, it is done. Thou liest lifeless, mute.
On the black soil thy heart's blood oozes white.

Yet do I know I need not cry alas.
When daffodils shall welcome back the spring
Thy hidden seeds shall rise anew, and fling
A handful of gold coins across the grass.

Flowers to brag about—grow iris

Begins on page 42

high figure from iris connoisseurs. Ten years from now the stock will have increased to thousands and you'll be able to buy it for a quarter.

Plant in summer. Irises prefer to do their moving in the good old summertime. So get in your order early; growers usually start digging and shipping a few weeks after the flowering season.

It's well to know that following their spring burst of growth and bloom, irises calm down sensibly into a period of relative inactivity for the summer. In northern gardens they nod; in the South and Southwest they take a siesta. But in late summer they evidently dream of another spring, and thus inspired, reawaken, make additional leaves, and fatten their rhizomes (RHY-zohms—the solid fleshy parts from which leaves rise). Most important, down within the green leaf sheaths tiny buds are formed for next year's bloom.

You should have your irises planted in time for that fall growing period. Not only will it help insure bloom, but you'll know that

How to plant an iris quickly and well

Choose a location with good natural drainage and sun at least half the day. Fork soil thoroughly and re-level the bed. Slant two cuts into prepared soil leaving a ridge between them

Set your iris plant astride this ridge. Spread the anchor roots into the two depressions. Press the rhizome (fleshy bulbous part) firmly into the soil so that the fan of leaves remains upright. If you are resetting a clump, trim foliage to 7-inch fans for a tidier look

Cover the rhizome with one inch of soil. Water in ring about the newly set plant so that anchor roots are in damp soil, but keep water off the rhizome. Have plant on slight mound at finish, dry soil level with base of fan the plants are well established for winter.

A place in the sun. In selecting a spot for your new irises, remember that they'll need lots of sunshine and good soil that drains well. Many people grow them successfully along with delphiniums, columbines, lupines, Oriental poppies, and the like in perennial borders. Their clumps become bold and beautiful accents, easily dominating the scene at flowering time. But in such mixed plantings, be sure to employ a "good neighbor" policy—and good neighbors for irises are plants with light foliage that will not throw dense shade or hinder free circulation of air about the iris clumps.

Good drainage is so important that a standard practice in making iris beds is to put a raised edging of brick or stone around them so as to hold the soil level several inches above surrounding ground.

For individual plants in a mixed border the soil may be simply "hilled up." Since iris rhizomes grow right at the surface, even a slight elevation will help drain water away from them quickly.

Soil. If you're blessed with reasonably good garden dirt, there's no need of elaborate preparation. Almost certainly it will grow fine irises. Even among experienced iris fanciers there are two schools of thought on both the initial soil enrichment and subsequent applications of food.

The "play safe" proponents will sprinkle bonemeal heavily over a new bed, then throw on a two- or three-inch blanket of compost and fork it in well. They feel that these additions are helpful and perfectly safe to use. Heavy fertilization, they claim—especially with materials having a high nitrogen content—may lead to lush growth and later rotting of the rhizomes.

Feed 'em and reap! But perhaps you'll string along with the "bloom-or-bust" boys who certainly do grow gorgeous big irises. Spade all of the dirt out of your bed for a depth of 8 to 10 inches, and then loosen up the bottom with a fork. Pile about a fourth of the excavated soil to one side, and start shoveling the rest back into the hole, adding to it as much as a gallon bucketful of rotted cow manure (or somewhat less of pulverized sheep manure) plus a quarter pound of balanced garden plant food for each square foot of bed area. Compost, too, may be worked in as freely as you please, and some growers use sprinklings of bonemeal, superphosphate and wood ashes in addition to the complete plant food.

All ingredients, of course, are turned and chopped thoroughly into the soil as the bed is refilled. If the dirt happens to be of a sticky texture, this is a fine time to work in enough sand to loosen it up. Also, if you're in a section where azaleas and rhododendrons thrive, the ground is probably more acid than tall bearded irises will like, and a good snow of ground lime-

Redesigned for better outdoor living—III

Dividing their space

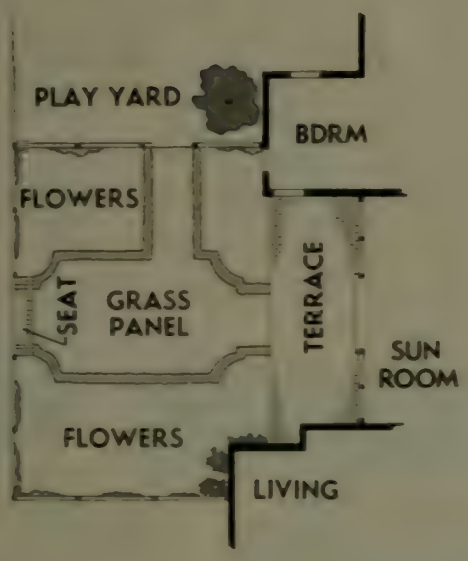
Here is the arrangement of the garden at a glance: terrace, grass-paneled garden and—through the open gate—the children's play yard. Flower beds are planned for long-season bloom; climbing roses put flowers even on fence

By Ellen Sheridan

There's no need to have your outdoor living plans upset just because children have a habit of arriving and growing up. Mr. and Mrs. William Reppy of Oxnard, California, had their house and garden planned when they were the only ones in the family; it's just as livable today although there are two sons aged 7 and 3.

The trick was to allow for both juvenile and adult living right from the start. They accomplished this by dividing their space into definite areas for grownups and children. Minor changes have been made, of course, but the basic plan remains the same.

Heart of the house is the garden room which is informal and able to take hard usage. It opens on a terrace that overlooks garden and play area. During the children's first years a sandbox stood on the terrace, but now the boys have moved into their own play yard.



Adults can also play: the drive to the garage beyond the boy's yard has a badminton court. The garden itself is enclosed by a high, white board fence which forms a background for flowering shrubs, climbing roses and colorful beds of perennials and annuals.

Some alterations will be made as the children grow, but the plan allows for that, too.

Try an arrangement like this if you're having trouble mixing children and flower beds. The two Reppy boys have their own play yard where they work out their energy on wagons, toys, and gymnasium bars. Their mother can hear and see them through open gate as she sits in garden its foremost social and economic problems.

Federal housing aid? Yes

The housing legislation that I hope the Eighty-first Congress will enact should deal with four main problems.

First, there is the matter of costs. I don't need to tell you that houses cost too much. Probably most things cost too much these days. But the difference is that houses have always cost too much. Not enough have been built because too few people could afford them. That is why a worn-out house, unlike a broken-down jalopy, remains in use instead of going to the junk yard. One of the reasons that houses cost too much is that we still put them together in much the same way our great grandfathers did. I'm not saying that houses can be rolled off a production line like automobiles, although there is certainly reason to believe we can go a long way in that direction. But those of us who have studied the problem believe that modern technology can be applied in many ways to cut down costs. Congress has already given some encouragement by making F.H.A. insurance available for loans to prefabricators and other mass producers of housing. But we need also a broad research program to develop and encourage the use of cost-saving materials and methods. It needs to be much broader than the limited program directed at building codes and standardized measurements authorized by the last Congress.

No single element in the building industry can afford to undertake this kind of research program. Leadership will have to be undertaken by the federal government. Such a program was contained in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill; I am confident that it will be provided for in the legislation enacted by the Eighty-first Congress. What it would do would be to authorize the federal government to use its own and outside research facilities, like those at colleges and universities, to develop new products and methods, make the results known and encourage their use by the building industry.

Second, the best evidence that private enterprise cannot deal with slums and blighted areas is the fact that they're still growing. The costs of acquiring, clearing, and making slums and blighted areas available for redevelopment will be greater, in most cases, than the return that can be realized by selling the cleared land for other use. Private enterprise is just not in the business of sustaining losses.

Neither can your local government afford to do this job alone out of its limited tax resources. Yet the slums must be cleared if we are to have healthy communities and if their constant drain on our community resources is not to bankrupt our cities.

The federal government sho help the cities undertaking t task in two ways. First, repaya loans should be made available finance the cost of acquiring, cle ing, and preparing such areas redevelopment (principally by p vate enterprise). Second, if a l is sustained after the property sold for redevelopment, the fede government should absorb t thirds of this loss through a gra No local community would be quired to go into the program, l the federal loan funds and gra should be available to any that cide to go ahead and need help

Third is the problem of prov ing decent homes for low-inco families.

Private enterprise has not m and cannot be expected to m adequate housing available prices and rents which low-inco families can afford to pay.

Again, all the government sho do is to assist local communi which decide to go ahead w low-rent public-housing proje If there is a local need and community is willing to build low-rent project and make a lo contribution in the form of tax emption, the federal governme should agree to make cash con butions to make up deficits caus by keeping the rents low. In or to assure that these projects w not compete with adequate priv housing, the government should quire that the incomes of famil admitted to the projects be at le 20 percent below those of famil for whom private enterprise is p viding decent homes. We shou also require that for every new lo rent dwelling built, a slum dwelli must be eliminated.

Despite the diversion of prew public-housing projects to w workers and despite higher incor during the war, tenants living the projects had a median annu income of $1,844 in 194 and p an average rent, including utiliti of $32.16 per month. I ask v where else you could get a dece home within your means if you h to get along with an annual incor of less than $2,000?

When the private building i dustry assails this part of our hou ing program, I am reminded of t small child who won't give up a t he has never used and probab never will. Only here we are de ing with no child's toy, but t lives and well-being of millions American families.

The fourth problem with whic the housing legislation must deal that of bad housing on the farm Proportionately more farmhous than urban homes are hazardou to the health and safety of their o cupants. Their mere location o the farms does not remove any the dreariness or hopelessness living in them. I believe that u timately every farm family shoul have an opportunity to have home that meets the minimum re quirements of decency, safety, an sanitation.

Under the comprehensive hou ing bill we propose, farm owne who do not have other resources c credit would be able to obtain long term loans from the federal government to finance decent homes for themselves, or their tenants, sharecroppers, or laborers. If the farm income is adequate to cover living costs and payments on the loan, there would be no other assistance. If the income is inadequate, however, the government would provide subsidies for 10 years to cover interest and part of the principal payments, provided the farmer agrees to undertake a farm-improvement program that will eventually provide an adequate income.

I do not claim that the program I have been describing will solve the housing problem overnight. Rather, I think of it as a good beginning in a long-range effort. All of us who have sponsored and supported this legislation hope that private enterprise will expand its area of operations until it is, in fact, serving the housing needs of all Americans. When that time comes we shall no longer need to have much of the program which now is necessary.

I do not believe that our democracy can afford to be unmindful of this most fundamental need of the American people. That is why I have insisted that housing legislation contain a declaration of national housing policy—a declaration to the effect that general welfare and security of the nation and the health and living standards of its people require the elimination of slums and blighted areas, the realization of a decent home and a suitable environment for every American family, and the development and redevelopment of our communities to advance the growth and wealth of the nation.

With this declaration of policy and the specific programs to back it up, we shall offer hope to the millions of Americans who are now ill-housed and we shall help in the solution of many other social and economic evils. And we shall be demonstrating to the world that a free nation operating under a government by the people can serve the people's needs.

Give your tomatoes

By Kermit Andrea

Your vegetable garden plans undoubtedly give a goo amount of space to tomatoes. Few people ever ha enough of this versatile vegetable because, fresh or canne you can find endless uses for them.

Half the art of growing healthy, plentiful tomatoes li in giving them a good start. Don't plant too early becau tomatoes don't grow well in cool weather, and there always danger of a late frost catching them. Wait un the weather is definitely warm.

Your soil should be fertile and well spaded, and in spot with plenty of sun. Try to plant within easy reach water because tomatoes need watering during dry weath er. Set plants three feet apart if you plan to stake them otherwise four feet. Divide your planting between earl medium, and late varieties to get a long bearing season

Now read on to learn how to transplant tomatoes fo certain success and the assurance of a good harvest.

Buy healthy, stalky plants lik these, with plenty of room be tween them. Beware of buyin plants where the seller pul them out of the soil and wrap a bunch of bare roots in a piec of paper. Such plants ma grow, but the odds are badl against their ever being muc of a success. Roots should hav plenty of earth around ther

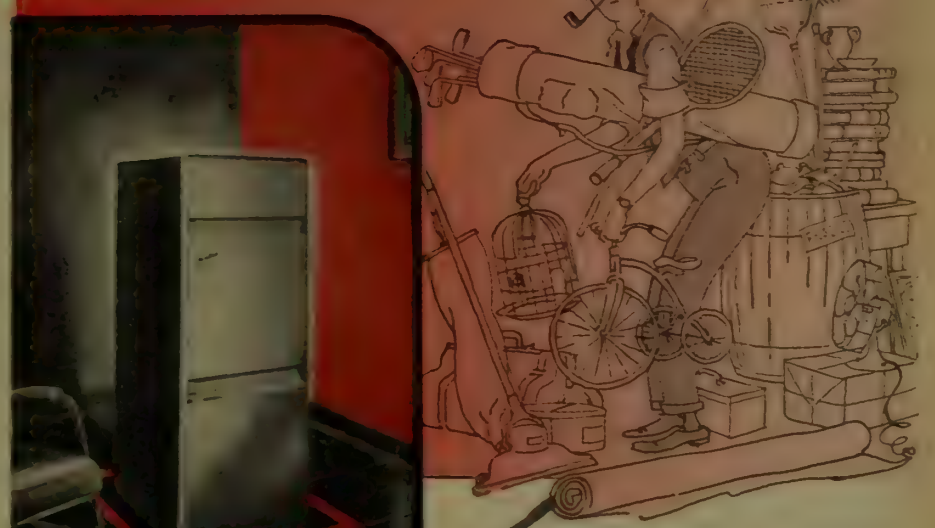
Photographs: Stanley; Mead, U.S.D.A.; Naylo

Moisten soil around plants, then lift them out with an old table knife or similar tool as shown. Carefully work apart any plants with interlaced roots. Trick is to disturb roots as little as possible leaving as much soil on them as you can. Plant pictured has a good ball of earth around roots

...good start

Have garden soil well spaded and loose. Make hole twice as wide as the root ball, and set plant a little deeper than it was before. Potted tomato plants, like the one shown, are more expensive but are often worth the extra cost. Since roots go in undisturbed, there is little setback and as a result plants usually produce fruit earlier

...u have leggy plants like ...one, don't set just the roots ...he ground. Remove the ...es from the lower part of ..., dig a short trench, and ...oth roots and part of the ... into it. Roots will grow ... the buried portion of the ... and you'll soon have a ...thy plant with lots of roots ...ature good, big tomatoes



After plant is in the ground, fill in soil around roots, and press earth down with the fingers. Such firming brings moist earth into contact with roots. Air spaces can do your plants serious damage because roots will be unable to reach food and water and will dry out. Soil should be well pulverized since clods also cause air space

A starter solution (a handful of plant food to a gallon of water) will ...ead growth and rooting. Pour about a pint around each plant to settle ...il and provide quick moisture and food. Repeat monthly, or spread a ...ing of plant food six inches from stem, scratch into soil, and water in

Cutworms are the worst enemies of young tomatoes which they kill by cutting plants off at ground level. Use guards of tar paper, layers of newspaper or similar material. Wrap around stem as shown and let guard extend an inch or two below surface. Poison baits are also effective, but use with care around children and pets

Newly planted tomatoes need protection against direct sun until they are well established. Shingles pushed into the ground at an angle as shown are all that's needed. Don't put them so close as to injure roots. If an unseasonably late frost comes, place a tent of newspapers over both plant and shingles and weigh ends down

If you plan to stake your tomatoes, pound poles into ground before planting. Use stout stakes six feet high and three feet apart. Set plants eight inches from poles, pinch out all but two stems as plant develops, and tie stems loosely to poles

Mulch when plant gets a little larger. Grass clippings and straw are all effective in conserving moisture and keeping down weeds. A mulch also keeps ripening tomatoes from touching the ground where plants aren't staked. If you don't use a mulch, kill weeds by frequent, shallow hoeing. Deep hoeing may injure roots

Sempervivums (hen and chicks) are ideal for small crannies. Use large types near webby ones for contrast ing—are good choices. Shear ragged foliage after blooming and new will form quickly. Pinks—like Maiden pink and Cheddar pink—flower in summer but have good foliage the year around. Dalmatian bellflower (Campanula portenschlagiana) has blue flowers in summer. Of the sedums, Goldmoss (Sedum acre) spreads widely but clings to rocks with an almost mosslike evergreen foliage. The white Sedum brevifolium and yellow Sedum spathifolium are also evergreen, and completely different.

Perhaps your wall needs only bold clumps here and there. Turn to violas (especially Jersey Gem), Tunica saxifraga, perennial candytuft, and alpine wallflower. Grass pinks give still larger clumps—and the old white variety, Mrs. Sinkins, blooms all summer. Violas will grow in partial shade; also use long-season Yellow Corydalis and primroses for clumps in light shade.

Walls of ledge rock beautiful in themselves need only small plants in crevices: the Encrusted saxifrages, small, webby sempervivums, and the tiny tufted harebells. In shade where there's moisture try also the mossy saxifrages and small rock ferns.

Plants hanging down from above will soften a mortared wall. Good choices are trailing babysbreath,

Bedding violas and native violets are dependable, do well in sun or light shade, form handsome clumps on walls

golden alyssum, blue leadwort (Blue ceratostigma), lemon and downy thymes, nepeta, trailing-type petunias and rockspray (Cotoneaster microphylla) with its evergreen foliage and bright red winter berries. Evergreen trailing junipers are good above high walls.

Correct planting is just as important as selecting the right plants. If your wall has poor soil behind it, you may have to scoop some of it out. Not all, just enough to mix in peatmoss, compost or other humus to loosen the soil. Mix in a good plant food for the immediate needs of your plants and a little slow-acting bonemeal for future needs. If digging sounds too formidable, you can do a fair job by poking holes behind the wall and sifting plant food and compost down into them.

Keep plants in a shaded pail with roots moist. Spread out roots in a fan shape as you set them in the wall. If you're building your wall, fill with good soil and plant in the crevices as you lay the rocks. In an old wall, clean out crevices with a chisel or pick, wrap roots in wet sphagnum moss, and slide them back into the openings on a flat trowel or narrow shingle. Have crowns higher than the roots.

Water from the front at first until roots have grown back. Soaking the crowns can harm them, so reach back of them with a long-spout watering can. After roots have grown through wall you can water entirely from the top and behind the wall with a hose. Be careful not to wash out soil, and give enough water so it soaks way down behind the wall.

Q. Is it wise for me to plan overhead lighting if the ceilings of my rooms are low? Mrs. D. K., Dixon, Illinois.

A. When ceilings seem too low, it is best to have them attract as little attention as possible. Plan indirect lighting or wall fixtures for over-all room light, and use floor or table lamps with furniture groups.

ne diary of a plain dirt gardener

By Harry R. O'Brien

Home brigade went into action. David mowed grass. Donald got vegetable garden in shape. And I wheel-hoed the strawberry bed ay 1 In spite of cloudy chill, ng is coming on. If there weren't vergreen in the way, you could ight from the stair landing that e is an intermediate iris com- into bloom in the back bed. re are bloom stalks shooting up some of the tall bearded—way ad of schedule.

Radishes, some late, are up. awberries are coming into om. Asparagus is at hand and barb is simply out of this world fter Maggie gets it cooked.

And I see a yaller bush in bloom the shrub border to the east of lawn. This is Rosa hugonis, a ecies rose which grows up to six high hereabouts and blooms out now with bright yellow gle flowers. You plant it among shrubbery, not in a rose bed.

Made another planting of gar- peas. Some were Little Mar- and the rest were Green Bayou. his latter is a new variety devel- ed down South, said to be re- stant to heat, so it does well in mmer weather. It is good for ble, canning, and freezing. I orked in plant food liberally be- re putting in seed, to give the as a helping hand.

May 2 Sunday—and couldn't re- member name of that intermediate is in bloom, not having my rec- rd book along as I gazed. It is one of the older 35-cent varieties, but ust as purty as though I had paid ve bucks for it last year.

May 3 Ground too wet to work after rains of last night. So for daily gymnastics this late p.m., proceeded with unfinished prun- g. Sawed off limb of peach tree that had shaded front bed. Got into midst of shrubbery and cut out a wild cherry that had grown up.

There is a volunteer maple near- by amid said shrubbery that I'd like to whack out too. But Maggie insists that we let it grow into a tree. Now I don't want a tree on that spot. Maggie just doesn't understand principles of landscape design.

May 5 Home from meeting of our men's rose club, to find our dog, now 15 years old, is bad sick. Poor old chap. He wouldn't lie down. Just went round in a circle on liv- ing-room rug. Kept whining and moaning.

So toward 11 at night, David and I put him in the car and we made a wild dash in the darkness up to Lewis Center, to have Doc- tor Corbin, the veterinarian, look at him. While the doctor took care of the dog and gave him pills, I talked with his wife.

May 10 Vegetables up and com- ing. New strawberry plants look fine. But dearie me, the weeds are running a hoss race up and down the rows. Anyhow, I cut and brought in nigh unto a peck of asparagus.

May 11 "Lady, would you be in- terested in selling your home?" I heard some strange man ask at the front door. "Mercy no, we live here," replied Maggie.

I suppose we could sell our house for a lot more than it cost us to build it years back. That fine profit would make us feel good. But what would we do next? Prob- ably have to pay more than we got, for another house which wouldn't suit us so well. Besides, I'd have to begin gardening all over again.

Just between us, I expect to live here until we are dead and gone. I can't imagine ever being offered such a good job that I'd move away. Or enough money to make us willing to sell out.

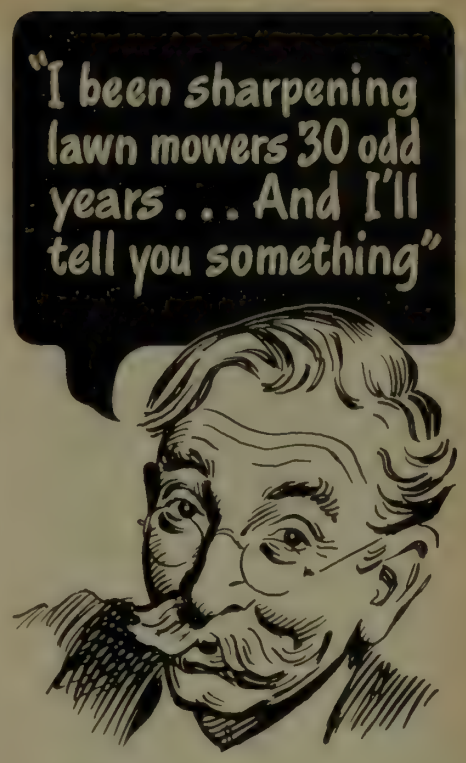
Work time came and the home brigade went into action. David got busy at grass mowing. Donald began to get the main vegetable garden in shape. I went over the new strawberry bed and early vegetables with the wheel hoe. Used this in some roses, too. By then it was night.

May 13 Unlucky day. Rain most of last night. Clouds still hang heavy. Ground is sodden. Weeds flourish. Our place looks sadder and sadder. I hope no visitors come for at least 13 months, to give us a chance to catch up.

But did get in another big basket of asparagus, which is coming on too fast for us to use. It's high time for Maggie to begin putting some in the zero box in the basement, for freezing.

So this late afternoon David overhauled the motor and com- pressor on said box. A new belt was needed, so he bought that and put it on. I don't know what else he did, in way of cleaning and oiling. But it works fine. Thus his educa- tion in electrical engineering, now in progress, is paying dividends.

Meanwhile Donald, bossed by his mother, Mrs. Maggie, cleaned out the inside of the freezer box with hot water and one of those new detergents. I told 'em to wash it out again with baking soda dissolved in water. But land sakes —you can't tell a woman anything.



May 14 Inside of freezer now down to zero. So first thing this morning Maggie had that asparagus ready —whatever she does to get it ready—and had three boxes packed, sealed and down in the bottom of the freezer. We are off and away to another season of freezing food against next winter's needs. Rhu- barb, peas, spinach, strawberries, peaches, sweet corn, bush beans, Lima beans—these are items to work on in due season. Mebbe some chickens will be frozen, too.

Sam Caldwell, the iris enthusiast, down at Nashville, Tennessee, and secretary of the American Iris Society, gave me an idea last year. He suggested that the Society award a Joe Doakes medal each year—in addition to other medals. This Doakes award should go to an older iris, now down to a price reasonable enough for Joe Doakes and his wife. Joe and his wife like iris but don't care to buy the newer, high-priced varieties.

This sounds like a good idea. So I hereby publicly nominate Sno- qualmie for the first Joe Doakes medal. This is a creamy white iris that has been on the market since 1938. It is large, extra hardy, free blooming, and a vigorous grower. It is handled by most iris special- ists and sells for less than a dollar.

This I mention in passing, for Snoqualmie is now in bloom here, the first tall bearded iris to make its appearance. Also, the daylilies are coming on, two or three weeks early. No less than six were out to- day. Of special note is Brunette, a sort of brownish color, which is not so tall, and blooms medium size but in great abundance.

A fellow could write a long piece about the works of a lawn mower.

. . . about crucible analysis steel blades, self-aligning ball bearings, whether the gears are cast or cut, how the shield fits against the wheel, how many spiders there are in the cylinder and how the blades are fastened onto 'em—and so on.

Average man has to take things like that on faith.

People ask me about a new lawn mower, I just say, "What's the name of it?" Then if they say Great American, Meteor, Pennsylvania Jr., or Pennsylvania Power Mower, I tell 'em . . .

"That's all you need to know, neighbor. It's made by Pennsyl- vania, so it's a good mower. It'll really cut grass and it'll last you a long time."

Those Pennsylvania people been making fine lawn mowers over 70 years. Their mowers are always good grass cutters and I can tell you they're easy to work on. When you sharpen 'em they stay sharp. And when you true 'em up, they stay trued up.

I always say, "You don't have to know all the ins and outs of lawn mowers. Just get one made by Pennsylvania. It'll be a good grass cutter and will really give you service."

Plain dirt gardener

May 15 Forgot to mention that the other day when downtown I stopped at the seed store and bought a mixed assortment of 200 glad bulbs (or corms, if you want to be strictly accurate). These are to be put back in the vegetable patch to supply Maggie with cutting material. She gets just as much enjoyment out of this reasonably priced mixture as she would have from the newest, most fashionable and expensive varieties.

May 16 Home toward night and a terrible thing met my eyes as I came upon the rear lawn. All spring Maggie has been complaining because the branches of a group of three winter honeysuckles at the corner of the house have grown over the kitchen window.

A terrible sight met my eyes. Maggie and David had butchered three honeysuckle bushes with the pruning shears

Taking advantage of my absence, she hornswoggled Donald into getting busy with the lopping and pruning shears. Instead of doing a neat and artistic job, they just butchered those bushes. A wide and ugly gash has been cut right into the heart of them. It will take a year before they look like anything again.

It made me feel sorta like giving up the gardening ghost and taking to fishing for recreation. Or maybe pulling up stakes and going off as a hobo to live a free and easy life, away from all worries.

Well, I didn't, right off. I got out the color camera and my note and record books, to traipse the paths, looking for new blooms to record and photograph. And straightway met another tragedy.

One of the new iris set out last year is Sheriffa. This is a hybrid, not well known around here. It had bloomed and something had broken off the bloom—the first one I had ever seen. The color is a deep, rich violet and the large flowers are lovely.

May 18 Worked new strawberry bed, early vegetables, and some of the roses. Maybe this doesn't sound like big news, but it is a victory in the annual battle.

May 19 Aided by Donald, began the main vegetable garden this afternoon—two weeks late because of that rain. I got in the planting of sweet corn. I put several hybrids, which will mat at different times, to give a suc sion of corn coming on. As usua used a pinch of seed disinfectan protect corn against damping

May 20 This has been my "ha and hobble" day—an annual fair. Happy in the beginning, cause at last, sun has turned wa as well as bright.

First came the mums. On bed Donald had prepared, I pu two bales of peatmoss, and the where I ruined my back, lift and hauling them on the wh barrow. Anyhow, I scattered peat over the bed and worke into the topsoil with the cultiva Mums thrive in peatmoss.

I set my mum plants down th to four inches deep. As soon planted I watered them in, w water in which I had dissol plant food to give them a qu start. Tomorrow I'll pull dry over the damp spaces.

Back in the vegetable garde put out six rows of bush bean Keystonian, Logan, and Tend pod. Then two rows of those mix glads. Here I ruined my hand, a used a big seven-inch trowel to those bulbs down five to six inch That trowel handle wore a blister. In setting out glads, I not use any plant food. I wait ur spikes begin to form, then mak side application. This is my la man's way, but recent resear vindicates it.

This became hobble day wh the supper bell rang late and started toward the house. I h plumb ruined my anatomy, so could barely stagger in.

May 21 First chore was an arg ment with myself as to whether should weed the iris or hoe ne strawberries. Strawberries won.

May 22 Saturday—and time t make a belated planting of ou main crop of potatoes. Donald re belled at my boondoggle way doing this and lit out for town. H came back with a double shove and rigged this onto the back o our garden tractor.

less time than I could cut the ces of seeds, he had the furrows de. We planted five rows. He de another furrow and we nted a row of glads—and no sters on my hand. Still another row, six inches or so deep—and planted a row of dahlias here. First, I laid the dahlia tubers in bottom. Then I sprinkled a n band of plant food around ch tuber, out four to six inches m it. Al Eggert, our local dahlia thority, says this is the way to do for it gets the plant food down in e ground, where it will be ready en root growth reaches it. Final detail was to pull about an ch of soil carefully over each ber. After the dahlia plants come , as I cultivate, I'll fill up the nch gradually.

May 25 Looking out an east win-w, I did see an old familiar end. That good red peony, herry Hill. Later, as I walked ound, I saw a half dozen other d peony friends, here for their nnual visit.

After I had labored a bit this te p.m., I paused to garner some ddibles and take them to the house. hen reported to Maggie in the ving room.

"The asparagus and radishes are n the kitchen sink," says I, "and he strawberries are in my tummy."

"How many berries?" asked laggie. "Three," says I. Thus was eported the news that the first of he season had been found.

May 27 "Now you hurry out and plant the muskmelons and Lima eans," I says to Donald. "I want o make a trip downtown to the ed stores and a nursery or two."

"I think I had better go along with you," says Donald. So off we went. On our trip I picked up some more perennial seeds, a packet of Luther Burbank zinnias I had neglected to get earlier, and our year's supply of all-purpose dust for the roses.

Tied a big red bandanna over my nose and gave the roses a good dusting. It made me look like a train robber but prevented a bad case of dust sniffles

Back home, I planted the muskmelons in hills six feet apart and about six seeds to a hill, which will be thinned to three plants. Under the hills first however, I buried some plant food. Then on to Lima beans, which I never plant until after ground is dry and warm and nights are warm, too.

By now it was practically dark. But wind had died down. So loaded the duster and gave the roses a good dusting. To avoid sniffles from the dust, I tied a big red bandanna over my nose. It made me look like a train robber but avoided trouble.

May 29 First hybrid tea rose is out—Pink Princess. And sweet corn is up, and crows are flying over. So made oration to David and soon after, heard him driving nails. He was making a scarecrow. Then he hiked back, carrying the frame and dragging along on the ground an old coat of mine.

At the moment, this scarecrow has no hat. Mebbe I should nail on my garden panama and buy myself a new one. He did tie a red bandanna to one arm. The color and motion of this bothers crows more than the rest of the scare.

May 30 Outdoor news is that I picked toward a quart of strawberries. And Oriental poppies made bold spots of color. I wish I had more poppies. But somehow I neglect to set out more at the proper time, in late summer. Maybe the fairies should drop in about July 31 and do it for me.

News Notes: The American Iris Society has scheduled its annual meeting for May 14-16 in Portland, Oregon. Tours will be made to nearby iris centers. For details, write to Sam Y. Caldwell, Secretary, 444 Chestnut Street, Nashville 10, Tennessee.

Members of the American Rose Society will hold their spring meeting at Chattanooga, Tennessee. Tentative dates are May 12-15. Write to Dr. R. C. Allen, Secretary, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, for more information.

May 16-22 is Garden Week in Illinois.

Yet the evidence so far shows that parathion is probably no more toxic in its way than is nicotine sulfate. Even grandmothers use nicotine sulfate with no more precaution than they would use in handling strong tea, and continue to live on. We do hear of cases of nicotine sulfate poisoning, but very, very few considering its highly poisonous character. I know operators who apply parathion without protective equipment. I certainly wouldn't do so myself, but it has been done.

Rose growers often cut their stock for market the second day after fumigating with parathion. They handle roses by the thousands. None has reported any symptoms of poisoning yet.

It is possible that after we learn its limitations, we can get by with such simple precautions as wearing a good dust mask, and applying the material to the windward of the plants being treated.

In the meantime, there are no surpluses of parathion: the demand by experienced commercial operators far exceeds the supply. Manufacturers are glad to pass up the amateur market temporarily until they need the business. At present, the smallest package of dust available is 25 pounds (enough to treat about an acre) , priced at $13.50.

Parathion does not seem to be particularly injurious to plants. It has caused some yellowing and dropping of leaves in rose houses, but usually at low temperatures. It should not be used at below 70 degrees—75 to 85 is better.

Parathion will probably never be a household spray, in spite of its ability to kill DDT-resistant flies. For household pests, including the tough German roach, Chlordane does an equally good job, has much longer residual effect, and is presumably less toxic to humans. Too, an overdose of parathion indoors is highly irritating to the eyes: it makes lights flash in front of your pupils.

Certainly parathion is an insecticide to watch closely. If approved for home use, it'll answer some of our toughest problems of insect control, and do a better job for less money, and, what is more important, with fewer strokes of the arm-breaking duster.

Grow iris

stone may be worked in to advantage.

Finally top off the bed with your remaining unfertilized soil mixed half and half with compost, and you're ready for planting. The general idea is that if the heavily enriched soil doesn't actually touch the rhizomes but is down where the roots can reach it, all will be well.

How far apart? A two-foot interval between plants is desirable, but many growers use closer spacing for a good immediate effect. One of the best plans is to set three roots of the same variety in a triangle, 8 to 12 inches apart; then move along about a yard before placing another group of three. This will give you nice clumps.

Irises are hardy and need no special cold-weather care in most of the country. But in northernmost areas they'll appreciate a loose winter coat of straw, excelsior, or the like—something that doesn't pack. Wherever there's much freezing and thawing, watch newly set rhizomes, for they are sometimes heaved right out of the ground. Firm them back into place.

Bloom on your own irises is always a thrill. For maximum enjoyment, practice a bit of showmanship. Keep the beds extra clean at this time. Make each clump a "production"; if several stalks come up crowded together, do a little gentle tilting and inconspicuous staking if necessary to achieve balance and uncover all of the flowers. Go through the garden each morning and pick off all withered blooms. And, of course, invite in the neighbors for a look. All year you've been a backstage manager; now with the curtain up, you're director. Watch your iris show become the hit of the season!

dinarily, it's best to let clippings lie on the lawn where they form nulch over grass roots. However, a grass catcher should be used if re are weeds like crabgrass going to seed, or if the grass is so g and lush that clippings might mat down and smother grass plants

Where grass grows close to a tree you'd better lay the mower down and do a bit of hand-work. A pair of grass shears aren't as easy to operate as a mower, but they'll do a quick, neat job if you keep them sharp. Don't attempt to mow right up to a tree. You'll damage the bark of the tree and possibly harm the mower

Here's one way to get away from hand clipping. Build a brick or rock curb flush with the ground around the tree. Remove a little soil inside and fill with gravel to discourage grass and weeds. Pea gravel would be neater and less likely to scatter than the coarse gravel used above

Cash for your recipe

Win $10 with a holiday bread or stuffed-bird recipe. That's first prize in our new recipe contest. Twenty runners-up will receive $3 each, so you have 21 chances to win a cash prize.

The first-prize recipe and seven others will be published in the December Cooks' Round Table.

All you do is write down your recipe according to the easy rules below, after reading our tips on what kind of recipes to send.

Holiday breads include yeast breads, raised rolls, quick breads, muffins, or biscuits—just so they are festive and special. You may want to send a recipe for holiday fruit bread full of raisins, chopped citron, and maraschino cherries.

Or your favorite may be a spice loaf fragrant with cinnamon, a coffee swirl glazed with frosting. Maybe a nut-filled English tea ring, poppy-seed rolls, or Danish pastry is holiday tradition at your house. Send in the recipe!

In the quick-to-make line, your Christmas table may boast nut bread, Kaffee Kuchen, or cranberry muffins. Whatever your favorite Christmas bread is, write down the recipe.

Stuffed birds include turkeys, chickens, geese, ducks. Give us your best stuffing recipe, tell how you dress and roast the bird.

Think a bit about all the stuffings you've made. Was the best a bread stuffing bolstered with raisins, pecans, mushrooms, oysters, or chopped parsley? Or was it a breadless stuffing based on cream-style corn, browned sausage and apples, or wild rice?

Send us your top-notch combination today.

And remember, the winners of these 21 prizes will receive the Better Homes & Gardens Certificate of Endorsement, and six copies of the endorsed recipe.

1. Write your recipe clearly on one side of the paper. Send but one recipe at a time and mark it, "December Holiday Breads" or "December Stuffed Birds."
2. Print your full name and address clearly in upper right corner of recipe page.
3. Give measurements in level cups, tablespoons, and teaspoons, never in heaping or scant measurements.
4. Be sure to specify in your recipe the brand names of the nationally known food products you use as ingredients—products available everywhere. We must know them so we can test your recipe with the same brands you use.

Life with Mother

Father was trying to prove to Mother that she wasn't enough of a mathematician to handle the family finances.

"I'll give you an example you can understand," he said. "How long does it take you to cook that new cereal we all liked so much this morning?"

"You mean the Grape-Nuts Wheat-Meal? Oh, that cooks in just three and a half minutes—it's very fast."

"How many servings could you cook in an hour?"

"About twelve?" she guessed.

"No, about seventeen," said Father. "Now do you see what I'm trying to tell you?"

"Of course," said Mother brightly. "We're having company for breakfast!"

This month's winners

Cook-of-the-Month is Sally Gibson of Des Moines, Iowa. Her Gold and White Cake is tender and moist; the delicately lemon-flavored golden icing is made special with a sprinkling of coconut. It's high: three layers.

A prizewinning yellow cake is Mrs. W. S. Smith's Lemon Layer Cake, extra easy and economical. Mrs. C. D. Lemmert's Maple-Nut Cake was voted by us as good as maple-nut ice cream. Both cake and frosting are maple-flavored.

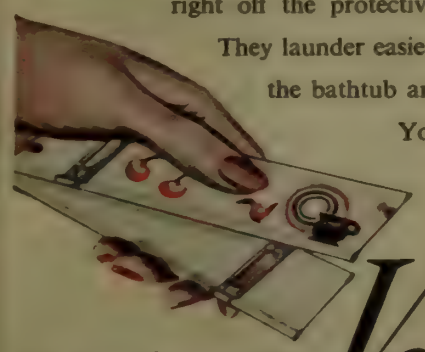
Completing our star cake quartette is Mrs. Odus Harvey's Chocolate Layer Cake. This recipe won first prize at a county fair, Mrs. Harvey reports. Try it and you too will applaud the rich red color, the fine texture, the full devil's food flavor.

May vegetables take a bow on page 76 in the form of Asparagus Parmesan, Golden Carrots, Spring Vegetables a la King, and Peas in Patty Shells.

Mrs. Anderson suggests you broil asparagus topped with cheese-egg sauce. Mrs. Boileau makes carrots interesting by glazing them and serving with orange slices.

Mary Lally combines asparagus tips, peas, carrots, and green onions in mushroom-dotted a la king. Theresa Lessmeister serves peas and green onions in a sauce, subtly tart with lemon juice and sour cream.

Names of the 20 cooks who just missed first prize in this contest are listed below.



Honor Roll

Mrs. J. C. Anderson, Dallas, Texas.
Mrs. Burdette Boileau, San Marino, California.
Mrs. Ted Boye, St. Paul, Minnesota.

You'll never tire of FABRIC venetian blinds!

Privacy when you want it . . . and light, too even when Sunchek slats are completely closed . . . softly tinted, natural daylight . . . filtered through translucent fabric slats . . . preserving the decor of your home exactly as you planned it. No wonder that thousands of American homeowners will never again "board up" their windows with old fashioned, light-blocking blinds . . . not with cheerful Suncheks available to give them venetian blind smartness and daylight too. Sunchek is the sensationally modern blind that has the decorative world in a flutter of excitement . . . because, now, fabric blends with fabric at your windows to give you the kind of smartness that you can live with through the years. Gone, too, is the drudgery of venetian blind care. Loose dirt slides right off the protective plastic coating of Sunchek's fabric slats. They launder easier than your curtains . . . a quick sudsing in the bathtub and out they come . . . fresh, clean and crisp. Your favorite store can supply custom made Suncheks in plain colors or in gay, hand blocked prints for your kitchen or bath.

Before you buy any other venetian blind, may we send you a FREE sample of this new fabric slat completed the decorating and furnishing of three rooms on a total budget of less than $800.

You can see what the Claytors spent and what they saved by examining their itemized budget on page 295. They weren't "penny-wise," though, to the point of foolishly sacrificing quality for economy on their important buys. They spent their new-furniture money wisely to get good quality in pieces they'll want to use for a lifetime.

When Dave made the built-in radio you've seen in the Claytors' living room, he had an old radio cabinet left over. He put the mechanism of Betty's treadle sewing machine in half the cabinet, and gave it an electric motor. Then to make it serve as a corner dressing table he added a triangular plywood top and Betty finished it with a chintz skirt.

A great part of the Claytors' budget was invested in pieces ferreted out of secondhand stores and rummage shops. "The kind of antiques the museums don't pine for," say Dave and Betty Claytor. They laugh about their make-do's, but Dave and Betty have turned the trick with style on a budget.

BEFORE Johnny's room needed organization. More floor space for Johnny Claytor seemed impossible in an 8 by 12 room. Windows were another problem; the room needed all the light it could get. Both problems were solved inexpensively

AFTER

Floor space was saved with a box spring and mattress unit. The Claytors skipped window curtains altogether, settled for these green awning tops for the windows, and painted the ceiling and scallops in the same rich green of the awnings. Old cedar chest makes excellent box for toys corner all afternoon to keep anybody from knowing it. I should have capitalized on it and been the life of the party. I had to be a college freshman before I could telephone a girl for a date without acute misery, and then it was my roommate—not my parents—who taught me.

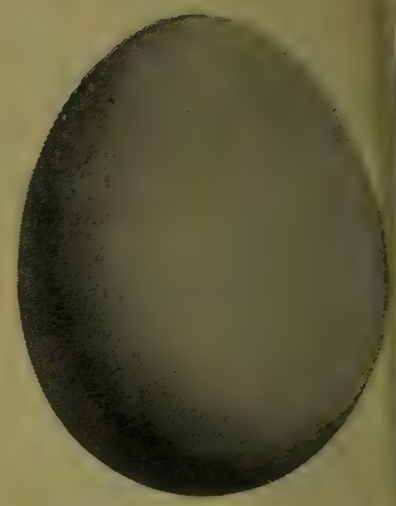
But my Mom and Pop, rest their souls, were acutely R.F.D. He took her to their wedding riding behind him on the bare back of a mule. You and I in this mid-century have no such alibi. We know! We have at least the opportunity to acquire reasonable social presence, and we have sense enough to realize that it is important to our way of life. Your sons and my daughters simply must be at ease socially, or they will suffer not only in courtship but in all personal and business encounters. It can cost a boy a sweetheart, or a job, to be awkward at speaking with strangers. It can send a girl to her pillow racked with tears.

"Let's rehearse," I overheard Mom coaching, in our Rosemary's room one recent afternoon. I knew Rosemary was keyed up for her first dance. "Now just sit still when a boy approaches you. Pretend I'm the boy. Now I come to you. No matter if I am shy, or bold, or ill at ease or whatever, you be gracious, honey. The girl doesn't stand, unless it is an older person such as the chaperon or a teacher or a parent. Just look up and smile a greeting. Never an affected smile, but a real one. And a real smile shows more in the eyes than in the lips—did you know that? It actually originates in what we call the heart. Feel the friendly welcome, and your smile will show it automatically. No put-on; no trying to be anything but the sweet, lovely person that you are. When he asks for a dance, say 'Thank you, I'd love it' or something similar. Or 'Oh, I'm engaged for this one, but I'd love to later.' Listen to how the older girls do, if you like, and take some cues from them; the girls you admire, not the show-offs."



I can imagine you talking in equally common-sense earnestness to your son. I know that such coaching works.

We must not force adult standards of society on our teen-agers. You and I are, shall we say, dignified, mature, wise. We are content to sit out an evening at gin rummy or bridge, enlivened with nothing more than my sparkling wit and your even more clever repartee. We can stand it for hours.

But do you know what the reaction of the high-school crowd is to such a program? It's "Nuts! Let's do something!"

That is the feeling, also, of the kids from 10 to 13. It is almost as strong among those scholarly esthetes, the collegians. In short, let's do something is the slogan of youth. Adequate courtship requires that both the male and the female be Goose? or Nest?

WHICH WILL YOU HAVE ?

For some reason, the goose egg stands for zero . . . nothing.

The nest egg, however, stands for a tidy sum of money, set aside for your own or your children's future.

It's hardly necessary to ask you which you'd prefer.

But it is necessary to ask yourself what you are doing to make sure you don't end up with a goose egg instead of a nest egg ten years from now.

The simple, easy, and obvious thing to do is to buy U. S. Savings Bonds. Buy them regularly, automatically, on a plan that pays for them out of the month-to-month income you make today.

Millions of Americans have adopted this practically painless way to save up a nest egg for the needs and wants of the future.

In 10 years they get back $40 for every $30 invested in U. S. Savings Bonds—bonds as safe and solid as the Statue of Liberty.

There's a special Savings Bond Plan for you. Ask your employer or banker about it today . . . and get started now.

Automatic saving is sure saving—adept at suggesting things to do. Such a course of physical doing is an escape valve for pent-up sexual energy, even if the youngsters don't know it; it is protection for your son and my daughter against that bugaboo, desire.

Dancing is important doing. Dancing is physical, strenuous, and exhilarating. It is socially correct whether it be in shorts and jeans on the school tennis court or high-hat in satin and tux at the country club. Wherefore I must teach my three to dance well, or at least encourage them in it (truth is, they have taught me!). And if you veto dancing for your children, you had better supply something in its stead.

Remember that a boy has a driving urge to be near a girl when he's courting, and that can be arranged in skating, skiing, hiking, or charades; it can be done most safely where physical exercise is reasonably steady and in the company of other youths. If card or table games are on the agenda, limit them to an hour and break in with some kind of whoop-de-do; junior and junior miss will have a more balanced love affair if they have laughed hilariously, if they have pushed each other, played pranks, lifted the roof.

The lovely thought of a hero under a balcony softly serenading a heroine in the moonlight has its place—in theory, and in fiction. But if a gent came serenading one of my long-legged daughters, she'd listen dreamily for about 10 minutes. Then he'd better announce that he has two saddled horses out front and how's for a midnight ride. Or—my guess is—she'd toss him not a red, red rose, but a bucket of cold, cold water. She is too stuffed with vitamins to enjoy a languid courtship or be given to vaporous faintings. I think most modern youngsters are. Our adult role is to make sure they're not hoydenish, to make it clear that romance can be refined as well as strenuous.

The whole matter boils down to the fact that you and I as parents are destined for a stimulating life. We faced our own romance problems, then we begat some more! We'll still be watching and hoping and guiding and praying over young lovers even if we get to be great-grandparents; my mother kept it up until she was long past 80.

Would you have it changed? Would you alter one detail of this, the most divine life plan of all?

Indoor-outdoor family room

Windows bring terrace

Picture windows tie an indoor-outdoor family room into one big recreation spot. When there's informality and comfort both inside and out, plenty of windows can tell the tale. Big windows mean more sunshine inside, too, and make even the smallest family room seem bigger and brighter.

Here, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Wolin, Des Moines, are two big windows to bring outdoor living inside. At one side of the room is a tremendous picture window. At the end of the room is a semicircular bay window. Look over these pictures and see if you don't agree that big windows bring terrace fun indoors.

Just a step outside the family-room door is a huge stone fireplace where the clan can gather for Sunday supper or the youngsters can hold a wiener roast. Flagstone terrace like this is easy to tidy up after the fun. Fence and trees around the back of the fireplace assure family privacy

Through the shops

Our grandmothers knew a lot of things. One of them was to use a pair of scissors like these to cut buttonholes. A setscrew between the handles accurately gauges the length of slit you're cutting. Cut buttonholes from the tiniest up to 1⅛" long. Scissors themselves are 5" long, of forged steel, polished smooth. Ppd., $2.50. Foster Products, Inc., 179 Wooster St., New York 12, New York.

Place mats of sturdy, long-lasting reinforced plastic come in gay gingham-like plaid, red and white on one side, blue and white on the other. Mats lie flat to the table, protect the surface from heat, and deaden the clatter of silver or china. Each mat is 17"x10⅝", wipes clean with a damp cloth. Set of four reversible mats, $2.95, in stores or ppd. Grandmother Stover's, 1504 W. First Ave., Columbus 12, Ohio.

Water pitcher of generous size (2½ quarts) and almost unbreakable plastic construction has a special feature to make you like it: It can't drip! We've tried various liquids in it, but not one of them makes the pitcher dribble. Bubble-light, the pitcher has an ice guard and a comfortable handle; comes in sparkling red. Pour-Rite Pitcher, $1.49, ppd. Miles Kimball Co., 25 Algoma Blvd., Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

Highly mysterious is the only thing to call the way this knife opens. The 3-inch pearly handle encloses a steel blade that appears only when the knife is properly held. Closes as mysteriously and can't be pried open. The directions for the secret are included. Junior can mystify his friends, and anyone will find it a fine pocketknife. Mystery Knife. $1.35, ppd. Robert Kellogg Co., 80 Hillman St., Springfield 2, Massachusetts.

Your own name and address printed on gummed plastic tape serves as the return for letters and packages, labels books, umbrellas, sports goods so they come home to you if lost. Tape is ¾ inch wide, your name and address is printed every 1", in black on light blue, yellow, silver, or white. With the dispenser, a 500-inch roll of Personalized Scotch Tape is $3.50, ppd. Transparent Products Co., Inc., 324 E. 24th St., New York, New York.

If every meal for Baby means more laundry, try an Eat-N-Vent High Chair Apron in pink or blue. It slips over Baby's head and arms; long strings tie around chair legs to keep Baby from standing up; a deep pocket at bottom slips over the tray so spilled food stays on the apron instead of dropping to the chair seat. In stores or ppd., plastic film, $1.69; or plasticized cotton, $1.89. Carrier & McKewen, 305-7 W. Redwood St., Baltimore 1, Maryland.

A dry-frying griddle cooks hotcakes, steaks, and chops without any grease due to its special frying surface. Or cook the breakfast bacon and eggs all at once on the generous surface—19½"x10½"—big enough to fit over two burners for even distribution of heat. Either side is usable, depending upon whether or not you want the meat juices to run off. Aluminum Dry-Fryer is $4.95, ppd. Frawley Brothers, 118 S. 41st St., Birmingham, Alabama.

Wall plaque of delicately patterned Sirrocowood in the form of a rose supports a copper planter for your favorite bit of greenery. The plaque is finished in white, high-lighted with gold; 9½ inches high; planter is 3½ inches across the top. To brighten a dull spot on your wall; the planter plaque is $3.25, ppd., or a pair for $6.25. Ellison's, Box 284, Orange, New Jersey.

A Cracker-Stacker is, obviously, designed to stack crackers. We mean, stack them to serve with or without (we'll take ours with) cheese. You know how crackers slide off the plate and scatter crumbs on the table and rug. But this little holder keeps any kind of crackers in line for neat serving. Patterned after a French Provincial design, the Cracker-Stacker is blonde mahogany; $2.50, ppd. from Walter Drake, Colorado Springs 2, Colorado.

Wind-up toys used to delight us when we were kids. And now they're back again, to delight our children with their realistic antics. Here's Boby the Monkey, dressed in vivid colors and pedaling a bicycle around in frantic circles. He's 5" high to the top of his red pillbox cap, and all made of metal; winds up with a key. Boby is $1.75, ppd. from Q. T. Novelty Co., Box 54, Murray Hill Sta., New York 16, New York.

Currier and Ives prints strike a nostalgic note in everyone's heart. Here they're faithfully reproduced on china tiles, hollowed at the center to serve as ash trays or coasters. Each tile is 4½" square, with the scene hand-colored under the glaze. Eight famous and favorite subjects are available at $1.25 each, ppd. Crane's, 419 E. 57th St., New York 22, New York.

The fashions our great-grandmas wore are sweetly portrayed in Godey-type prints. Actually, they're illustrations from well-preserved French fashion magazines published in the middle 1800's. No two are just alike; but in all, the pastel colorings blend pleasantly with delicacy of design. Sizes are about 10"x14", may vary slightly. Fashion Prints, $3 a pair, ppd. Paris Etching Society, 36 W. 47th St., New York 19, New York.

Gay little animal characters may romp across Junior's T-shirt or overalls, trim his sweater and cap or keep him company on his pillow-case at night. They can be used to cover a mend, too, on small garments. The figures are cut from washable, fast-color felt in bright reds, blues, pinks, and white. The largest is 2 inches tall. A set of 12 Felties, 6 different figures, is $1, ppd. Janss, 725 Rahway Ave., Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Card-table cover of durable plasticized cloth is held taut by elastic bands at corners. One side is plain, the other printed with checker or backgammon design, your choice. Color combinations are green and tan, cherry-red and gray, chartreuse and green, plum and tan; with 30 checkers and a pair of dice in harmonizing colors. Twin-Top set is $4.95 in stores or ppd. Vagn Larsen Co., Inc., 849 First Ave., New York 17, New York.

Strictly utilitarian, as an ash tray should be for use in kitchen, garage, workshop, or bathroom, this model attaches to the wall on a chrome-plated panel. The tray with two grooves to hold cigarettes, lifts out of the rim for cleaning. Useful wherever a table model is impractical, the Wall Type Ash Tray is 50c, ppd., from O. Johnson Mfg. Co., 8600 Willow Springs Rd., Willow Springs, Illinois.

The only juke box we've ever wanted to own is this realistically colored plastic one, 8 inches high, that plays a gay tune whenever you drop a coin into the slot. The clear front shows the Swiss-made works, tiny metal drum with strategically placed pegs that twang thin steel fingers to produce the music. Fascinating to watch, and encouraging to the banking of small change. Juke Box Bank, $5.50, ppd. Davis', 14 E. 3rd St., Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Sassy Duck has captured every heart in our office with his flirtatious ways. He's made of brilliant yellow plastic and to make him waddle across the floor, all you do is push him gently. Off he goes, waddling fatly, rolling his eyes and quacking all at the same time. Supposedly for Baby, but Baby won't have a chance with any grownups around. Sassy Duck is 6½ inches long; $2.25, ppd. Randel Associates, 32-03 Bergenline Ave., Union City, New Jersey.

THE MAN NEXT DOOR

We've raised our goal for outdoor meals this year: 150 from May through October. (I feel safer now with a mosquito helmet to protect me from bees and yellow jackets.) But when it comes to carrying the food outdoors—who knows?

"If a man knows enough to drain his bacon on brown paper," says Phyllis Gowan crisply, tossing out several burnt rashers, "he thinks he's a world champion cook. But now that bacon costs less, let him have his fun!"

My neighbor in the duplex ex-mansion read a book about the ancient Romans and has taken to lounging in his bathtub. . . . But since he dozed off and almost drowned, his wife forces him to use a timer that rings a bell after 20 minutes.

I've taken to keeping all the directions and guarantees for brave-new-world gadgets in the house in one loose-leaf notebook. . . . Now, if I can find the notebook in a pinch, I can always ascertain that the guarantee has just expired.

Could it be that girls learn in psychology how to make a man feel guilty every time one of the electrical appliances goes haywire? Or does a male naturally feel that he's responsible for all the sins of machinery? (And probably he is!)

When I had the hiccoughs as a boy, all it took was 10 swallows of water to stop 'em. Our 9-year-old claims that this cure won't work for him; he needs 20 swallows of pineapple malted milk. (And won't take a teaspoonful of sugar soaked in vinegar as a substitute!)

Nothing pleases a mother so much as to be able to wear her daughter's dresses, even if it means daughter can wear hers, too. . . . But mother merely gets a try-on; daughter takes Mom's new frocks off to college.

An amazing amount of kissing hello and good-bye at parties has become more fashionable than a handshake, in certain circles in our town. Even among people none too friendly. . . . In fact, often the only public non-kissers are stray wives and husbands suspected of a little private smooching.

Most of our townspeople fear it's beyond their depth to attempt to discuss his science with a plumber. But I notice little such hesitancy when a layman wants to argue any medical topic, from dandruff to surgery, with a hapless doctor.

One of my favorite dainties is the scrapings of scrambled egg from the sides of a skillet, but somehow my wife pours water into it two times out of three before I can scan the morning headlines and duck into the kitchen.

In self-defense I've hugged one or two pet causes to my bosom, so I can sick 'em on people who try to sideswipe me with their crusades. . . My strongest defense against planned parenthood and the city manager plan, for example, is my fiery enthusiasm for world government.

With a strong outburst of mild unenthusiasm, I've egged my wife into selling her newest (and most expensive) hat to her dearest friend at cost. . . . The latter's husband gave me a dirty look or two, but with wives' hats it's every man for himself. ➡

When my dream girl and I pack for vacation, I always remind her that matter how many garments she tote she'll wear only her favorites, the on calculated to draw envious glances. (B how a girl likes to fill up a hotel closet!)

"If I were a radio sponsor," says L Gowan, dialing off with the air of a man gi ing $100,000 worth of free advice, "I'd allo nothing on my programs that I wouldn't a mire or enjoy in a rival's program!"

My daughter has accepted demurely h distinction of being the first child to infli major damage on our family car. (She say she owes it all to a two-year head start o Junior.)

You're tempted to frame your mar riage certificate in solid gold when: You wife avers your increasingly nake brow makes you look like a man of dis tinction. . . . Your husband command you to slow down, no matter how mess the house gets. . . . A glimpse of you daughter in an evening gown remind you of the first time you ever took you wife to a formal dance. . . . One day yo catch your so-grown-up son off guard and discover he's sentimental about th family life and likes family picnics. . . After dinner your youngest turns off al the living-room lights for a family pow wow before the fireplace flicker. . . Your mother-in-law's dearest chum's son in-law reveals that she's secretly proud o her own son-in-law, now and then. . . At a party you catch your husband look ing at you as if he hadn't seen you com pletely yet. . . . Inadvertently you dream girl reveals that she's still as pleased as you are that you pulled the wool over her eyes and induced her to say yes; and you conclude you didn't relinquish your freedom too cheaply after all.

How to spot a Happy Home

WHEN you come across this tidy traveler taking its ease in a driveway, you can be sure of several things.

That the youngsters' eyes are bright with the bubbling excitement of having this envied new Buick join the family group.

That the lady of the house is doubly blessed — with the pleasure that's in the smartest automobile lines of the day and with driving made beautifully easy by Dynaflow Drive.†

That the Mister is pleased to the button-popping point at the vast store of brilliant performance in that valve-in-head engine with its instant, thrilling lift of Fireball power.

That the whole family is beaming at the soft, buoyant and ever-level ride of all-coil springing—the steadiness and safety of extra-wide rims—the comfort of open-car visibility provided by a higher and wider windshield set in narrower corner posts.

Even the Family Budget is happy — for doesn't all this level-striding bigness and brawn and beauty come at a price that spells Bargain with a capital B these days?

Your Buick dealer will be glad to show you that it does. And he'll take your order on a delivery basis that in itself makes mighty happy listening!

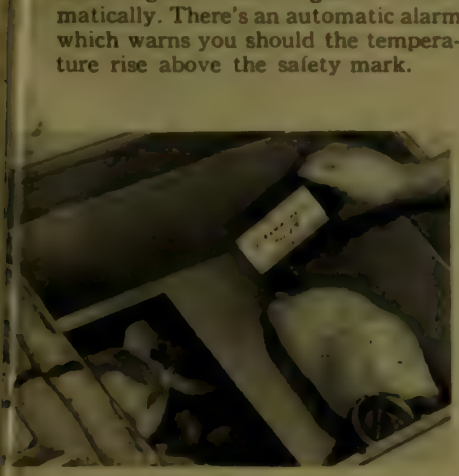
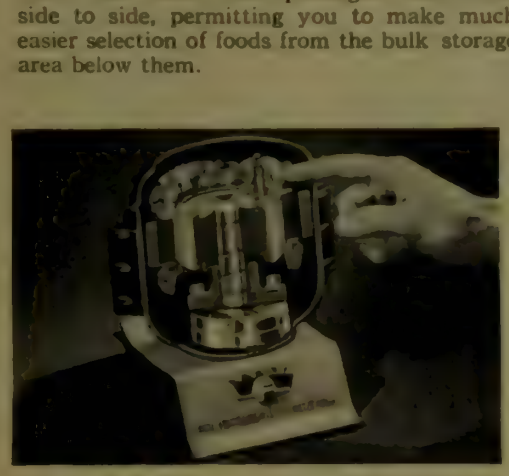
Want to know dozens of ways a home freezer can simplify meal-making for you?

Ask your Frigidaire Dealer to show you how to save yourself time and work with this great new freezer from the makers of America's No. 1 Refrigerator





New counter-balanced lid lifts easily—and a light in the lid goes on automatically. There's an automatic alarm which warns you should the temperature rise above the safety mark.

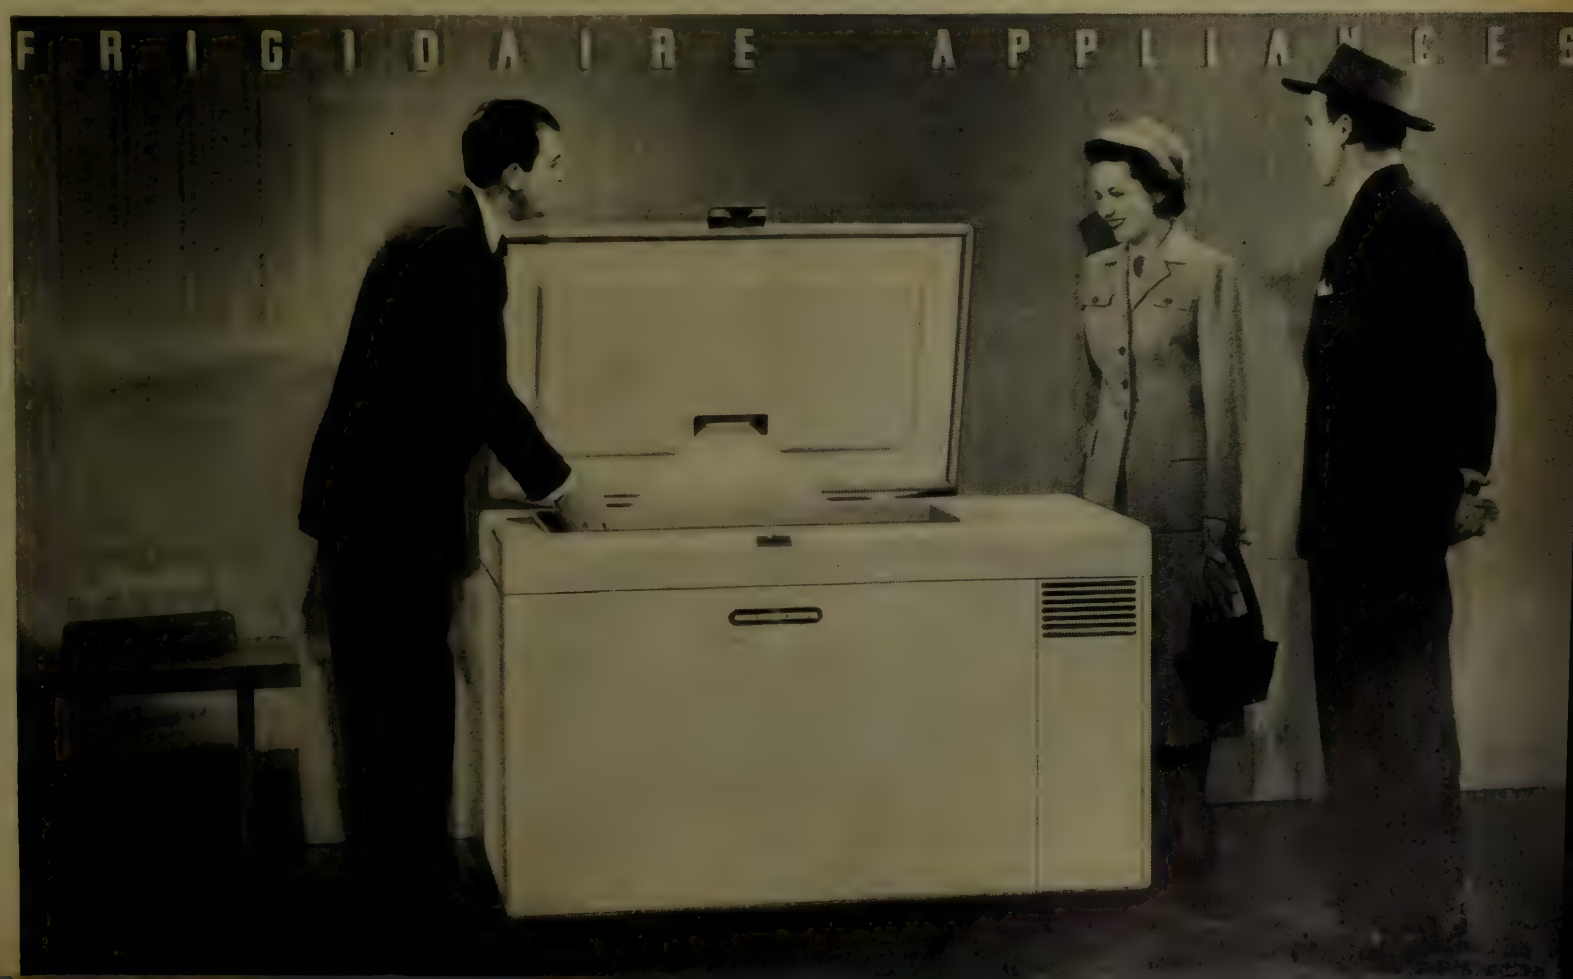
Two Roomy Storage Baskets—to hold meats, fruits and other small packages—slide from side to side, permitting you to make much easier selection of foods from the bulk storage area below them.

Special freezing shelf quick-freezes foods before you store them in other parts of the freezer. Cooling coils around all four walls and bottom assure constant cold through freezer.

The famous Meter-Miser—sealed in steel and oiled for life—uses a minimum of current. It's the quiet, precision-built refrigerating mechanism that's proved itself by performance in millions upon millions of Frigidaire products.

It's a wonderful short-cut to quicker, easier meals and better eating, too—the brand new Frigidaire Home Freezer. You can shop and cook in quantity for a number of meals at one convenient time—everything from soup to pie or cake—then freeze the extra portions. When you're ready to serve them, just heat and eat!

You can squeeze, freeze and store gallons of fruit juice—always have on hand a party-size supply of ice cubes or ice cream—store up short-season fruits and vegetables—keep bread and sandwiches fresh as when they're made—stock up on ready-frozen foods! You'll discover countless other time-work-and-money-saving uses for your new freezer—and how simple it is to prepare foods for frozen storage.



Smartly styled by the famous designer, Raymond Loewy, this beautiful new 8.4 cu. ft. Planning makes terrace meals less work

Photographs: George de Gennaro

When the hinged shelf across the front is raised, this plan stand becomes a long barbecue table. The two broomstic supports for the shelf fit into notches cut in the end leg

Plant stand-barbecue table hugs the wall so it's out of the way when not in use. Flowers grow in copper-lined boxes, fitted into the top. Three sawhorse legs hold stand steady

For quick summer snacks, try this handy bar between terrace and kitchen. Even a temporary, removable shelf will make a window into a snack bar. For family meals, the bar becomes a pass-through from the kitchen to terrace

Eating on your terrace needn't be a complicated ceremonial with Dad bringing out tables, Brother setting up chairs, and Sis or Mother carting food and dishes half a block. With planning you can locate your terrace near the kitchen—and maybe fix a pass-through from kitchen to terrace—so serving will be easy. Weatherproof furniture can stand outside all summer long, rain or shine, and be ready to use on a moment's notice. You may even be able to work out an efficient eating arrangement like this barbecue-plant stand or window snack bar to make terrace meals less work.

Things you can learn from a strawberry box... about choosing the right refrigerator!

Ever have plump, perfect strawberries turn moldy overnight? Well, food wastes like this are prevented in the Admiral Dual-Temp!

The sunshine-like rays of an ultra violet Sterilamp retard mold and bacteria, and purify the air!

It's a new kind of refrigeration so far advanced you can put foods away uncovered! Even cheese and cold cuts won't dry out! Even "strong" flavors won't mingle.

The Dual-Temp makes housekeeping easier too! There are no space-taking coils to be defrosted.

More than one way to save food! Yes, the Dual-Temp is really two appliances in one. The big Moist-Cold compartment is a wonderful food freshening crisper. Cool moist air keeps foods fresh longer. Built right into the Dual-Temp is an honest to goodness home freezer. It fast freezes 70 lbs. of food at 20° below zero.

See for yourself how this 2-in-1 refrigerator stores more food, yet takes no more floor space than any other. Stop in at your nearest Admiral dealer's store.

Partial overhangs shelter terraces

By Louise Price Bell

Shelter or roof over part of your terrace makes relaxing there more pleasant on days when the sun is beating down. Glass overhang in the top picture casts an interesting soft shadow over the terrace but doesn't cut off light in the adjoining rooms. The roof-type overhang in the lower picture casts some shade, and it's angled so it won't interfere with room light, either. Both overhangs help protect the terrace from wind and rain. Here's how:

Wired glass panels (each 30 by 90 inches) cast diffused shadows over the terrace of the Frank Moller home, Carmel, California. Structural beams support the glass. Windowed walls at left and right slide open so the terrace, living, and dining rooms become one big room in summer

Morley Baer

Wide roof overhang shields the Carmel home of John Konigshofer from summer sun. Clapboard and glass at the right give the terrace privacy. The end wall is an extension of the house wall; four-inch boards were mounted on it in checker fashion to make room for potted plants

How to live through

Let's be sensible about it. Your best guarantee of a saf pleasant summer is your own attitude. Unworried? Le hope so. But let it be unhurried, too.

A winter in the office isn't the best preparation in i world for a strenuous summer. So take things graduall You don't have to mow all the grass in one afternoon play 36 holes of golf the first day. If you have to go back work to get some rest, the laugh's on you.

And remember, the most dangerous hours of your who

Sun and heat

Sunburn: The sun is strong medicine, so begin with small doses—15 minutes the first day, 30 the second. Don't put all your faith in preventives and lotions. Cover up before your skin gets hot or pink. Even on hazy days the sun can blister.

Try burn ointment for mild sunburn—or petrolatum, olive oil, calamine lotion, or a paste of baking soda and water. If slightly swollen, apply gauze soaked in cold mineral oil. If blistered and sick, get medical help.

Sunstroke or heatstroke: Long, direct exposure to the sun—or to intense heat anywhere—can knock you out. Usually you have warnings: dizziness, nausea, headache, an overheated feeling. Your skin is hot and dry, your face flushed, your pulse rapid.

Ward off the sun with a hat. On very hot days, rest often. Get plenty of salt. Drink lots of water.

At first sign of trouble, lie in the shade, your head raised. Drink cool water—no stimulants. Your head needs an ice bag or cold cloths; your body should be doused repeatedly with cold water. You require a doctor.

Heat exhaustion is brought on by intense heat. Prevent it the same way as sunstroke—but it's different. Your skin is cold and clammy, your face pale, your pulse weak, your temperature low or normal. Usually you do not become unconscious.

Lie with your head low, instead of raised. Loosen clothing but keep comfortably warm. Drink a cup of strong coffee or tea, or half a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in half a glass of water. Sip water containing a teaspoonful of salt to a pint. Send for a doctor.

Bugs and bites

Mosquitoes: Spray rooms or tent or picnic areas with DDT from bug bomb or garden sprayer. Wea clothes that fit loosely except a wrists and ankles. Cover expose skin with one of new repellent containing 6-12, DMP, indalone or 448. Treat bites with bakin soda and water paste, ammoni water, or calamine lotion contain ing ½ or 1 percent phenol. D same for bee, hornet, wasp stings

Chiggers: Wear protective cloth ing. Beware of sitting in rank grass To keep chiggers off, coat you skin with DMP. Spray a little of i on the clothing you're going t wear. Wash bites with laundry soap; then apply calamine lotio or baking soda.

Ticks aren't painful but can transmit disease. In tick areas, closely inspect clothes and body for tiny brown bugs. Use hot needle o cigarette to make tick pull its probe from skin. If head stays in, dig i out. Pick up insect with tweezers or cotton; don't crush against skin. Paint wound with iodine.

Snakes: Poisonous are copperheads, rattlesnakes, coral snakes, water moccasins. If there are many where you vacation, carry a snake kit. Cover legs and arms. Be wary when climbing or sitting down.

Signs of a bite: fiery pain, one or two small punctures, rapid swelling, discoloration. Tie cloth or belt above wound, just tightly enough to make veins stand out. Loosen it one minute in every 15. Cut an X through each puncture, $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ inch deep, without hitting big blood vessels. Suck poison out for 30 minutes. If alone, walk slowly for assistance.

3 months of summer

By Herbert Yahraes

mmer will probably be spent, not in vacationland but in iving to and from it.

Below are hazards you may face this summer. If you're in strange place, the natives can put you wise to poisonous eatures and plants. Common sense will help you avoid the her hazards, away or at home.

Take along a first-aid kit, and learn how to give artificial spiration. They're good for peace of mind, even if you ver use them. Happy days!

Poisonous plants

Poison ivy can cause intense itching and fiery pain—often with swelling and blisters. Spot by leaflets—three on a stalk. Remember they may be small or large, smooth or notched. Plant may creep, climb, grow like a shrub. Injections may give temporary immunity.

After contact, wash several times with laundry soap, rinsing well with clean water. Then sponge off with rubbing alcohol. Have contaminated clothing dry-cleaned.

For relief, try one of these: (1) soap paste—let it dry on skin; (2) gauze or cloth soaked in cold solution of baking soda or Epsom salts; (3) calamine lotion with 1 percent of phenol; (4) a 5-percent solution of ferric chloride (lemon juice removes the stain it leaves on skin). For severe cases, get a doctor.

Poison oak gets its name from the shape of its three leaflets. It is a relative of poison ivy.

Poison sumac has to be treated like its kin (above). Distinguish it from common sumac by its green or white berries drooping from side of branches. You're safe if sumac has a spike of red fruit at the end.

Mushrooms: Pick them with an expert. Shun any with a frill near top of stem, a bag at bottom, and white spores dropping out of gills. Suspect poisoning if headache, nausea, diarrhea occur 6 to 12 hours after eating. Get a doctor. Go to bed; keep warm. If sure of poisoning, drink tepid water with salt or mustard—to make you vomit. Take aromatic spirits of ammonia in water, or coffee or tea.

Berries growing wild may or may not be safe to eat. In doubt? Don't.

Accidents

In the water: Don't swim alone—or when tired, overheated, or chilled—or soon after eating. Ease yourself into cold water. Come out when you start to shiver or get tired.

In trouble? Keep calm—hands and arms under water. Thrashing uses energy that could keep you afloat. Even with cramps in legs and arms, you can stay up.

When help arrives, grasp what's thrown or stretched out to you. Cling to boat till it's safe to climb or be hauled in—over the end. Don't grab rescuer.

In boats: Don't let more than one person move at a time. In rough water, point bow into wind; get weight into middle. If swamped or upset, stick with boat.

Fishing: If you get hooked deeply, push point out till you can snip it off below barb with cutting pliers.

Hiking and climbing: Be prepared for emergencies—like a night out. Wear sturdy, comfortable shoes that grip well. Remember it's often easier to get up a bad slope than down again. If you fall, let your body go limp.

Lost? Mark trail so you can at least get back to your present spot—which isn't too far from familiar territory. To walk straight, sight far ahead. Make camp before dark.

In other sports: Overstretching can strain a muscle; rest it and apply heat. A sudden wrench can sprain a joint; elevate it and use cold applications.

Cover bruises with ice bag or cold cloths. Paint scratches and cuts with merthiolate or a 2-percent solution of iodine. Have deep wounds cleaned by a doctor.

The Celotex Dealers and Builders of America join with The Celotex Corporation to bring you the THREE-KEY PLAN to

Livable, lasting homes for budget-minded families

NO QUESTION about it, housing is the nation's Number One need today. spite the tremendous number of new mes that have been built, the rapid wth of our country's population has ated the greatest demand for housing in history. Millions of families of moder- means are wondering how they can ld the homes they need and should have, health and happiness.

Yet a closer look at the situation reveals t these families need not put up with the ls of inadequate housing. There is an roach to this problem that offers new encouragement to those of average means who have the will to build a home.

We of The Celotex Corporation have studied this vital problem carefully. We have brought to bear on it the know-how gained in our 25 years of experience in lowering building costs through increasing building efficiency. We examined hundreds of house plans, conferred with leading architects and builders.

As a result of all this, one important fact stands out: Even in these days of higher prices for everything, the family of modest income can build a comfortable, beautiful, enduring home at common-sense cost. And we offer the following sound, simple Three-Key Plan as a guide.

SOME FAMOUS CELOTEX MATERIALS TO MA

Celotex Insulating Sheathing —Asphalt coated for greater moisture protection, it combines greater structural strength and better insulation, too— three vital functions at one low cost!

Celotex Insulating Lath — Makes perior base for plaster — builds insulates, at the same time, per both of these important jobs b at one low cost!

How the Celotex Three-Key Plan Can Help You

e asked a group of America's most skillful, practical hitects to design a series of quality homes at common-se cost. They were given free rein with just one im-rtant restriction: These homes must embody the proven ic principles of efficiency and economy in design and truction.

Through such advancements as improved planning that ves building time and work . . . use of Celotex quality aterials that perform two or more functions at a single ost . . . use of standard framework and millwork sizes, ese homes assure you that none of your money will go to needless frills or extravagances. They give you as-rance that you can start right now to build a substan-al, beautiful home that you will cherish all through life at a price within the means of an average family.

Key Number Two opens the way to the right materials at the right price

Top quality building materials are again available, and n ample quantities. To make sure you get the best for your money, there is no more important man to see in your community than your Celotex dealer. He can tell you exactly how to go about building the beautiful home pictured here, or several others designed for Celotex in a variety of price ranges, or still others in his own col-lection of moderate priced homes. He can give you a complete estimate of their cost and put you in touch with a reliable architect and builder.

He has a keen awareness of what's new and better in building methods and products. This man is more than just a lumber merchant today—he is the man who knows your local conditions, costs, laws, building codes. And he can tell you how to make arrangements for financing your home, too. He is the man to consult—the man in whom to place your confidence.

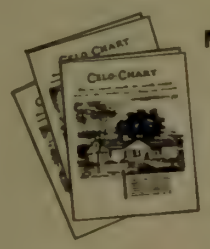
Key Number Three opens the way to beautiful modern interiors

To give the Celotex Three-Key Plan added interest to the homemaker, we have retained Helen Koues, nationally famous decorator, founder and for many years the director of Good Housekeeping Magazine's Studio of Architecture, Building and Furnishing. She shows with simple sketches how the interiors of these homes can be treated. She has provided arrangements and color scheme suggestions of modern charm and good taste, planned with efficiency and economy uppermost in mind.

This home was designed by Architect John A. Pruyn for The Celotex Corporation. One of a series of beautiful, enduring homes that can be built now at common-sense cost by families with average income.

FLOOR PLAN

YOU ALWAYS BUILD BETTER WITH CELOTEX BUILDING PRODUCTS



Your dealer knows there is no substitute for genuine Celotex quality. Only Celotex, for example, has the exclusive patented Ferox process. This makes Celotex cane fibre products proof against dry rot, termites and fungus. As a result, building experts who have examined Celotex materials used in homes over 25 years ago find them still as sound and strong as ever, still saving home owners money and trouble.

Remember—more homes are built with Celotex than with any other rigid insulation materials in the world. Whether you are building or remodeling—be satisfied with nothing less than genuine Celotex quality.

EASY WAY TO HAVE A BASEMENT PLAYROOM IN YOUR PRESENT HOME

Want to do your family a good turn? Then remodel that unused basement space into a gay, comfortable playroom that will mean hours of happiness for all. It's quick, easy, and inexpensive to do with Celotex Insulating Interior Finishes. These come in Building Board, Tile Board, or Finish Plank form, permitting a variety of design treatments for walls and ceilings. They build for strength, insulate for comfort, decorate for beauty—all at one time, at one low cost! They are ideal for turning unused basement or attic space into a bedroom, den, card room, extra rooms of all sorts. Ask your Celotex dealer or builder for full details on remodeling the low-cost Celotex way.

New Improved Pepsodent Removes FILM Amazingly!

In just 7 days – you'll have brighter teeth and fresher breath – or

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

Why FILM must be removed

1 FILM collects stains that make teeth look dull

2. FILM harbors germs that breed bad breath

3. FILM glues acid to your teeth

4. FILM never lets up—it forms continually on everyone's teeth

Now Faster Foaming! New Pepsodent Sweeps FILM Away!

New improved Pepsodent will bring a thrilling brightness to your teeth, a new freshness to your breath—or we'll return twice what you paid!

No other tooth paste can duplicate new Pepsodent's film-removing formula! It foams wonderfully—goes to work faster, fighting film: (1) Pepsodent routs discoloring stains that collect on film. (2) It checks film's "bad breath" germs that cause food particles to decay. (3) Pepsodent helps protect you from acid produced by germs in film. This acid, many dentists agree, is the cause of tooth decay. (4) Film forms continually. Remove it regularly with Pepsodent. No other tooth paste contains Irium — or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent!

Try new fast-foaming Pepsodent with Irium for 7 days. If you're not convinced it gives you cleaner breath and brighter teeth—mail unused portion of tube to Pepsodent, Division Lever Brothers Company, Dept. G., Chicago, Ill.—and you'll receive double your money back, plus postage! Offer expires August 31, 1949. Remember, for the safety of your smile, use Pepsodent twice a day—see your dentist twice a year!

TELEPHONE WIRES SHOULD BE HEARD FROM ...BUT NOT SEEN

Are you planning your new home? Then you'll want to plan for your telephones at the same time. That way you'll avoid having exposed telephone wires on handsome walls and woodwork.

All you need do is mark on your plans the places where you'll want telephones. By letting your builder know these locations beforehand, he can make the necessary provisions for concealed telephone wires while the house is being built. A few sections of pipe or tubing placed inside the walls will carry telephone wires to built-in outlets. When telephones are installed, the wires can be run through these raceways to each telephone installed.

Cures for exposed tree roots

Q A slight grade change around one of our big trees has exposed large roots leading from the trunk. The roots are undamaged but the appearance is bad. Can you suggest a simple solution? L. M. M., Indiana.

One good treatment is illustrated above. Move in enough good soil to cover the roots and grade it away from the trunk in a gentle slope. Then sod or plant grass seed to make the fill part of a gently rolling lawn.

Stanley

Even simpler, and ideal where you want a bit of planting, is this solution. Build a low rock wall around your tree and fill with fertile soil to cover roots. Plant sprigs of sedum between rocks for a quick cover for wall, and use violas, pansies, common primroses, and other flowers which do well in shade for planting inside the wall.

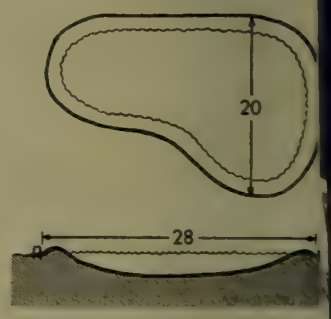
Wading pool for $19

Two working days and $19 worth of materials gave our children this pool. It costs us about 6 cents to fill it

By Kenneth A. Van Dyck

You can have a wading pool in your own back yard—for $19!



Here's how to do it: Dig a shallow hole, throw the dirt around the edge of the hole as you dig, rake it smooth, and place a canvas tarpaulin over the hole and piled dirt. Then fill it with water from your garden hose.

We built a pool that way, and found it has these advantages. It is simple and quick to construct. It is cheap. It can be enlarged or made smaller. Children can't skin their elbows or knees on it. You can restore its site to lawn with only a little effort.

It took us about six hours to dig the hole, a little longer to purchase and reshape a canvas tarpaulin ($18 from a war surplus store). To make the 20x23-foot tarpaulin fit the irregular-shaped, 28-foot long pool, we cut pieces off and added them to other places. A rubber-based adhesive (cost $1) gave us strong, waterproof joints.

Two working days after we started, the pool was being used by 15 children from the neighborhood.

To keep the pool clean, we drain the water once a week by siphoning it out with a garden hose, pull the canvas out on the grass, and wash it carefully with a hose, a broom, and mild soap or a detergent.

This is the hole over which the tarpaulin is laid to form the pool; it doesn't need to be staked. Using the earth take from the hole as a bank around the edge lets you get by with a shallower hole. You'll get a firm base by tampin

THE LOVELIEST CAKE YOU EVER BAKED!

Make it for a Bridal Party or for a Birthday; for a Wedding Anniversary, for Father's Day, or just to please some one you love.

Preparation: Have all ingredients at room temperature. Preheat oven at 375° F. Line bottoms of 2 heart-shaped pans (equivalent to two 9" round pans) with waxed paper.

Ingredients:

½ cup Swift'ning
2½ cups sifted cake flour
4 tsp. double acting baking powder (5¼ if tartrate type)
1 tsp. salt
1½ cups sugar
1 cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla
4 egg whites

Step 1: Put Swift'ning in bowl. Sift in flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add ⅔ cup of the milk, and vanilla. Beat 2 min. on medium speed of electric mixer, or by hand using 150 strokes per min. Throughout mixing keep batter scraped from sides and bottom of bowl with rubber scraper. Scrape bowl and beaters.

Step 2: Add unbeaten egg whites and remaining ⅓ cup milk. Beat for 2 additional minutes. Scrape bowl and beaters. Pour equal amounts of batter into pans. Bake about 28 minutes, or till done. Cool.

Fill and frost with 7-minute icing. Reserve a little and tint to match flowers. Edge cake with tinted frosting, using tip of a spoon. Coil ribbon around plate (hold in place with bits of tape if necessary) and tuck sweet peas, or other flowers, into loops.

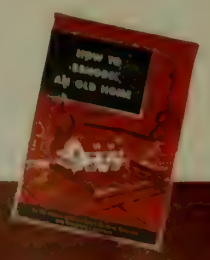
Our kitchen looks new with these bright walls



is was just an ordinary-looking kitchen until the drab, old walls l ceiling were covered with Armstrong's Monowall.®

Monowall is an ideal material for remodeling a kitchen or bath- m. It's made in big panels that go up quickly right over the old ls. The whole job can usually be done in a day or two, and you use the room right away. In a new house, Monowall can take place of plaster, and it saves repainting every few years.

Monowall keeps its bright new look because it's so easy to clean. st and dirt just can't stick to its glossy surface.

ou can choose Armstrong's Monowall from a range of clear rs in plain and tile or streamline designs. In this kitchen, both n and streamline designs were used, and even the cabinets were t with Monowall surfaces. Ask your lumber dealer for full details ut Armstrong's Monowall before you remodel.

How-to for the handy man

Keeper for card table. If you store your folded card table behind a door or against a closet wall, you need some device to keep it from falling over. A spring-type broom holder, screwed to a wall or door-frame, will do the job. You may find it necessary to spring the broom holder's jaws apart to make them fit table edge

Add a shoe cleaner. If you climb a ladder with mud on your shoes, you are inviting an accident. As a safety-first measure, mount a small corner brace on the side rail below the ladder's bottom rung or step. Use it to scrape your shoes clean before you go up. You'll lengthen the ladder's life, too, by not grinding away at the wood with dirt on your shoes

Photographs: Kenneth Murray

Silence that loose doorknob. If you have a doorknob that fits so loosely it rattles in use, you can easily silence it. Just remove the retaining screw, pull off the knob, and drop a pellet of putty or weather-stripping compound inside the knob. When you reassemble the unit, the pellet of putty will form a cushion and fill space that has let your doorknob rattle

Hammer holder for a ladder. A loose hammer lying on top of a stepladder is likely to slip off—with possibly painful results. To avoid such an accident, mount a kitchen broom holder on the side rail of your ladder. Use it to hold your hammer, screwdriver, or similar tool when you are not using it

Wipe on the glue. When you put glue on a rough wooden surface, your problem is to get a uniform coat that is not too thick. An old windshield wiper makes a better spreader than a brush. You can easily wipe excess glue from the spreader, or let it harden and chip it off later by bending the rubber blade from side to side

Portable tool kit. Here's an idea for a portable, easy-to-make tool kit that will speed your handy-man jobs. Just fold a piece of oilcloth or canvas and sew pockets for small tools. Fold the other end over the bar of a wire clothes hanger and sew or staple it in place. The kit can be supported on a nail when in use, hung out of the way when you're not using it

Protects handle of chisel. The wooden handle of a chisel should be struck only with a wooden, rubber, or plastic mallet, never with a hammer. If you don't have a mallet on hand, wire a piece of scrap wood to the side of a hammer head, as shown, and use that until you can obtain a mallet

For Phillips screws. In making household repairs, you may have to remove a Phillips screw with a cross-shaped recess in place of the usual slot. An ordinary screwdriver will not fit, but you can adapt one by grinding off the corners of the blade as shown. Make a cardboard pattern; fit it in screw head before changing your screwdriver

Soldering iron support. If you lay a hot soldering iron down hastily or carelessly, it will char the top of your workbench. To eliminate this possibility, place a spring-type paper clip on iron just behind the head

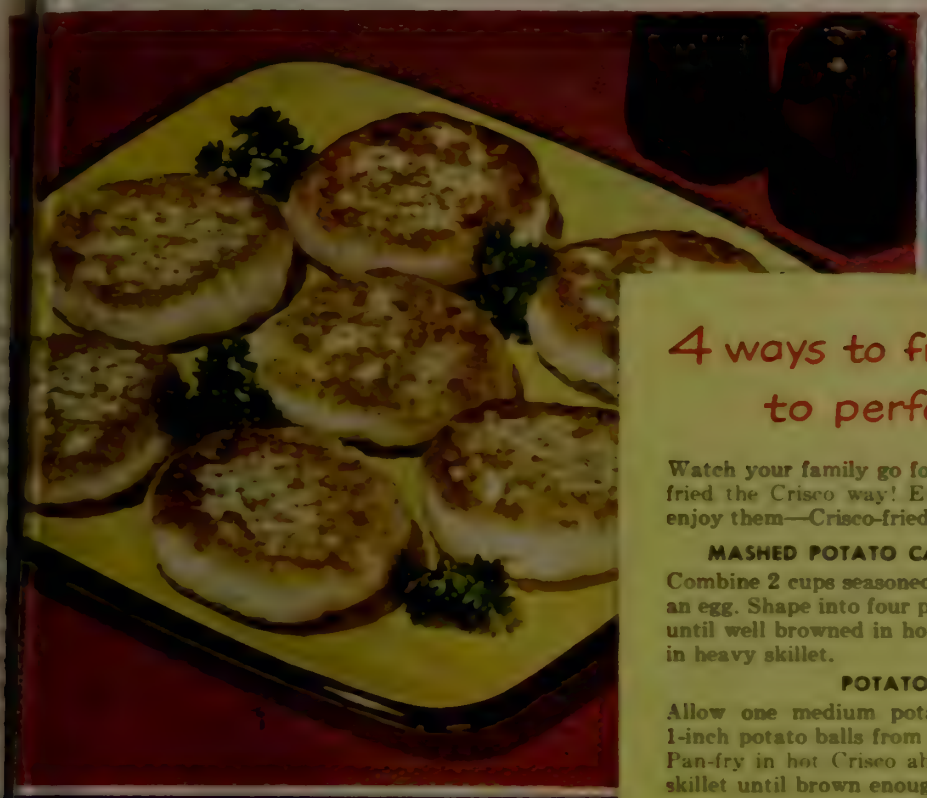
Forced-air blower is portable and completely safe to use even with small children. Its construction makes it serve as a fan in summer, an exhaust fan or ventilator when placed in a window, as a dryer, or with your heating system to circulate and distribute heat. Unit may be used in any position; the adjustable grill directs air where needed, without drafts. Finger-tip switch controls air flow at three different speeds. Superfan stands 20″ high, with smooth enamel finish in bronze color. In stores, $34.95; about $2 higher west of the Rockies. Queen Stove Works, Inc., Albert Lea, Minnesota.

Stair pads of sponge rubber protect stair carpeting from wear, prolong its life and beauty, and cushion stairs against clatter. Each pad is 24″ long, to fit 27″ carpeting, tapered off at edges for a smooth, tailored fit. Each Kastner Twin Air Cushion, about $2.95, in stores. Twin Air Cushion Pad Co., 409 S. Chapel St., Louisville, Ohio.

Ladder bracket braces your ladder against the house, offsetting it 18″ from the wall so you may work under projections, at the edge of the roof, or in front of windows, without stretching upwards or sideways. Prevents damage to cornices and spouting by not allowing the ladder to lean against them. In pairs, the brackets hold planks for scaffolding. Offset Ladder Bracket of rigid steel is $6.95, at dealers or shipping charges collect. Steadfast Equipment Co., 57 Wheeler Ave., Pleasantville, New York.



Kitchen scales of high accuracy add a note of gay color to your work. Suspended spring mechanism weighs up to 8 pounds by 2-oz. gradations; also shows gram measurements for European recipes plus a special gradation for measuring shortening by cupfuls. Scale is 6½″ high, with platform 3½″ across; in cheerful red, yellow, or white plastic; $3.25, in stores only. Hanson Scale Company, 525 N. Ada St., Chicago 22, Illinois.

Portable fluorescent lamp slips into dark corners to light repair jobs in difficult spots. Hook at top hangs the lamp to leave your hands free to work. The 6-watt lamp is always cool and glareproof while the metal shield directs rays onto the job you're doing. Bracket clips let you use the lamp as a fixture; slip it quickly from the bracket for emergencies. The Sylvania P-6 Model is equipped with 25 feet of heavy-duty cord and ballast; $4.95, at dealers or ppd. Auto-Test Incorporated, 1450 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 5, Illinois.

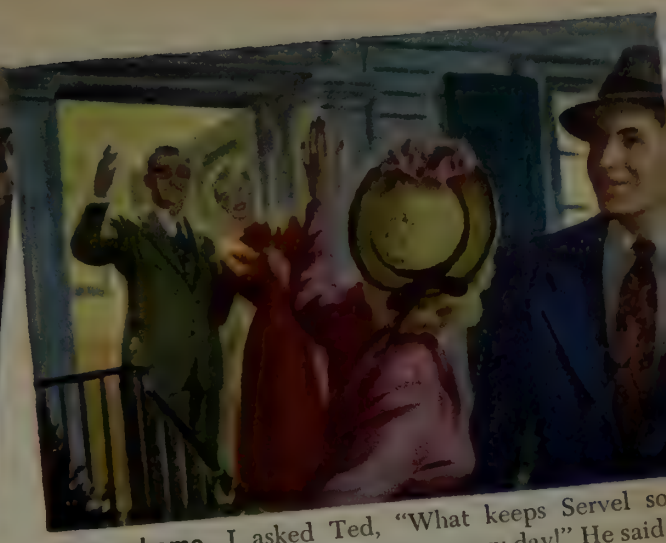
New Holland Metals Company, Mountville, Pennsylvania.

Utility cart goes everywhere, carries everything. Tubular steel frame supports a standard bushel basket (not included) for laundry, garden work, or marketing. Stands fold flat to let you push or pull cart and for storage. Big, rubber-tired wheels roll up stairs or across lawn easily. Hom-Kart is $6.95 in stores or plus 50c postage from B-W Manufacturers, Inc., 721 N. Webster St., Kokomo, Indiana.

Hang pictures, mirrors, or even small shelves without driving nails into the plaster. The No-Nail Hanger is a metal hook sealed into adhesive-backed material that sticks onto metal, tile, wood, paint, or wallpaper and dries in a few minutes. Supports up to 10 pounds in weight. When you want to remove the hanger, moisten the backing and peel it off—wall surface is undamaged. Package of 4 No-Nail Hangers is 25c, in stores or ppd. Roberts & Company, 4202 N. Whipple Ave., Chicago 18, Illinois.

Valance fringe gives curtains and draperies a luxury look, shortens the appearance of a long window, or lowers a high ceiling. Shown with the valance fringe is an edging fringe to carry color down the draperies or to trim a couch or chair. Valance fringe is 8″ deep, in a wide variety of colors; rayon, about $2.25 a yard; cotton, $1.25. Edge fringe in rayon, about 40c; cotton, 30c. In stores only. Consolidated Trimming Corporation, 27 W. 23rd St., New York 10, New York.

Measure the depth of moisture in the ground; take guesswork out of watering lawns, shrubs, or gardens. Meter is inserted in the ground at the spot being watered. When the ground is saturated to the desired depth, a spring releases the signal plate to let you know it's time to turn off the water. Moistr-Meter is stainless steel and aluminum enameled in red and white. In stores or ppd., $1.50. Garden Specialties Company, 343 S. Dearborn St., Chicago 4, Illinois.



A paint scraper that really does the job is 12-gauge steel with 3½″ edge for removing paint in fast, wide swaths. Blade is flared slightly to make corners fit up under clapboard edges and into hard-to-reach spots on woodwork or furniture. Angled blade and curved rubber-grip handle are balanced for most effective use with the least pressure. Sure Grip Scraper is 8½″ over all; $1.98, in stores or ppd. Sure Grip Scraper Mfg. Co., 2201 Harriet St., Racine, Wisconsin.

New compound promises

K. O. for allergy dust

Easily applied to rugs and fabrics, it clips the wings of aggravating particles

by Lawrence Galton

A simple new method of trapping household dust promises relief for millions suffering from allergy to dust. These millions include persons with asthma, hives, perennial hay fever, gastro-intestinal disturbances, headaches, nervousness, and other symptoms due solely or in part to house dust.

A special oil compound, sprinkled or soaked into rugs, bedding, and other seldom-laundered fabrics in the home does the trick. (Properly used, it is harmless to the materials.) It leaves an invisible film that seals in the allergy-producing dust for a year or longer.

Recently, in the medical journal Annals of Allergy, Dr. Arthur F. Coca, honorary fellow of the American College of Allergists, reported on a number of patients—he, himself was one—who got quick and dramatic relief. "The experiences," he concluded, "mark the product as an efficient, economical, harmless, and easily applied immobilizer of allergenic (allergy-producing) dust in fabrics in which it is presumably generated."

Other doctors are confirming this finding. Not long ago, a dermatologist announced to his county medical society that the dust immobilizer "shows promise of being one of the revolutionary and needed contributions to the field of allergy." From Dr. Fred W. Wittich, secretary-treasurer of the American College of Allergists, and chairman of the executive committee of the International Association of Allergists, comes the statement: "So far it has controlled respiratory allergies in which the usual methods have not succeeded."

A 39-year-old woman, long a sufferer from bronchial asthma with chronic rhinitis (inflamed nasal membranes), had tried dustproof covers on mattresses, pillows, and cushions with little relief. Even installing an air filter didn't help her too much. Then, on Doctor Coca's suggestion, she treated her floor coverings with the new compound. She hasn't had any symptoms for five months.

The woman's 4-year-old son who had had occasional asthmatic attacks didn't have any more after the dust factor was controlled. But whenever he played with his Teddy bear, and pushed his nose into the fur, he had spells of sneezing. The Teddy bear was treated, and the boy quit sneezing.

A New York doctor has tried the method on 10 patients with excellent results. One of them, a woman with asthma and sinusitis, first treated two rooms in her 12-room home in Westchester. When that helped considerably, she treated the others. She is now free of symptoms.

Doctor Wittich reports results on three patients who were among the first to use the immobilizer. One was a 2-year-old girl with widespread allergic eczema who was more sensitive to house dust than to foods and who had not been helped by injections of dust extract and other measures. Shortly after the new compound was used throughout her home, her eczema disappeared.

A college professor, with severe coughing and a perennial, almost intractable asthma, treated all carpets and draperies in his home. Although he still coughs when outdoors, he no longer coughs inside, and his asthma has disappeared. A physician's wife with recurrent asthma applied the compound and has since gone through the nights without wheezing or coughing.

The exact nature of house dust is still a mystery. With the exception of seasonal pollens, dusts that seep in from the outside are not gener-

We'll be ready to move into our new home as soon as we build the chimney, and finish the interior. We built the house of half-logs, because we found that method cheaper than usual frame construction. By Shirley Jones

We were in the same boat as countless other young families. I say we "were" because we are on our way out now. We looked fruitlessly for a house within our price range that would meet our minimum standards. After losing a down payment on one deal, we bought a lot in Brown's Point, a suburb of Tacoma, Washington. That piece of land was just as Mother Nature had left it—the forest primeval.

Howard—that's my husband—and I put on our working clothes. He with his shovel and ax and I with my brush hook made fast work of eight madrona trees and the underbrush. We're saving all the native setting possible: one huge madrona in front, several smaller ones and all the huckleberry bushes (that's our favorite kind of pie!), because we're building a log house. It's not native to the extent that we used our own trees, however. We drew up our plans, then bought the logs already cut. [Turn to page 222

Atom bomb? No...just lack of paint!

Does that sound fantastic?

It isn't! Without products of the paint and finish industry, every other industry in the country would have to shut down or find prohibitively priced substitutes. Buildings would disintegrate . . . coated cans could not be provided for food preservation . . . lack of certain insulations for cables and motors would strangle transportation and communications . . . America's commerce and industry would grind to a creaky stop!

Almost everything wears better, lasts longer, and looks more attractive because of the protective coatings perfected by the scientists in America's paint and finish laboratories.

Thousands of super-protective finishes protect everything from kitchen utensils to mammoth bridges from wear and abuse. Because the finish has so much to do with the life of your possessions, it's wise to remember: At the start, consider the finish!

How About Household Paints? Remarkable developments in product finishes are matched by recent improvements in paints!

New paints, varnishes and enamels—products of hundreds of the industry's laboratories—cover better, dry quicker, keep cleaner, and stay beautiful longer than ever before.

With replacement costs of your belongings so high, these magnificent new paints emphasize that it always costs more not to paint!

Kills crabgrass

There's a trick to applying the new crabgrass killers. If you'll apply with a sprinkling can or a coarse spray that drenches the ground, you'll get almost perfect control of this pesky weed. The active ingredient in these newest and best killers is phenyl mercuric acetate. This presumably acts upon the latex in the crabgrass roots. Good permanent grasses do not contain latex, so are not affected by the spray.

African-violet puzzle solved

We've always assumed that African-violets shed their lower leaves like excess baggage when their usefulness is finished. But not so, say scientists in the Department of Floriculture of the University of Illinois. In careful tests they've discovered that soluble salts collected on the rims of clay pots cause the death of the leaf stems. If waxed paper, glass, or some other barrier impervious to these salts is placed between the pot rim and the leaf stem, it lives on and on indefinitely. This means it will be easier to grow larger plants with bigger flower displays just as soon as it's determined which barrier is best.

Feed plants through leaves

Nitrogen, one of the most important elements in plant feeding, has always been a tricky material to apply. Now they're doing it by spraying the leaves with a new-type plant food containing about 43 percent urea, a high-nitrogen fertilizer. Leaf applications are absorbed and are almost instantly available to the plant. A number of apple orchards in the northern and eastern apple-growing territories were sprayed this spring; field crops are next to be tested. Though still new, this method of feeding may well revolutionize our entire method of growing plants.

New shade tree coming

With elm trees dying over such large areas, the problem of finding a substitute for what has been America's favorite shade tree is already acute. The handsomest find to date is the newly patented Colonialocust, a vase-form thornless honeylocust. The Siebenthaler Company, of Dayton, Ohio, owners of the plant patent, will have no trees to sell for two years. But homeowners can look forward to owning a graceful tree with foliage that lets sun through so that the grass grows well beneath it. The tree makes no seeds so there are no pods to rake up. And because a locust has the ability, like other legumes, of storing nitrogen, the grass is always greener and thicker beneath a Colonialocust than out in the open. [Turn to page 212

How to enjoy being a father

Sure, fatherhood's no bed of roses. But it's full of opportunities for fun and love and companionship. Here's how to get yours while the getting's good

By Reuben Hill, Ph. D.

I heard a visitor from Sweden say the other day that the greatest laborsaving device she'd ever seen was the American father. No European male, she pointed out, performs the services we do. European fathers don't run errands, sit with the children, hang out the laundry, or wash the dishes. In Sweden, at least, a wife organizes her routines around the needs of her husband, provides him with comforts, and rears his children to respect him as head of the house. At least that's what the speaker said.

Anyhow, your job of being a father is a whole lot different than it used to be. Can you imagine yourself, for example, in the sandals of an Old Testament father—a desert sheik with a dozen wives and several dozen offspring? A powerful dictator, his main headache was protecting his nomadic family of as many as three hundred souls. At best he was a benevolent despot who sheltered wives and children as treasured wealth. No one questioned his right to rule.

Or take your own forefathers in New England, if that's where they come from. They could have disobedient children put to death. If you yearn to be that kind of father, you can learn how by reading Colonial history.

It was on the Western frontier that your great-grandfather finally weakened. He realized that a good woman was hard to find west of St. Joe or Omaha, and that he couldn't get along without one. So he surrendered some of his sovereignty. He kept a tight rein on the money-making, but he let mom ride herd on the household. The children were expected to mind both parents. A lot of families still operate pretty much this way in rural areas.

The place where dad's authority has taken the greatest beating is, of course, in the city. There's little of Lord and Master in Dagwood Bumstead. Blondie [Turn to page 172

June and July are recommended, because their longer days allow more sight-seeing, but the trip is perfectly good in August or early September. Overnight cabins are advised for convenience, for early-morning starts, and because there are a lot of good ones all along the route. In addition, cabins are convenient places to dress and undress for those swims you'll be taking. In Boston, though, you'll want to stay in a mid-town hotel for more convenient access to historic attractions.

Assuming you have four in your family and that you start from New York, the AAA adds up these approximate costs: Meals, $150; seven nights in double cabins at $8, $56; two nights in Boston hotel, $24. Allow $40 for gas and oil. That totals $270. Add $30, for miscellaneous spending and you arrive at $300. [Turn to page 157

A house that lets you rest

By Helen Aves

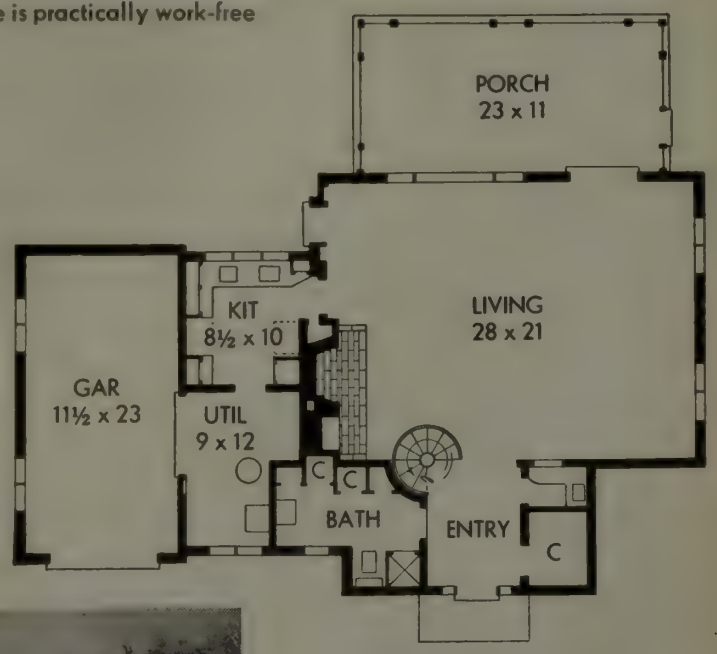
The little home pictured on these pages deserves close inspection. The fact that it's a remodeled boathouse is unimportant; what is important is that when they were finished, the people who built it had a home that was almost work-free, and as comfortable as an old pair of shoes. It lets them enjoy simple living.

Before they remodeled this house, the Benjamin Fields had tried to adapt themselves and their two boys to any house they bought. They got used to a house, but the fact remained that the house, not they, dictated how they were to live. It wasn't until the boys left home and Mr. and Mrs. Field got the urge to get out in the country that they discovered what they had been missing.

They decided to remodel this boathouse on the Grand River at Belmont, Michigan, because the boathouse happened to be where Mr. Field did a lot of fishing. If they got nothing else they were going to get a big, cheerful porch overlooking the river, the kind [Turn to page 122

Guests feel at home in this room, like to stay overnight. The Fields use a pair of twin box springs and mattresses for living-room couches, for guest beds. A small bath and deep closets make for guest comfort on this floor

Photographs: Suter, Hedrich-Blessing, Ltd.



"We couldn't put on airs here even if we wanted to," says Mrs. Field. Because they like to entertain in bunches—and their friends like to come in bunches—the Fields planned their furniture groupings for conversation and completely informal entertaining. The Lazy Susan dining table makes large buffet dinners less work

The Fields' home is built around the enjoyment of basic things, like this view of the Grand River from their summer living room. Oak furniture weathers humidity on porch all winter, gets a lot of use because the house is practically work-free

BEFORE

The Fields weren't intrigued by this old boathouse, but were convinced that with but little change they could have a compact home

AFTER

They were right; they added a garage-service porch, kitchen, dormers, heating plant, and screened porch across the back to get this

IDEA HOUSE that sets a trend

By Bob Gilmore

In every community there's a home everyone talks about. Families drive by it slowly, young couples dream of a future home just like it, and visitors are eager to discuss what they've seen inside.

This is such a house, in Edina Highlands, southwest of Minneapolis. Neighbors call it—appropriately—the Trend House.

That name is fitting because the house represents a trend in architectural thinking. It represents a type of home you'll be seeing more and more—a type of home you may be living in.

The house is important as a trend-setter because it is designed to meet the specific, round-the-clock needs of your family; to use to greatest advantage the laborsaving conveniences science is putting at your service.

The house also is important trend-wise because it does this job without self-consciousness, with maturity. It is a slave neither to modernism nor tradition.

You may never build the Trend House. But you will build into your new home its basic idea of providing handy, usable space for devices being manufactured to make houses less work and more fun. And chances are good you also will use some of its many individual ideas which provide extra convenience and better living.

The Trend House fits comfortably into its surroundings, clashing with none of its neighbors. Its cedar-shingled roof is broken into three clean, sweeping levels. Its walls are weather-tight cedar shingles painted a light yellow-green. The masonry that accents the front of the house is pink sandstone laid in a random pattern that casts interesting shadows.

The plan reveals the care that was taken to make the house comfortable and easy to live in. Consider, for instance, the accessibility of all areas of the house:

You can enter the kitchen—which takes most of the traffic in any house—from either the garage or utility room without passing through other rooms. The dining area is only a door, or a pass-through, away. You can reach bedrooms, bath, or basement from the kitchen without being seen from living or [Turn to next page dining areas—a convenience when you have friends over for an evening.

Both bedrooms and the guest room-study are shielded from each other and from living areas by distance or sound-absorbing wardrobes—yet the hall makes them accessible without any sacrifice of privacy.

The main entrance is sheltered, and there's a nod to the automobile age in the presence of a secondary main floor entrance through the garage, and a basement entrance from the garage which supplements a flight of stairs from the kitchen.

Interior finishes and arrangements acknowledge that the day of servants is past. Door and window moldings are simple, and nearly dustproof.

Washable walls in the kitchen, utility area, and bathrooms pick up little dirt, and a damp cloth will easily clean them. Linoleum, asphalt tile, and cork floors are easily and quickly cleaned.

You couldn't ask for a better arrangement, or more laborsaving equipment, than the kitchen offers. From food freezer to refrigerator to range, then to sink, dishwasher, and garbage disposal unit, everything is calculated to save time and energy. Conveniently arranged counters save still more steps.

Even if every day were washday, you would [Turn to page 178

When you buy a radio, car, or refrigerator, you rely on the manufacturer's name and reputation to give you a good product. You don't take the machines apart to see how they're made.

But when you build a home, buy one, or have one remodeled, you don't have any such assurance. You have only your knowledge of construction and past experience to guide you. Usually that isn't much. Yet your investment is about 50 times more than you'll spend for any other product, except a car.

It's important for you to know what good construction standards are. You may not use your knowledge often, but if you learn to spot good and bad construction, you may save yourself thousands of dollars.

To bring you that knowledge, Better Homes & Gardens presents below the first part of a photographic encyclopedia of home construction. Most of the photographs are detail shots, but it is careful attention to small details that will assure you a well-built home. These pictures will help you recognize good building practices, materials, and craftsmanship. Savings on repairs soon will repay the extra cost of sound construction.

Leveling. Before construction starts, shape of your house must be staked out on your lot. Levels of footings and first floor are established with a surveyor's level and batter boards (boards on stakes that mark the corners of your house).

Trenches. Trenches into which concrete for footings will be poured must be squared at the bottom. Footings should be 6 to 12 inches wider than foundation wall itself, depending on height of your house. Trenches must be deep enough so footings will be below frost line—deepest point to which ground freezes in midwinter.

Footings. If possible, footings should be poured on solid earth. If ground is not solid or is filled, footings must be heavily reinforced with steel rods. Footings must be absolutely level, 8 inches thick for a one-story house, 12 inches for two stories. Raking works air bubbles out of concrete, makes it level and solid.

Chimney footings. The chimney requires a firm foundation. It should rest on footing 12 inches wider than chimney structure itself, and not less than 12 inches thick. House with basement requires similar footings under piers that carry house's weight. In a basementless house, slab acts as continuous pier.

Here's the first of a series of articles that will show you in simple photographs how to guarantee yourself a better home

By Groff Conklin

Sewer line. After foundation walls are up, earth inside walls is leveled off, and a trench dug for sewer line. Depth of trench doesn't matter since earth under slab won't freeze, but sewer must slope down to city sewer so waste drains at a slow, even speed. Minimum practical slope is 1 inch drop in every 5 feet of sewer line.

Gravel base. After sewer is in, trench is filled and leveled. Then a layer of clean gravel at least 4 inches thick is spread over ground enclosed by foundation walls. Gravel must be large enough so it won't pack down, and should be thoroughly washed before it comes to the site. Gravel keeps the slab dry and insulates the floor.

Waterproofing is done in two ways. Here, sheets of heavy waterproof paper, usually tar-impregnated, are laid on top of gravel to keep concrete off the ground. Layers should overlap so joints between strips won't leak. Large-mesh reinforcing wire follows to strengthen concrete so it won't crack under the expected load.

Photographs: Herbert Stein

Waterproofing. Other method is to pour a thin layer of concrete directly on gravel. This must be strong enough to hold your weight, so you can lay tar paper or builder's felt over concrete. Paper or felt is then mopped with hot tar; reinforcing mesh and slab are put down. Picture is of roof, but same technique is used on floors.

The slab. Concrete must be at least 4 inches thick; 2 inches of plain concrete are enough if you use a base layer of special insulating concrete. So floor will be level, concrete is screeded—leveled by a straight-edged length of wood moved back and forth over the surface. Surface then is troweled smooth to take floor coverings.

Slab at wall. Where concrete joins foundation walls, (unless foundation is poured concrete) dampproof insulation board must be laid along walls so concrete and wall don't touch. These strips keep frost away from edges of the slab, and, if you plan to use panel heat, prevent excessive heat loss through foundation walls.

"We want an expandable house!"

That demand has become almost a war cry—or, rather, a postwar cry. Many of you want to build a house that will give you minimum shelter now, but a house that can be added to as your family and your bank balance grow, or when building costs drop. Some of you want a house to which you can build additions yourselves, using the main house as a base of operations.

Our best advice is to think twice before building an expandable house.

If you have to build a minimum house now, you'll be better off to sell it when you've outgrown it, and move to larger quarters. But if you can start with a good house that's planned for additions, you'll be better off to expand that house when you need more room.

A good expandable house must have three features: 1. In its first stage it must be complete and comfortable. 2. You must be able to expand economically. 3. The expansion must be planned so you aren't disturbed while the additions are being built.

Better Homes & Gardens Five Star Home No. 1906 is a good house if you build only part of it at the start. It's an even better house in its final stage—the way you see it on these pages. See how well it fits the three requirements of a good expandable house:

Requirement No. 1: In its initial stage, the house contains 829 square feet. It has a large living room with good light, good ventilation, and wall space for sleeping couches so it can double as a temporary [Turn to page 150

Double-feature garden on a tiny city lot

By Gerald J. Donahue

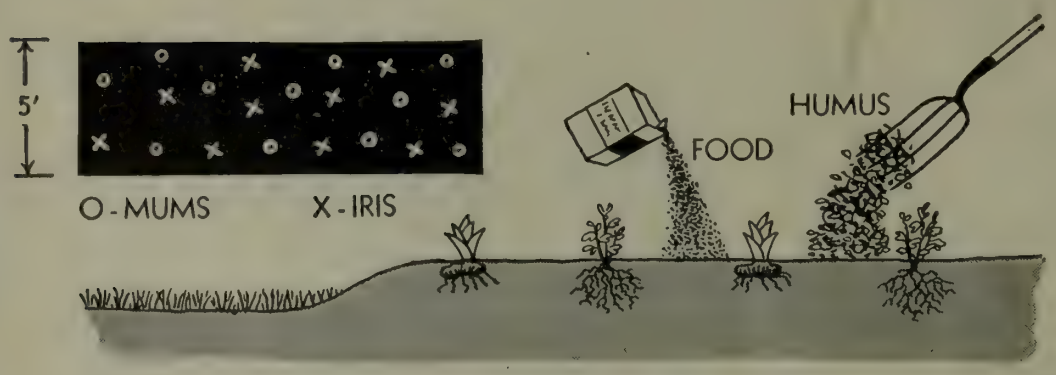
If you will center on two hardy perennials, like iris and chrysanthemums, you'll be astonished at what you can do in small space. I know. Our own garden space is relatively small. The over-all size of the entire lot is only 35 by 175 feet and this also accommodates our house and a double garage.

But by specializing, I've found you can have two really big garden events each year. Iris bloom can be stretched into weeks by planting early, midseason, and late-blooming varieties. You can do the same with chrysanthemums.

All this doesn't just happen, although anyone can do it if you'll follow the pointers I give here.

Early bulbs can be tucked in somewhere to precede the big first main-act. Roses, daylilies, phlox, and tuberous begonias all get a little room, so we—and you—will never be without color.

But all the main garden beds are interplanted with iris and mums—the best choices if you want a double-feature garden.



Chrysanthemums are never expensive and your iris need not be.

Based on performance in my garden I'm recommending the two best iris varieties in each color class. [Turn to page 228

Concentrate your bloom. That's one of the main secrets of getting a spectacular two-season show from the same garden beds. In iris time, the mum plants are small, scarcely more than good green groundcover. Full sun, rich soil, continuous feeding, and good staking are the other musts. Reset iris clumps every third year to keep clumps vigorous and bloom stalks close together. Set your mums in by the first week in June.

By our doubling-up method you get as

When most gardens have gone drab and colorless, out pop the chrysanthemums to brighten all the beds. Cords and stakes are adjusted to allow the mum sprays to spread. Even the window box on the garage gets a few plants set into it while in full bloom, to replace the worn-out petunias. Large-flowered hothouse-type mums always amaze our friends. We are able to grow these outdoors in northern Illinois by choosing only the kinds that bloom before killing frosts

Beds need full sun. Interplant iris and mums 18 to 24 inches apart. Give light feeding monthly of a balanced plant food. Work humus into soil but keep mulch off the iris

When growth starts, spray iris foliage with 50-percent wettable DDT. Repeat twice before flowers open. Spray mum foliage with fungicide

On alternate weeks use rotenone on mums to kill insects. Keep mums staked upright. This lets more sunlight in between close-set plants

After it's blackened by cold, cut all foliage back to 7 inches. Cover with 3 inches of marsh or slough hay to offset winter heaving as much bloom twice a year as you would normally get from a garden twice the size

Look what you can do with potted plants

McCombs

Maynard Parker

This you might call a Jack-in-the-box plan, so quickly are the flowers changed. The plants are left right in their pots. Two changes keep the box always gay. These mums, coleus, and ornamental peppers were set in after the family returned from their vacation, will last till frost. Scalloped frame hides slatted bottom which drains quickly

← What potted plants can do for bare steps is something delightful to see. Saucers are not necessary here but do provide broader bases and so reduce the chances of upset or toppling by wind. In exposed positions keep soil a full inch below rims so that you can give a generous watering daily. These are pelargoniums

By Fleeta Brownell Woodroffe

You'll find, once you start exploring the possibilities, that potted plants can do a dozen things for you, and do them right away. Are you crowded for room, with your drive too close to your house for a good foundation planting on that side? Try pots in strap-iron rings screwed to your window sills. Fill them with glowing-rose balcony-type petunias. The cascades of color will never encroach on the drive—but that bare look will be gone.

Bring color and interest to your kitchen door by setting a strawberry barrel there planted with Wayzata, Gem, or some other good everbearing strawberries.

And see how you can dress up a porch where there's no other planting by setting down colonies of potted fuchsias, lobelias, Paris daisies, and fringed petunias at the posts.

Water your plants daily. Once a week make it liquid plant food, but no stronger than recommended on the package. Your flowers will almost overflow their pots.

Suter, Hedrich-Blessing

From Illinois to Florida, fancyleaf caladiums give a lush tropical look. Their reds and whites are one of the best combinations to use with red brick. Buy them already started, or set several bulbs in a large pot for a spectacular effect. Give rich, porous soil, and plenty of water. Excellent in part shade

Do it with geraniums if you want a bold band of color across your house. But don't try it with only six or eight. You'll need several dozen well-rooted slips. Sink pots part way. Never worry about crowding—plants of one kind don't mind leaning into each other

Match dishes, linens, and glassware

By Fae Rowley

Soft pink hand-woven linen place mat, chartreuse and blue aluminum tumblers—this is the setting created for the blue, chartreuse, and brown pottery. Silverware has just enough design to enrich the plain modern pottery

At last you can buy table furnishings that are planned to go together. Up-to-date manufacturers are designing wares that harmonize. This doesn't mean that tablecloths, dishes, silver, and glassware will necessarily have the same decoration. That could result in a monotony.

It does mean that tablecloths are being made in colors and designs that will enhance specific types of dishes. That beverage glasses are being manufactured in special shapes and styles to key with popular dish patterns. That silversmiths are designing flatware patterns to harmonize with both Contemporary and Traditional settings.

This simplifies the planning of your table furnishings just as it helped your home-furnishings problems when the rug, drapery, and upholstery manufacturers harmonized their colors and styles.

Makers of this modern, medium-priced pottery offer a variety of smartly designed tablecloths, any one of which enhances the various colored dishes. The same manufacturer has developed special colors in glassware to blend with the different hues of his pottery

One linen designer makes special cloths for the fine old patterns in dishes. Here the famous Queensware grape pattern is highlighted by a colorful cloth with harmonious motif embroidered in a chain stitch. Fruit motif of the silver blends with grape design of cloth and dishes

For this inexpensive new earthenware with its vegetable design in the free-flowing modern French manner, a chartreuse and yellow cloth has been chosen. Green footed tumblers and water jug with yellow-handled knives and forks complete the co-ordinated ensemble

It's easy to find harmonious table settings now. China, glass, and tablecloth manufacturers are making colors and designs that go together

Charles Kuoni

For the Rosepath design on these inexpensive dishes, the designers recommend green, yellow, or brown cloths or place mats. Damask Rose silver pattern blends with the theme of the dishes. Sturdy plain crystal goblets complete this harmonious setting

Photographs: Stanley

This exquisite new Ma Lin china pattern harmonizes with several colors in cloths and runners—green, yellow, white, or persimmon. The brilliant color and strong design make these dishes blend well with either a Modern or a Traditional setting

Along with this trend we find china, earthenware, and pottery dishes being made stronger, lighter in weight, and more resistant to chipping and crazing. Decorations are simpler and more effective in color. Shapes are smoother and more streamlined. Manufacturers of low-priced dishes, averaging 25 to 50 cents apiece, are hiring famous designers for their inexpensive lines. The makers of our finest chinas are again producing jewellike decorations on greatly improved, featherweight bodies. Whether you prefer Contemporary or Traditional furnishings, there are patterns and colors that will harmonize with your home.

Here are a few examples of cloths, silver, and glassware coordinated with some of the popular patterns in dishes. In each, the colors and designs are planned to be used together to make a harmonious setting. See how beautiful your table can be.

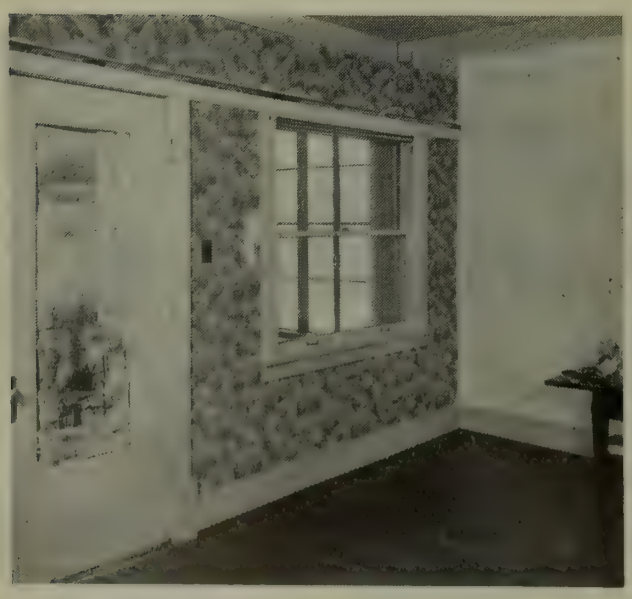
We remodeled from payday to payday

By Robert M. Jones

You know how it is. You scrape the bottom of the barrel to buy an old, overpriced house. Then you decide you'll go crazy if you don't do something to make it look as a house should look.

We were at that point the afternoon when I climbed a stepladder and ripped out the fake ceiling beams and the antiquated picture molding. After that backing down was difficult. At times, as we stripped off lurid wallpaper, removed paint, and patched plaster holes, it seemed the job would never end.

But it did. Actually, the work took the evenings, weekends, and holidays of four months. And we avoided high labor costs; not one expert got so much as his little finger in the pie.



The finished job isn't exactly what you'd call lush. The little nest of tables (marked down to $9.95) represents the only new furniture in the room. Bookshelves and mantel were built of oak salvaged from the dummy beams. The large coffee table is simply an old worktable (original cost, $5) sawed down and finished with fire-engine lacquer. The step table was built of scrap lumber.

But it's our home, and we like it.

Simplicity, easy upkeep were our goals ——►

Pink fireplace was painted white and given a deep mantel to make it seem lower. Fussy little windows, good neither for light nor view, were hidden behind draperies. Window seats were built up to serve as end tables and log bins. Lamps were made from old pilasters. Corner padding modernized the lines of the old studio couch

Reading corner is child-proof ——►

Add some bookshelves, a lamp, and a place to lie down, and you get a reading corner always in demand. Oversized ottoman is an old box spring and mattress, covered with sturdy blue denim. No legs, no dust underneath. It has held as many as a dozen kids at once. Draperies ride on continuous I-beam track, the kind used for drapery displays in a department store

Be ruthless, we kept telling ourselves ——→

Never-closed door came off to make room larger. To hide the mortises, doorframe boards were reversed. Woodwork was stripped of paint and varnish, given a flat penetrating finish that won't mar. Upright piano seemed to shrink as mahogany stain was bleached out

Need more storage? See what we did in our hall, next page

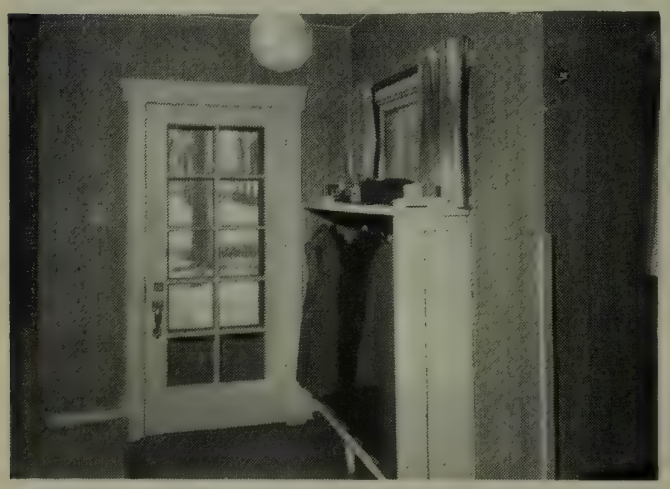
Build yourself a storage wall

Do you have all the storage space you need? If you don't, consider building a storage wall like the one we built in our front hall. It has this neat handful of advantages:



1. Construction is simplified in every possible way. An unhandy man can build this unit; in fact, one did. One exception: The chest of drawers was built to order by a cabinetmaker.

2. You can modify a design like this to fit your storage needs exactly.

3. A unit like this can be fitted to any wall space, and need be no more than 20 inches deep.

4. You can save money by being your own carpenter. A professional's estimate for this unit, unfinished, was $500. It actually cost us $163.55 complete.

5. No structural changes in the house itself are necessary to build this storage wall.

BEFORE What little storage space we had was unsightly and unworkable. Wallpaper that tried to look like wood made hall dark and gloomy. Painted woodwork got dirty in a week

Photographs: Stanley, Hedrich-Blessing

Accurate measurements are essential. Measure three times before cutting a piece of lumber, and you'll avoid mistakes. Plaster wall that will serve as back of unit is painted white to reflect light

Cutting accuracy demands a sharp saw. Try to cut on waste side of pencil line, leaving half the line on piece to be used. Find truest edge by sighting, and measure from there. Cut pieces are marked with chalk

Check saw frequently with a try square if you have trouble making right-angle cut. This will save your squaring edge with a plane. Before you cut plywood, mark and protect best side; defects inside

How to make a meal out of a sandwich

It's easy!—Along with the sandwich you just ladle out a brimming plateful of Campbell's Vegetable Soup. For this homey vegetable soup—with its fifteen different garden vegetables and good beef stock—is a satisfying dish indeed. No wonder men go for it, and children, too. No wonder women everywhere call it "almost a meal in itself." So remember—when lunch or supper must be quick, but nourishing and substantial, just enjoy your favorite sandwich and a plate of this hearty vegetable soup.

Berry delicious

By Myrna Johnston

If the family teases you for strawberry ice cream during berry time, here it is, in a cake-style shortcake. The ice cream is made in the refrigerator and tastes like the rich, old-fashioned ice cream you used to crank out in the back yard.

One Dad we know always asks for a strawberry pie—asks for it as long as the berry patch produces. The one in the picture is super. It takes a quart of berries. You put the big ones in the shell and you crush the small ones, cook them with sugar and cornstarch to make the beautiful red glaze. The exact recipe is on page 118.

They're up to the minute, this sextette of warm-weather meals, right in line with the latest trends of serving food in the simplest, most attractive way. And right in line, too, with June—playing up fresh tomatoes, the first garden peas and asparagus, crisp radishes, and green-topped onions.

These combinations taste good together, look pretty on the plates, and are quick to prepare. You serve the plates on the kitchen counter to save time and dishes and to assure an attractive, uncluttered table. Each plate is an invitation to good eating. You can be sure the folks will eat every bite.

MAIN DISH	VEGETABLE	SALAD OR ACCOMPANIMENT	DESSERT	NICE TO SERVE
Individual Veal Pie* With Mashed Potato Topping	Buttered Broccoli or String Beans	Orange-Grapefruit Salad Twin Rolls Butter Ball	Fresh Strawberry Sundae	Hot Coffee Mints

Pipe edges of veal casseroles with fluffy mashed potatoes (you can make a pastry tube from brown paper). Brush potato topping with mixture of beaten egg and paprika. Orange and grapefruit sections are arranged in groups of three to form flower—tuck maraschino cherry with stem at the base. You'll find easy directions for making the butter balls on page 114.

Broiled Lamp Chop on Toast Points*	Buttered Peas	Carrot Curls on Water Cress Broiled Pineapple With Jellied Cranberry Sauce	Minted Pineapple Sherbet* or Frosted Fruit Cocktail	Coffee Salted Nuts

Sprinkle pineapple slices with mixture of brown sugar or honey and butter; broil beside lamb chops. Chill canned jellied cranberry sauce; slice and cut out. Place on top of pineapple slice at serving time. Prepare carrot curls ahead of time to serve as salad. Serve chops piping hot on toast triangles to catch every drop of juicy goodness. Pineapple sherbet is cool and green.

Tuna Salad Mold With Mayonnaise* Deviled Eggs	Buttered Green Beans	Tomato Wedges on Curly Endive Sliced Cucumbers	Floating Island	Cups of Consomme Wafers

Prepare molded salads, eggs, tomatoes, and cucumbers early—chill in refrigerator until time to serve. Make your favorite stirred custard; chill. Gradually beat 2 tablespoons sugar into each stiff-beaten egg white. Spoon meringues into scalding milk and let cook until firm, about 5 minutes. The islands float on cooled custard. Top with berries, colored sugar, or nutmeg.

Dried-Beef Casserole*	Asparagus With Hollandaise Sauce	Sliced Tomatoes Hot Bran Muffins*	Lime Ice Cream Sugar Wafers	Chilled Fruit Juice Currant Jelly

Here's a plate meal that dovetails preparation, with all the foods ready for the table at the same instant. Macaroni for the casserole cooks tender while you mix muffins. Pop muffins in oven and complete the casseroles—they bake in just 15 to 20 minutes so they'll come out with the muffins. Asparagus will cook tender while you are preparing the Hollandaise Sauce.

✓ Ample counter clearance? About 14 inches between cabinets and counter tops allows clearance for tall utensils, yet keeps the upper-cabinet shelves within reach. Plan for one counter with no wall cabinets above it to give you headroom when you use appliances such as an electric mixer

✓ Good lighting? It lessens the strain of your work and guarantees a cheery kitchen at any time of the day. At the sink, you should have a combination of window, overhead, and ceiling light. Along counters you may spotlight work with under-the-cabinet fixtures. Many ranges have surface light. Or you may install light on wall over range

Check your kitchen

It's the little things that make a kitchen a pleasant place to work. Does your kitchen have these important details that give you maximum convenience?

By Janice Price

This check list is for you, whether your kitchen is 10 years old or brand new. Stand back and look around. Do you have convenient outlets to plug in your electric appliances? Is the lighting and ventilation adequate? Does your refrigerator door open in the right direction? Are drawers partitioned to fit your equipment? Are your tools in the spot where you use them? Do you have a place near the range for pans, for serving dishes? Do you have enough space between counter tops and cabinets?

These are details that add up to kitchen convenience. Take stock to see if you have enough storage space and work space, and if you are making the most of it. If you don't have enough, how can you improve it? The photographs here and on pages 109 and 110 show you some of the most important points. What's the score for your kitchen?

✔ Range-side storage for pans? It's handy to lift skillet directly onto the range. Also saucepans and teapots that take boiling water from teakettle. Utensils to be filled with cold water may better be kept by sink. Or, better yet, plan your pan-storage space within reach of both range and sink

✔ Place for potatoes? For onions? And for the extra grapefruit or oranges you buy at bargain prices? Do you have an easy-to-reach spot for keeping canned goods? Sliding ventilated bins or drawers solve the problem neatly. They're installed in some new cabinets. Or portable bins are available

✔ Refrigerator open onto counter? If it does, you can remove foods, place them on counter in one easy motion. Vegetables make non-stop trip to salad bowl. If refrigerator stands alone, you juggle bowls, set things on top of refrigerator, carry items back and fourth from the working spot

✔ A mixing center? Do you have a special work spot where all your tools and ingredients are within arm's reach? You need a counter where you can roll pastry or cookies, mix cakes. You need cabinets and drawers for pastry blender, rolling pin, mixing spoons and cups, spices, and baking pans

Photographs: Marion Pease

✔ Plenty of outlets to plug in the mixer, toaster, waffle baker? Breakfast bar, above, has a double outlet so coffee and toast can be made and served on the spot. In the mixing area have outlets for the mixer, roaster, and other plug-in appliances

Does your clothesline look like ours? The way you hang and fold your clothes on washday decides how many wrinkles there'll be to iron out

By Catherine Eddy

Correct hanging means less ironing

Your ironing needn't increase in summer, even though the family washing does. Not if you sing our new words to an old tune, "This is the way you hang your clothes . . . to cut down on your ironing!"

You lucky ladies with an automatic clothes dryer can skip this article. The rest of you will find that our clothesline-hanging tips will save you hours at the ironing board. There'll be no clothesline wrinkles or clothespin peaks to iron out. And some of the clothes can by-pass the iron and go straight from the line to your closets or drawers. Correct hanging and folding will cut out ironing on sheets, towels, and underwear; will reduce ironing on seersucker, nylon, or rayon jersey garments to a quick press.

On page 93 we give you specific ways to keep cottons and rayons off your ironing board, or at least cut their ironing time in half. Here's how to handle each item in your laundry basket, from shirts to slipcovers.

Shirts

Hang as shown above. Top hangs free so wrinkles can blow out. Generous lap at bottom prevents clothespins pulling corner peaks. Ironing will be minimized if you fold shirt loosely when you sprinkle it, instead of rolling it up tightly. [Turn to page 92

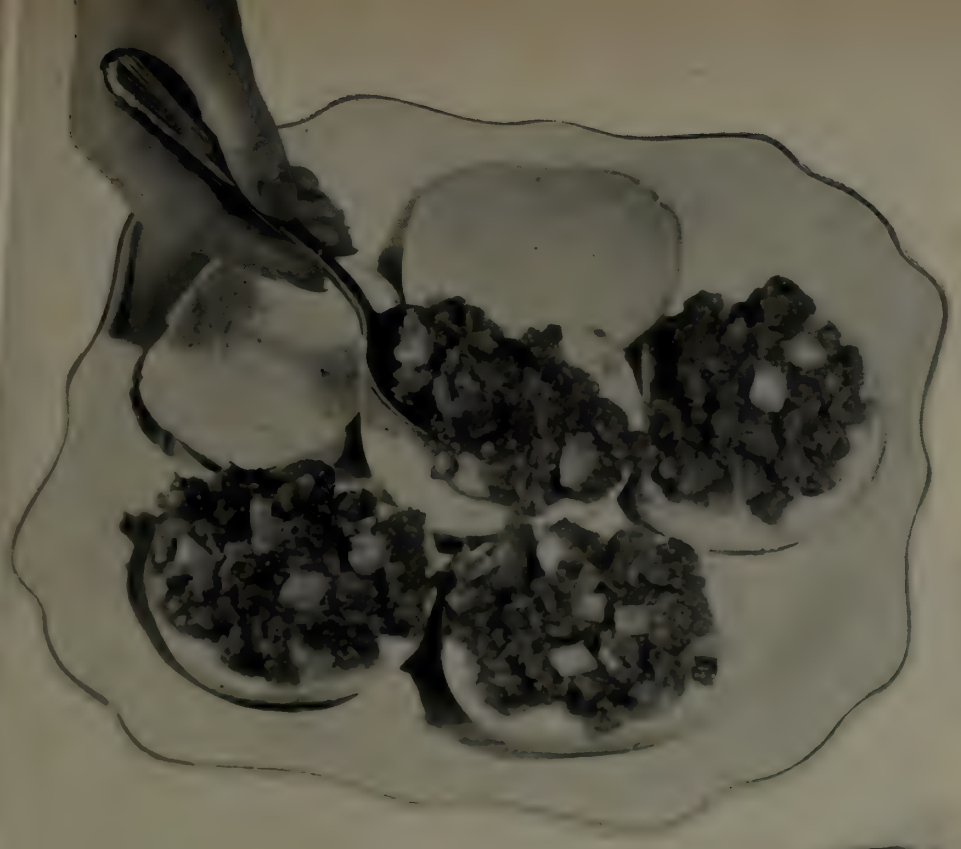
Hamburgers—better than ever!

By Jessie Prather

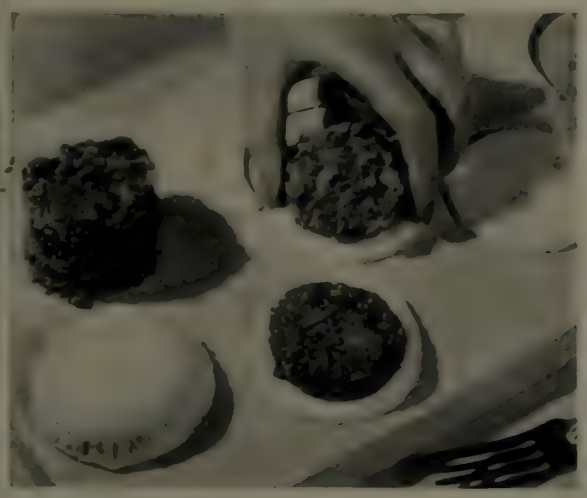
Surprise seasonings and stuffings give you new burger recipes for lunch, dinner, picnic, and snacks

Everybody likes hamburger. It's equally at home in the dining room or in the back yard. You can start with freshly ground beef, or with the new canned or frozen hamburger patties. You can dress up hamburger a dozen different ways; you can broil, fry, or bake it. Here we serve hamburger on the meat platter stuffed or double-decker style; on the lunch plate baked in biscuits; on the picnic table between buns with sauces or toppers to vary it. Tricks for shaping thick and thin patties are on page 94.

Turn to page 94

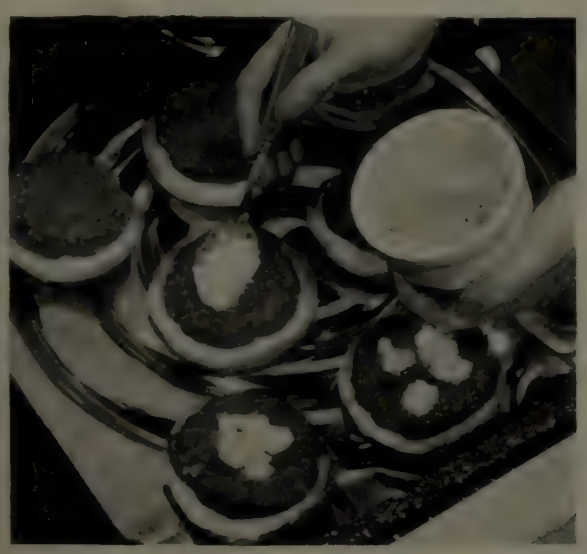


Double-decker Burgers are two stories high and as long as a Coney bun. Put two oblong patties together with finely chopped onion between; wrap with bacon slices and fasten with toothpicks. Broil and serve on toasted bun halves. Garnish platter with carrot curls and celery if you are serving for dinner



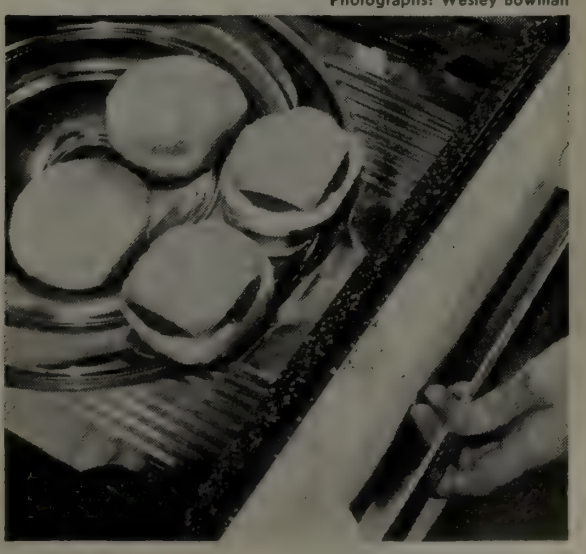
Stuffed Burgers have a spoonful of well-seasoned bread stuffing in the middle. Make the meat patties thin. Put dressing between two patties, and press edges together. Brown in hot fat, pour over diluted condensed tomato soup; simmer about 45 minutes. Here's a meat that's different and mighty good tasting, yet pleasantly easy on the budget

Barbecue Burger Mix is a skillet special that's delicious and thrifty. Chopped onion, green pepper, celery, and a barbecue sauce stretch one pound hamburger to 6 servings. Try this one on the gang for a sure-fire winner!



Burgers in Biscuits are easy. Open a can of hamburger patties and reach for the biscuit mix. Roll biscuit dough very thin, about ¼ inch; cut rounds 1 inch larger than meat patties. Place patties between biscuits, seal edges; bake in hot oven about 15 minutes. Serve with relish sauce; recipe on page 97

Toppers to vary basic hamburgers



Photographs: Wesley Bowman

Blue Cheese Topper gives burgers a gourmet flavor. Broil burgers 8 to 10 minutes, turning once. Then top with mixture of ¼ cup butter or fortified margarine and 2 or 3 tablespoons crumbled Blue cheese. Broil just long enough to melt the cheese

Mushroom Soup is quick and easy sauce for hamburgers served on plates. Brown 2 teaspoons minced onion in 1 tablespoon butter; stir in can of condensed Mushroom Soup, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, and squirt of lemon juice. Heat to boiling and serve

Cheese-burgers are a national favorite. Broil burgers on bun halves about 8 to 10 minutes, turning once. Place a slice of American cheese over each, and tuck top bun halves on broiler alongside. Broil a minute; just enough to melt cheese and heat buns

Cash for casseroles and puddings

New recipe contest asks for your best casseroles and baked puddings to publish in Cooks' Round Table next January. Sender of recipe judged best will receive $10; 20 other contributors will get $3 each. All you do is write down your recipe according to the simple rules below and send it before June 30. That gives us plenty of time to test and choose recipes before next January's magazine goes to press.

Casseroles and whole-meal dishes are wanted for husky winter appetites. Does your favorite casserole feature browned hamburger, flaked chicken, some sort of sea food, or leftover meat? Is it fortified with Limas, macaroni, noodles, rice, or potatoes? Is it supplemented with vegetables, dramatized with a blend of seasonings? We want whatever casserole your family eats with zest and asks for more.

Baked puddings are partners to casseroles in the January recipe contest. The pudding recipe you submit may be a dressed-up bread pudding, a special brown betty, a rich date-nut pudding, a best-ever cheesecake or cottage pudding. Or you may have your own rice pudding that tastes like Grandma's, your special prune whip that's the envy of the neighborhood. Whatever your baked pudding is, if it's praised to the skies, send it in.

You have a chance to win $10 and 20 chances to win $3.

And remember, the winners of these 21 prizes will receive the Better Homes & Gardens Certificate of Endorsement, and six copies of the endorsed recipe.

1. Write your recipe clearly on one side of the paper. Send but one recipe at a time and mark it, "January Casserole" or "January Baked Puddings."
2. Print your full name and address clearly in upper right corner of recipe page.
3. Give measurements in level cups, tablespoons, and teaspoons, never in heaping or scant measurements.
4. Be sure to specify in your recipe the brand names of the nationally known food products you use as ingredients—products available everywhere. We must know them so we can test your recipe with the same brand you use.
5. Include 50 to 100 words about the history or origin of your recipe.
6. All recipes submitted become the property of Better Homes & Gardens.
7. Entries must be postmarked by midnight, June 30.
8. Address the recipes you enter to 5406 Tasting-Test Kitchen, Better Homes & Gardens, Des Moines 3, Iowa.

This month's winners

Cook-of-the-Month winning the $10 is Marillyn Mark of Chicago. Her sparkling Red Raspberry Pie has creamy bottom layer of vanilla pudding, a jewel-bright top layer of berries and raspberry-flavored gelatine. Mrs. George A. Lorenzen wins a prize with another delectable berry pie, a fluffy pink Strawberry Chiffon.

Single-crust cherry pie earns an award for Mrs. C. J. Nelson; grated cheese gives it unique flavor. Double-crust pie honors go to Mrs. Homer James who created a spicy blueberry pie, inspired by pie she once ate at a famous Monterey restaurant.

Cool salads that gain Cooks' Round Table recognition on page 73 are Cool-as-a-Cucumber Salad, He-man Salad Bowl, Shrimp Salad Bowl, and Tossed Green Salad. For a cool frosty-looking mold, try Ann Green's molded cucumber salad. For a refreshing tossed salad, try Mrs. Janke's combination of shredded lettuce, sliced radishes, carrots, celery, tomatoes, and onions. Perfect with an outdoor-broiled steak!

When you want a salad that's fresh and zippy yet hearty, serve Mrs. Rouser's He-man Salad Bowl, concocted one summer evening in a mood of desperation and inspiration. Bits of spinach and lettuce, chopped onion, meat, and cheese are tossed with hot bacon-fat dressing. Another stick-to-the-ribs salad is Mrs. Speck's Shrimp Salad Bowl.

Names of these good cooks and others winning prizes are listed on our Honor Roll below.

FROM THIS ONE LEMON RECIPE!

Jaded taste buds wake up quick when you spring one of these Sunkist salad dressings on your family!

The thing that makes these seven dressings so appetizing is that they begin with that magical ingredient, fresh lemon juice! No other ingredient gives the subtlety and quality of flavor that fresh lemon juice provides. And—perhaps because lemons have a freshness that only nature can give—nothing else does so much to bring out the garden freshness of greens, vegetables and fruits.

You'll like these dressings, too, because they're so easy. Start using them on your salads now, to spark up your family's interest in these health-giving foods. And don't forget—fresh lemon itself adds a lot of health to salads by contributing its own rich store of vitamins.

Sunkist French Dressing

½ cup fresh lemon juice ½ cup salad oil
1 tsp. salt 2 tbsp. sugar

Mix together. Then, with this delicious French dressing as a base, make any of the seven variations by adding ingredients as listed at right. To have salad greens extra crisp, chill them in ice water with 1 tbsp. lemon juice added. Serve salads cold. Add dressing just before serving.

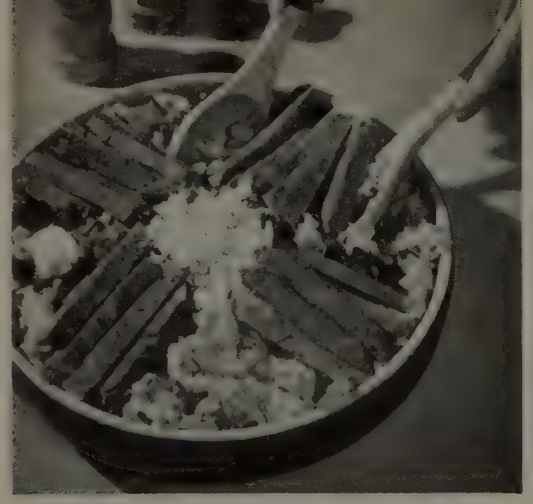
Sunkist Lemons

Lemonade-time coming!

Yes—but what's the use of waiting? Any time is the right time for the most healthful refresher of them all. Here's a new work-saving way to make it:

Squeeze a dozen or more lemons. Add sugar. Stir until dissolved. Put in covered glass jar (not metal or porcelain) in refrigerator. Juice keeps fresh flavor for days, loses almost no vitamins. Lemonade's ready any time—just add ice and water.



Time now for iced tea, too. Serve a generous lemon wedge with every glass.

FRESH LEMONS PROVIDE VERY SPECIAL HEALTH VALUES

Fresh lemons not only supply valuable amounts of vitamin B_1 but also rare vitamin P, and are among the richest sources of vitamin C. Essential for youthful energy, sound teeth and gums, vitamin C is absent from most foods, scarce in most others. You need it daily. Fresh lemons are important to health.

For the best lemons, get Sunkist in trademarked wrappers. Finest from 14,500 cooperating California and Arizona citrus growers.

- ¼ cup vinegar
- ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Break lettuce into bite-sized pieces in salad bowl. Add spinach, onion, summer sausage, bologna, and cheese. Fry bacon until crisp. Drain on absorbent paper. Add vinegar and Worcestershire sauce to bacon fat. Pour over salad and toss lightly. Serves 6 to 8.—Mrs. Don Rouser, Rhinelander, Wisconsin.

Tossed Green Salad

It's the dressing that's special—makes every leaf glisten –

- ½ head of lettuce
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- ¼ cup sliced radishes
- 1 cup sliced carrots
- ⅓ cup chopped celery
- 2 tomatoes, cut in wedges

Combine ingredients in salad bowl. Toss lightly with Crystal Salad Dressing: Combine ⅓ cup vinegar, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, and ½ teaspoon dry mustard. Heat to boiling and cook 1 minute. Cool. Stir in ¼ cup salad oil and 1 teaspoon onion juice.—Mrs. Henry Janke, Winfield, Kansas.

Shrimp Salad Bowl

With hot rolls, dessert, coffee, it's a meal—

- ½ head lettuce
- 4 radishes, sliced
- 2 small green onions, sliced
- 2 cups cooked fresh shrimp, or 1 7-ounce can tuna, flaked
- 2 tablespoons chopped dill pickle
- ½ cup diced celery
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons chili sauce
- 1 teaspoon horseradish

Break lettuce and line salad bowl. Arrange radishes, onions, shrimp, pickle, celery, and hard-cooked egg. Combine remaining ingredients; pour over salad and toss lightly. Serves 4 to 5.—Mrs. T. L. Speck, Osawatomie, Kansas.

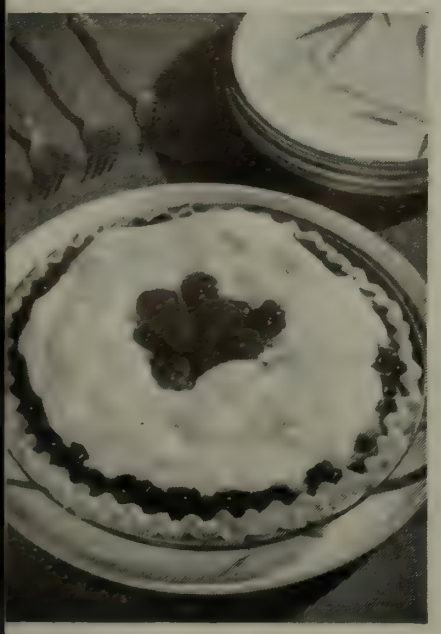
Pies

Red Raspberry Pie

It only takes a pint of berries; there's a rich cream filling underneath—

- 2 cups red or black raspberries
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 3-ounce package vanilla pudding mix
- 1 package raspberry-flavored gelatine
- 2 cups hot water
- 1 9-inch baked pastry shell



Combine berries and sugar. Let stand 30 minutes. Prepare vanilla pudding with 2 cups milk as directed on package. Cool. Dissolve gelatine in hot water. Chill until partially set. Fold in berries. Pour chilled vanilla pudding into cooled baked pastry shell. Top with fruit mixture. Chill until firm. Serve plain or with whipped cream. —Marillynn Mark, Chicago.

Crushed berries and whipped cream in a fluffy filling—

- 1½ cups crushed strawberries
- ¾ cup sugar
- 2 to 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Combine berries, sugar, and lemon juice; let stand 30 minutes. Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add to fruit mixture and chill until partially set. Fold in whipped cream. Pour into Graham Cracker Crust: Crush 12 graham crackers (1½ cups crumbs), add ⅓ cup sugar and ½ cup melted butter or shortening; mix well. Press firmly in greased 8-inch pie-pan. Chill until set. Fill.—Mrs. George A. Lorenzen, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Different Cherry Pie

You don't guess the cheese, but you know the pie's wonderful!—

- ½ cup cherry juice
- ½ cup water
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups pitted cherries
- 1 8-inch baked pastry shell
- ¾ cup grated American cheese

Combine juice, water, sugar, cornstarch, and salt; heat to boiling and cook until thick. Remove from heat and add cherries. Cool. Pour into cooled baked pastry shell which has been sprinkled with cheese. Chill. Serve with whipped cream. Serves 6.—Mrs. C. J. Nelson, Minneapolis.

Blueberry Pie

B is for blueberry with lemon and spice—

- 4 cups blueberries
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 to 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- ¼ teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1 recipe Plain Pastry

Combine blueberries, sugar, cornstarch, salt, spices, lemon juice, and peel. Fill 9-inch pastry-lined piepan. Adjust top crust. Bake in hot oven (450°) 10 minutes, then moderate oven (350°) 30 minutes.—Mrs. Homer James, Monterey, California.

Cool-As-A-Cucumber Salad

Looks cool, tastes cool—delicious with a big dinner—

- 1 3-ounce package lime-flavored gelatine
- ¾ cup hot water
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon onion juice
- 1 cup heavy sour cream, whipped, or 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 cup chopped unpeeled cucumber

Dissolve gelatine in hot water. Add lemon juice and onion juice. Chill until partially set. Fold in cream and cucumbers. Pour into 6 oiled individual molds and chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with tomato wedges. Pass mayonnaise.—Ann Green, St. Paul, Minnesota.

How to keep house

Here's a grab bag of ideas to make your household tasks quicker and less tedious

By Grace Ellis

Short cuts add up to happier housekeeping. The problem is to find the short cut.

Take some time, sit back, and think over your jobs. Where can you cut out time-consuming, tiring steps? Do you let your equipment, big and little, work for you? Your aim should be to spend time on the actual job; cut down time spent getting ready to start or putting away afterwards.

Here are 11 ideas which apply these rules. They're yours for easier, better housekeeping.

Windows, inside or out, are sparkling in no time when I let my brush, squeegee, soap, and water work for me

Don't scrub—SOAK! In many a day-after-day job suds and water, or cleaner, will work for you. Give them time. Learn when to apply water, then when to finish the wipe-up.

Don't stand and scour until the soil's ready to move. Wipe counters or cooled range with a damp cloth, then get on to something else. Come back in a few minutes and you'll discover the loosened-up spot whisks clean. Soak pots and pans during dinner.

Never rush a cleaning job. Soak or dampen, dovetailing the work with another job. Time spent in scouring and scrubbing may be three-fourths wasted.

You can apply this principle to cut down on time spent scrubbing linoleum floors. It used to take me the better part of half a day to scrub and wax kitchen, dining nook, and workroom. The dampen-and-wait method has cut it down to one hour actual work time.

Using a big, rectangular dry mop and a pan which it fits, I apply a thin layer of warm, dry suds, with 2 teaspoons of ammonia or similar cleaner in the suds, to the entire floor—no water, please, just suds. I let it relax 30 minutes and then wipe it up in clean, warm water, using the same dry mop. Two coats of non-polish wax, applied with an hour's wait in between, complete the job. I pour the wax on in thin rows, smooth it out with an applicator. Fresh newspapers always go by range and sink as spatter insurance for the first meal or two.

It was a window washer with squeegee, pail, and brush who cured me forever of rag-and-rub window washing. Now I, too, use a squeegee. With a pan of hot water plus a dash of ammonia or other cleaner, I make the rounds. The water's applied with a scrubbing brush, then removed right away with the squeegee if windows are fairly clean. Or, if soil and soot is stubborn, I wash several windows at a time, then brush over them again with clean water before using the squeegee.

"Spare" glass curtains. Two sets of glass curtains for each window is our short cut to emotionally satisfying windows. The need for fresh curtains is when days are gray, schedules harried, or the occasion festive. The best time for washing is when there's extra time and bright weather. The two don't coincide. I keep one set of curtains up till the gray day, grim week, exciting arrival. Then down with the soiled, up with the fresh. Washing waits for the right time and day. Curtains-in-waiting are stored in a closet on well-padded hangers. Such a scheme does add to your investment but it seems to multiply curtain pleasure.

Put your home canning on a production-line basis. Flat crates make good carriers

A success? Repeat it! The same menu which served once for company dinner, club meeting, or family reunion can serve again if you file successful menus with suggestions on quantities and improvements for future reference. The best hostess of my acquaintance has a complete file of special menus she's used, from tea snacks to golf club dinners. She tackles each new event with confidence and smoothness because there's a stack of memory-refreshers within reach.

Weed out those unused recipes. It was the time I discovered 10 recipes for Candied Orange Peel in my recipe collection that I vowed to check through my recipes once a year. Any recipes not used in a year had best be kept separately so that stand-bys may be found more speedily.

Cut time on "fix-it" jobs. I have a spot on the kitchen blackboard where I list things to be fixed. When I've collected several odd jobs, the same hammer, glue, oilcan, wire, step-stool, newspaper, screwdriver, cement, and can of screws may be used. It cuts the fix-it job to a third.

For automatic washer owners. To short-cut the laundry program when you have an automatic machine, vow to save time by doing like's together. It's a temptation to put a to-be-starched shirt in with not-to-be-starched bedding, but in the long run it takes more time.

Put both hands to dusting. A cloth or mitt in only one hand wastes half your dusting power. I use two dust mitts, one on each hand, so that even the fingers gripping the chair rod are semi-effective. Two hands going at once means fast dusting. And you only need to clap your hands together to shake the dust out.

Speed for the kitchen. Since the time I once watched three women spend a happy evening cutting six bunches of celery into small pieces, stalk by stalk, I reach for a cutting board and sharp knife at sight of anything which needs to be diced or chopped. To pile, brace, and slice or chop celery or rhubarb in a bunch takes a bit of skill, but it's a skill worth learning.

A whole table can be set from one or two trays and the trips cut accordingly. If you eat in the dining room, pile directly from cupboard to tray the dishes, silver, salt and peppers. Place glasses on another tray to fill just before serving. And, finally, place food on another. Remove dishes from the table and stack on a tray, then remove tray to kitchen.

Among the slickest of canning or freezing trays are flat peach and apricot crates. Scalded jam jars go in the crate. Slide the crate to the kettle to fill the jars, then carry the filled jars to the storage room. Leave in crate until cool or move from crate to shelf.

Goldilocks and the Three Spoons

ONCE upon a time Goldilocks was out buying her silverplate and she came to a store that showed her three spoons. One spoon was an ordinary spoon with no form of wear protection at all.

THE next spoon she saw was one of the extra-plated kinds. But the third spoon was something extra special. It had these

IT was a Holmes & Edwards Spoon... and like all the most used spoons and forks in this really finer silverplate—it was Inlaid with two blocks of Sterling Silver at the backs of bowls and handles to stay lovelier longer.

When she heard this, Goldilocks ran all the way home . . . with her beautiful new chest of Holmes & Edwards, of course!

THE LOVELIEST SILVERPLATE IS STERLING INLAID!

Whether your choice is Danish Princess, Youth, Lovely Lady, or the New Spring Garden, there is no lovelier, no finer silverplate at any price. 52 piece service for 8 is $68.50. All patterns made in the U.S.A.

Can you send Susie to the store?

Here are ways to teach any youngster how to become a shopper you can depend on

By Margaret Flynn

Vacation days are a good time to teach your girl or boy how to shop at the grocery store. Your youngster will have more time and interest for the project than he would during the school year. And you can time the shopping lessons to suit your convenience.

Few preschool children are able or dependable enough to run errands. But once a child has entered school, he becomes more responsible, takes better care of himself in traffic, and understands how to follow directions.

Two basic considerations underlie the learning process of going to the store—the actual know-how, or the technique of shopping, and the development of self-confidence.

Here are some helpful ideas suggested by grocers themselves:

1. Take Susie (or her brother) shopping with you several times before you expect her to go alone.

2. Show her the location of articles she is likely to get by herself later on.

3. If you buy in a self-service store, let her help you fill the order. "Susie, will you get a can of Super Corn with the green label?" or "Oh, yes, we need catsup. Please bring a bottle of the Harvest brand." She will learn the family favorites even though she can scarcely read.

4. Show her by your own actions what proper behavior is. If you have been careful in your speech and manner, she is not likely to be noisy or impudent. But if you use the touch system—pinching tomatoes or sampling grapes—she will prove an adept imitator.

5. Teach neatness and orderliness by expecting her to return undesired articles to their proper places on the shelves.

6. Show her how to get in line before the counter and stress the importance of taking her rightful turn. Respect for her elders, care for other people's property, and courteous response in conversation are traits which can be learned easily in these everyday situations.

7. Be sure the salespeople know her by name. Explain that occasionally Susie will come in alone.

8. The first time or two she goes, telephone the store beforehand and ask someone who knows her to help her. This will help Susie in her first shopping expeditions.

9. Put the money and grocery list in a little purse with a secure fastener. Although Susie may not need the list, it will be of help to the grocer or the cashier in checking the order. Do not send a large amount of money.

10. Have Susie go alone. This is especially important, grocers say. Companions are a distraction and may undo the very things you are hoping to accomplish.

11. A little treat waiting at home will discourage loitering en route and will tend to keep her attention on the job in hand. Also, there will be less temptation to spend some of the grocery money on herself.

12. Do not expect Susie to carry heavy, large, or fragile articles successfully. If breakage or loss results, it may discourage her, shatter her confidence.

13. Finally, educate her gradually to standards of quality in foodstuffs, such as firm vegetables, crisp leafy greens, and ripeness in fruit. As she grows older, she can learn measurements of quantity—the various sized cans, fractions of pounds, liquid and dry measures. Still later, teach the fundamentals of comparative shopping. These lessons in intelligent marketing will stay with your child through life.

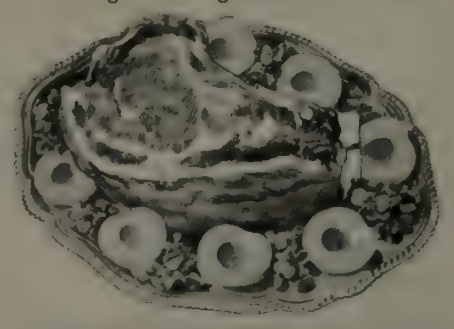
How to get fine beef every time...

Martha Logan



Swift's Home Economist, tells you

HOW TO MAKE THE MOST OF A ROAST

BUY YOUR STANDING RIB ROAST a day or two before you plan to use it. Have your meat dealer remove the short ribs and cut into 3″ pieces. Store the roast, lightly covered, in the refrigerator and serve the short ribs for a first night family treat.

BRAISED SHORT RIBS with vegetables: Season ribs; brown in hot fat. Add a little water; cover; cook slowly or bake in mod. oven (350°F.) 1½ to 2 hrs. Add salted vegetables—small onions, quartered carrots and potatoes—and more liquid, a little at a time, as needed. Cover; continue cooking until vegetables are tender.

PERFECT ROAST BEEF takes smart buying (a Swift brand name is your best guide) and careful cooking. This way reduces shrinkage, preserves juices and flavor: Place standing rib roast fat side up in an open pan. Bake in slow oven (325°F.). A 6 to 8 lb. roast takes about 22 min. per lb. for rare, 26 min. for med., 33 min. for well done. Spiced peach halves are an attractive, good-to-eat garnish.

YOU CAN COUNT ON COMPLIMENTS when you serve Swift's Branded Beef. For beef that carries a Swift brand name is the kind you always hope for—deliciously tender and juicy, perfectly marvelous tasting. As for selecting it . . . that's no problem. You simply look for a Swift brand name right on the meat. "Swift's Premium", "Swift's Select", "Swift's Arrow"—those are the three top brands. Buy by those brands and you will always get finer beef—beef your family will enjoy right down to the last tasty left-over.

SWIFT'S PREMIUM, SWIFT'S SELECT or SWIFT'S ARROW

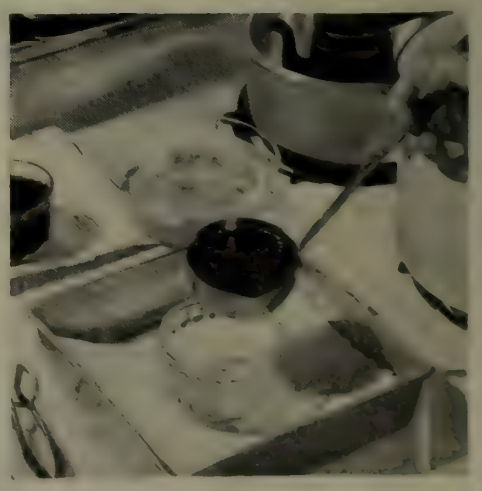
How to make strawberry jam

If you want strawberry jam—the crushed berries full-flavored, a treat on toast—follow the pictures

1 Crush 2 quarts fully ripe, washed, stemmed berries with potato masher. Crush a layer at a time as shown in picture at left



2 Measure 4 cups of the crushed fruit into saucepan. Add 7 cups sugar; mix well. Heat to full rolling boil; boil 1 minute

3 Stir in ½ bottle fruit pectin. Remove pan from heat. Stir jam and skim for 5 minutes to cool. Have jelly glasses sterilized, ready to fill—see below

4 Ladle hot jam into hot, sterilized glasses. Seal with paraffin. Next winter turn jam out in your prettiest crystal dish, have it on hot toast for breakfast, or fresh rolls for Sunday dinner

For Strawberry Preserves, see page 182

Can't beat it for a broiler Bar-B-Q

– the friendly, sunny flavor of Del Monte pineapple

Sure—you can have a dandy barbecue indoors, when it features flavor as bright as this! DEL MONTE Brand Pineapple is so gloriously rich—so refreshingly tart-sweet—it makes any meal something special.

And you can count on that sunny flavor from any member of the DEL MONTE Pineapple family—whether it's tender Sliced, handy Crushed, golden Chunks, or sparkling Juice. DEL MONTE always uses only full-ripe pineapples—fast-packs them, with typical DEL MONTE care, to capture all their tempting tropic goodness.

So choose the style to meet your need—then make DEL MONTE your brand—for flavor!

TROPIC BAR-B-BURGERS

Boil down 1 cup syrup from DEL MONTE Sliced Pineapple to ½ volume. Stir in ¼ cup DEL MONTE Chili Sauce, 2 tbsps. sliced green onions and ¼ tsp. Worcestershire sauce. Shape 1 lb. hamburger into 4 triangular patties, pressing centers thin and leaving edges about ¾" thick. Brown patties in broiler on one side; turn; press in centers with spoon. Place 4 DEL MONTE Pineapple slices in broiler; baste with drippings. Just before patties and pineapple are done, place tomato wedges in patties, spoon sauce over them, and finish broiling.

You can enjoy all these delicious styles, too—

JUICE: Natural, tempting refreshment

CHUNKS: Luscious, easy-to-eat wedges

CRUSHED: Golden and juicy—extra-handy

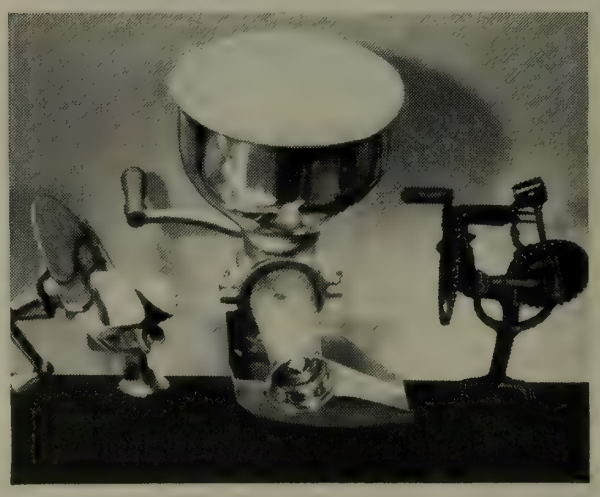
For that zippy flavor husbands love!

Add Colman's Mustard to your favorite salad dressing

Easy, quick way to add wonderful new flavor to prepared salad dressing



Blend 2 teaspoonfuls of Colman's (dry) Mustard with a little water. Then add it to an 8-ounce jar of your favorite prepared mayonnaise or French dressing. Try it tonight on a crisp green salad. Your husband will love it!

THE FAMOUS DRY MUSTARD USED BY FINE COOKS EVERYWHERE

Freezing's easier with good equipment

For a quick, neat freezing job. 1. Funnels for filling packages. One has metal frame to hold cellophane bags open. 2. Controlled temperature heat-sealers: curling-iron-type crimper; clamp type. (Electric hand iron may be used, but heat-sealing may soil soleplate.) 3. Measuring cup for syrups. 4. Large spoons, perforated ladle, scoop. 5. Labeling pencils: top, china-marking pencils; center, flannel-point pen; bottom, crayon pencil

Vegetable slicer has adjustable slicing slots to give just the thickness you want. Juicer-pureer ejects skin and seeds through opening at front. Juice or puree is forced through sieve; flows down trough. Apple and peach peeler turns fruit against sharp cutting blade

Three-piece freezing set makes quick work of cutting fruits and vegetables into lengths from 1 to 6 inches

New aids, old stand-bys in packaging and utensils make freezing quicker and better this year than ever before

By Lucy Long and Donald K. Tressler

Here's a roundup of equipment and containers that will make your freezing an even speedier operation than usual. Watch for these aids in the housewares sections of department stores. Often a locker plant stocks, or will order for you, all kinds of freezing equipment.

These are musts for freezing preparation:

A good paring knife
A sturdy, sharp-bladed butcher knife
A large, deep pan for washing fruits and for chilling blanched vegetables
Set of bowls in graduated sizes
Medium to large spoons
A marked measuring cup.

These are musts for proper blanching:

A 4- to 5-quart kettle with tight lid
A colander or mesh wire basket to hold vegetables being blanched. For steam-blanching you'll need basket with a handle that fits inside kettle with the lid in place.

Read these letters—

using your new Swans Down Instant Mix for all my cakes these days, and I o say it is "the" finest product of its n the market today. It is definitely a made" cake in a package.

Mrs. Delbert Boostrom,
Victoria, Ill.

'homemade" quality in Swans Down Cake Mix comes from using ingredi- s fine as you'd use yourself, Mrs. om. Egg whites that taste farm-fresh, ed by an exclusive process. Long-keep- -vegetable shortening. Delicate, home- avoring. And most important of all, Down Cake Flour.

irs:

Felt I should write you a note to tell w much I like your Swans Down In- Cake Mix.

d used two boxes and baked a big o take to a reunion. Everyone raved about my wonderful cake, and a lot of women came to me for the recipe. It sure didn't take me long, as I said to them, "Just go to the store and buy two boxes of Swans Down Instant Cake Mix."

Mrs. Glenn B. Barner, Lemoyne, Pa.

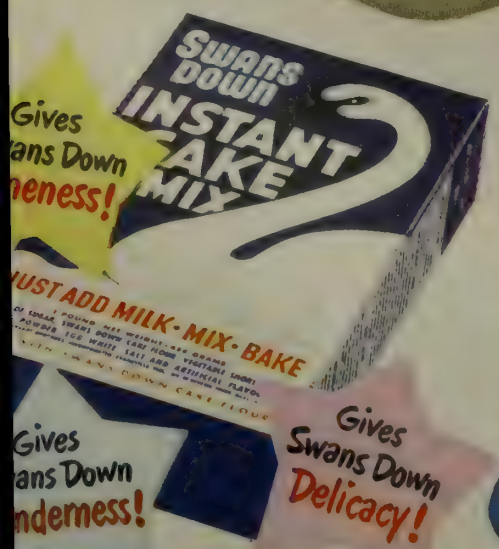
We hope, Mrs. Barner, that your friends won't all start using two boxes at a time. We have a hard time keeping stores stocked!

Dear Sirs:

I am a mother with two children and one is just a baby. So you see, it's hard to make cakes the old way, as it takes away valuable time. But now it's 1-2-3 and you have a cake, and I must say it's even better than one can make herself.

Mrs. John Yanuzzi,
Cleveland, O.



When you say it beats your own, Mrs. Yanuzzi, you're in good company—a lot of prize-winning cakemakers say the same.

lere there ever such aves about a mix?

1 box Swans Down Instant Cake Mix
1 cup milk

For glorious white cake, add ½ cup milk to contents of box, blend, beat 1 minute. Add remaining milk, beat 2 minutes. Bake, following package directions. For other delicious variations, see recipes in box.

New freezing packages

End-opening containers come in large and small sizes. Inside each are Pliofilm, plastic, or cellophane bags to protect contents. You fill the inner bag with blanched vegetable, heat-seal it, and fold as shown

Flat, tray-type package is made of lightweight aluminum. Lid is crimped on by holding wood sealing block in recessed top while running a crimper around edge as shown. To open, you pull on tab at one end of lid

Cellophane bag has been sealed on the inside of the folding container to protect the Lima beans. Cylindrical package, right, with the fit-on lid is specially lined to keep moisture and vapors where they belong

Transparent plastic container, lower left, and plastic lid of heavily waxed carton show contents. To re-use, wash them in lukewarm, soapy water. Strawberries, frozen with stems on, will be used for garnishes

Wide-mouthed, straight-sided glass jars are well adapted to freezing. Whole strawberries are frozen in glass jars in a heavy sugar syrup. When the time comes to use the strawberries, they'll be easy to remove

Heavy aluminum foil makes an excellent wrapping for unevenly shaped foods. This ham, already baked, will go into the freezer for a future dinner-in-a-hurry. Make double-fold closure for the most effective seal

Pliofilm, a rubber derivative which won't become brittle at low temperatures, is used here to wrap a chicken. It is pliable and elastic which means that Pliofilm can be drawn tightly around irregular shapes

Tubular stockinette goes over plastic wrapping. Tie both ends of stockinette tightly so that wrapping will be held close to chicken. This type of packaging is good for freezing meats or other odd-shaped foods

What to look for in a freezing package

1. Is it moistureproof-vaporproof? This means that no air or vapors from inside the package can get out, and vice versa. If the package doesn't meet this requirement, there may be off-odors, lack of flavor, and the food may dry out. The best materials are glass; aluminum foil; tin or other metals; moistureproof cellophane, rubber, or plastic; heavily waxed paperboard; and heavily coated vegetable parchment paper. Sometimes, when a paper is not sufficiently moistureproof-vaporproof itself, it will be fused to another material, such as cellophane. Ordinary ice cream containers should be used only for ice cream.

2. Is it easy to use? The package should be simple to fill or wrap. When you're ready to use the frozen food, it should be easy to remove the wrapping. A good-sized top opening makes filling easier. A straight-sided container simplifies removal. [Turn to page 90

3. Will packages stack well in freezer? If they do, there is less danger of the packages falling. Also, the contents can be classified by stacks, making the food easier to find.

4. Does it make maximum use of freezer space? About twice as many rectangular or square containers will fit into a given space as round containers. If your freezer is small, this will be an important consideration.

Freezing summer's first fruits and vegetables

Strawberries

Sparkle and Vanrouge are two new and excellent varieties especially developed for freezing. They have a deep red color, pronounced flavor.

1. Pick fully ripe but firm sweet berries uniformly red throughout.
2. Wash in water containing plenty of ice; wash before stemming to prevent loss of juice.
3. Combine stemming, sorting, and slicing operations, slicing berries ⅜ inch thick lengthwise to show shape of berry. Work with about 4 or 5 pounds of fruit at a time.
4. To this amount of fruit, add 1 pound granulated sugar.
5. Stir together gently until enough juice is drawn from slices, partly dissolving sugar and forming a natural syrup to cover slices.
6. Fill freezing containers, allowing ½ to ¾ inch headspace for freezing expansion. Close package; label with contents, date. Freeze.

Note: Whole strawberries with syrup is an alternate method. Instead of slicing berries, as in Step 3 above, fill freezing containers with whole berries to within ¾ inch of top and cover with ½ to ¾ cup heavy syrup (amount depending upon size of berries). Prepare syrup by mixing 4 cups extra-sweet corn syrup with 1 cup cold water, or by dissolving 3½ cups granulated sugar per pint of hot water and allowing to cool before using.

Rhubarb

1. Choose fully ripe, well-colored stalks.
2. Wash in cold water.
3. Cut in 1-inch lengths.
4. Fill freezing containers full, close, freeze.

Note: Cut-up rhubarb may be water-blanched for 90 seconds and then frozen, or the sweetened sauce cooked and cooled, then frozen.

Asparagus

1. Cut 2 inches below ground when stalks are 6 to 8 inches high. Prepare immediately for freezer.
2. Wash asparagus in running cold water. Scrub base of stalks with stiff vegetable brush to remove soil particles under scales.
3. Separate stalks into small and large for blanching purposes.
4. Cut up stalks prior to blanching: whole spears from tips of stalks, cutting tips to fit length of freezing package; 1-inch lengths from mid-section of stalks for cut-up vegetable; remainder near base, except white woody end, into pieces and pressure-cook for soup base.
5. Blanching by steam saves more flavor and nutrients in asparagus. Steam-blanch small stalks (tips or cut up) 3½ minutes; large stalks, 4½ minutes. If you prefer, water-blanch small stalks 3 minutes; large stalks, 4 minutes.
6. Chill 3 to 5 minutes in cold running water, drain for a few seconds.
7. A top-opening, flat, rectangular package is best for packaging whole spears. Any type of vegetable freezing carton is suitable for cut-up vegetable.

Spinach

A more tender spinach is usually obtained in spring than in the fall.

1. Cut when leaves are young and tender.
2. Wash thoroughly in cold running water to rid leaves of soil.
3. Steam-blanching is not suited to greens since leaves mat together. So water-blanch about 1 pound at a time for 2½ minutes, moving basket or colander up and down in boiling water constantly to prevent matting and assure uniform blanching. Clock blanching time only from time water resumes boiling after vegetables have been immersed.
4. Chill immediately in running cold water for at least 5 minutes.
5. Squeeze out excess moisture.
6. Package in any type of vegetable freezing container.

Peas

Thomas Laxton is the best variety for freezing. Freezonian is a new variety which is recommended in regions where Thomas Laxton may be difficult to grow. However, any deep green, large-seeded home-garden variety will give a good frozen product.

1. Do not freeze old, starchy peas. Tender, slightly immature ones are better for the freezer.
2. Pod 4 or 5 pounds at a time; do not wash after podding.
3. Water-blanch about 1 pound at a time. The time depends on the size of pea. Blanch small peas for 45 seconds; large peas, 60 seconds. If you prefer to steam-blanch the peas, small peas will take 90 seconds; large peas, 2 minutes.
4. Chill immediately in cold running water 3 minutes. Drain.
5. Fill any type of vegetable freezing container full, close package, label. Freeze immediately.

Blouses of rayon jersey or nylon may be dried on sweater frames to shape them and smooth out wrinkles

Trousers, shorts, skirts

In using conventional washer, fold pants smoothly seam to seam and put through wringer, legs first. Fold skirts with buttons on inside before wringing. In automatic washer, clothes come out with all excess moisture removed and ready to hang.

Clothespin blue jeans, slacks, work pants, shorts, and skirts to line along waistband. Hang dress-up trousers from a pants' hanger or on special stretchers that fit into the legs. When dried properly, pants will need only a quick press.

Dresses, blouses, jackets, coats

If you have conventional washer, fold dresses, blouses, etc., shoulder to shoulder; lay sleeves down across garment, and put through wringer top first. If you have automatic washer or spinner, give garments a shake to remove all the wrinkles, and hang.

Some garments you'll clothespin to the line; others should be dried on hangers. If a garment is heavily starched or of a material requiring thorough ironing, you can save time by clothespinning it to the line. However, putting nylon, rayon jersey, silk, or unstarched sheer blouses on hangers or sweater frames is well worth the extra hanging time. When almost dry, give a quick press; you've cut out tedious ironing.

Coats, jackets, and seersucker or unstarched dresses also dry most wrinkle-free on hangers. Pad shoulders and sleeves with towels or white tissue paper; smooth collar and hem. If finishing touches are needed, take from line while still slightly damp and press.

Sheets, pillowcases

Hang as on page 67. When you take pillowcases from line, fold in thirds with hem on top ready for the sweep of the iron.

When you take sheets from line, fold them carefully into fourths. Then just iron top quarter where hem will be turned back on bed

Slipcovers

Hang as on page 66. Put back on chair or sofa slightly damp, and smooth into place. Press pleats with fingers. When dry, you may wish to remove and iron pleats. Rest of cover will have molded, ironed appearance.

Slips, panties, nightgowns

Hang panties and slips or strap-type nightgowns as shown on page 66. Nightgowns with sleeves dry nicely on hangers. Correct hanging will rule out ironing in most cases.

Gloves

Insert clothespins into the fingers so they'll keep their shape while drying. When they are dry, iron them by trying them on and smoothing them to your hands.

Socks

Hang socks by their feet; not by the tops. Smooth with hands; do not iron.

Cotton tips

1. If using a conventional washer, put clothes through wringer flat, in straight lengthwise folds. This keeps their shape best. Wringing tightly or twisting adds wrinkles, strains material.

2. Give garment a good shake before hanging, to remove folds. After hanging, straighten collar and smooth out any wrinkles.

3. Hang clothes outside in a breeze to help "iron out" material.

4. If ironing is necessary, take garments from line or dryer when damp dry. You won't need to sprinkle or roll them (rolling tightly adds new wrinkles). Iron right away, or fold flat in an oilcloth-lined basket and cover with a damp towel or sheet. Pieces that must stand longer than overnight should be put in the refrigerator.

5. Items that don't require ironing should dry thoroughly. The ones on hangers will be ready for the closet. The others should be folded neatly into basket ready for drawers or shelves.

Rayon tips

1. Do not wring. Roll rayons to be ironed loosely in a Turkish towel and squeeze gently, or damp-dry in automatic washer. Iron right away on wrong side.

2. Dry rayon jersey dresses or blouses, and knit slips or nightgowns, on towel-covered flat surface. A piece of plastic screening laid across a clothes rack is a good drying surface—provides circulation, speedy drying.

3. While knit rayon garment is still damp, pat to prewashing shape and measurements. Outline garment on paper or old sheet before washing, for a handy guide. Or, if you have an adjustable sweater-drying frame, you can dry a blouse to proper shape on it. After shaping and smoothing, no ironing is usually necessary.

4. If garment is nylon, hang very wet on hanger or stretcher with towel between front and back of garment. Weight of moisture pulls wrinkles out. Blot the lower edges now and then as water runs down. Ironing isn't usually needed. You may smooth out any slight wrinkles with warm, not hot, iron.

Hamburgers—better than ever

For uniform-size patties, fill a 1/4- or 1/3-cup measure with hamburger, press lightly. Turn out on waxed paper; flatten in one of two ways shown below. This way you'll always get the same number of patties from one pound of meat, and all patties will be same size and shape

For thick burgers, use flat-bottomed custard cup or a broad mallet to press hamburger mounds in shape. Press lightly to make fat burgers. Job's done in one motion. Having a party? Make patties in advance, stack with waxed-paper squares between, and store in the refrigerator

For thin burgers, place meat between waxed-paper squares. Flatten with rolling pin. Keep in refrigerator till ready to use. Frozen burgers come already flattened between paper dividers. Handy to store, quick to fix

Basic Burger Recipe

1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons minced onion
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Pepper

Combine ingredients; mix thoroughly. Shape into 6 to 8 patties.

Double-decker Burgers

1 pound ground beef
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
¼ cup catsup
½ to ⅔ cup chopped onion
10 slices bacon

Combine meat, egg, seasonings, and catsup; mix well. Form in 10 thin oblong patties, the shape of Coney buns. Put meat patties together, sandwich-fashion, with chopped onion between. Press edges together; wrap each double-decker with 2 bacon slices and fasten each end with a toothpick. Preheat broiler. Place patties on rack 3 to 5 inches from heat. Broil about 5 minutes on each side. Makes 5 double patties.

Stuffed Burgers

1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup dry bread crumbs
½ cup milk
1 recipe bread stuffing
2 tablespoons fat
1 10½ or 11-ounce can condensed tomato soup
½ cup water

Combine meat, seasonings, bread crumbs, and milk. Mix well. Make into 12 thin patties about 4 inches in diameter. Make Bread Stuffing: Combine 2 cups soft bread crumbs, ¼ cup chopped onion, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 1½ teaspoons salt, pinch of pepper, ½ to 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning, 2 tablespoons melted fat. Add enough water or soup stock to moisten slightly; mix lightly. Place 1 tablespoon stuffing between two patties and press edges together securely. Brown in hot fat. Mix tomato soup and water; pour over burgers. Cover. Simmer 45 minutes. Serves 6.

Barbecue Burger Mix

1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped celery
1 8-ounce can (1 cup) tomato sauce
¼ cup catsup
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Brown meat in hot fat; add vegetables. Cook until vegetables are tender. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Cover. Simmer 20 minutes. Spoon on hamburger buns. Serves 6.

Burgers in Biscuits

2 cups prepared biscuit mix
½ to ⅔ cup milk
5 or 6 canned hamburger patties

Prepare biscuit dough as directed on package. Roll about ¼ inch thick; cut 10 or 12 rounds 2½ to 3 inches in diameter. Place hamburger patties on half of biscuits, top with other halves, and seal edges with fork. Bake on greased cooky sheet in hot oven (450°) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 5 or 6. Serve with Barbecue Sauce: Combine ¼ cup finely chopped small onion, ⅓ cup finely chopped sweet pickles, ¼ cup vinegar, 1 cup catsup, 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, salt and pepper. Simmer 10 minutes.

Glamorous Chiffon Cake!

AMERICA'S MOST TALKED-ABOUT CAKE!
Extra-light! Extra-luscious!

ALLEGRETTI CHIFFON

Heat oven to 325° (slow moderate). Coarsely grate 1½ sq. (1½ oz.) chocolate (sweet or unsweetened).

1. In first bowl, sift together:

1⅛ cups (1 cup plus 2 tbsp.) sifted Softasilk cake flour (spoon lightly—don't pack)
⅞ cup (¾ cup plus 2 tbsp.) sugar
1½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt

Make a well and add these:

¼ cup Wesson Oil
2 unbeaten egg yolks (medium)
⅜ cup (¼ cup plus 2 tbsp.) cold water
1 tsp. vanilla
grated rind 1 orange (about 1½ tbsp.)

Beat with spoon until smooth.

2. In large second bowl, put:

½ cup egg whites (4)
¼ tsp. cream of tartar

Beat into stiff peaks, stiffer than for meringue. DO NOT UNDERBEAT.

3. Pour egg yolk mixture gradually over beaten egg whites, gently folding with rubber scraper just until blended. DON'T STIR. Sprinkle with grated chocolate; fold in with a few strokes. Pour immediately into ungreased loaf pan (5" x 10" x 3"). Bake 50-55 minutes at 325°, or until top springs back when lightly touched. Turn pan upside down, resting edges on 2 other pans; let hang free of table. When cold, loosen sides with spatula; turn pan over and hit edge sharply on table to loosen. Frost with—

ALLEGRETTI ICING: Cream 3 tbsp. vegetable shortening (such as Snowdrift)—or butter; blend in 1 egg yolk. Stir in 2 tbsp. cream, 2 cups sifted confectioners' sugar, 1 tsp. vanilla, beat well. Add more cream if needed. Frost cake. Melt 1½ sq. (1½ oz.) chocolate with ¼ tsp. Wesson Oil over hot water; cool slightly. Pour over top...let chocolate trickle down sides.

THE most sophisticated cake you can serve is Chiffon! Entirely new! Frothy as angel food, yet different...rich, moist and luscious! All Betty Crocker's* Chiffon recipes call for light, mild Wesson Oil. So—to have that special texture and delicate flavor your Chiffon cake—use Wesson Oil. Clear, sparkling Wesson Oil is famous for making other good things to eat, too, such as crisp and digestible fried foods and delicious home-made salad dressings

SHRIMP SALAD CREOLE
Grand with this home-made Wesson Dressing

Thinly slice 2 green onions, including tops—mince ¼ cup celery. Add ¼ cup delicate Wesson Oil, 1 tbsp. prepared mustard, 2 tbsp. lemon juice, ½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper; beat together. Add ½ lb. cooked fresh shrimp or 1 can shrimp; toss well. Cover; chill 2 hours, so the shrimp have the smooth zest of the Wesson Oil dressing. Mix lightly before you place the shrimp on crisp shredded lettuce. 3 servings. Delicious with potato chips. This will be a "request salad" all summer, so crisp, so naturally good-tasting, thanks to Wesson Oil, America's favorite Salad Oil!

By Beth Curtis

Parsley is a warm weather way to crisp-looking dishes and to fresh garden flavor. The bright green sprigs make your plainest foods colorful. But don't forget that parsley is full of flavor, too. Photographs and ideas, at left and below, show you ways to make food both gayer and tastier with parsley.

Parsley dumplings. Add chopped parsley to dumpling mixture. Spoon over your favorite stew or meat pie.

Chef's soup. Simmer a bunch of parsley with vegetable soup. Remove before serving. Or cook in spaghetti sauce.

Garden-style carrots. Add chopped parsley and melted butter to cooked carrots.

Spread creamed butter combined with chopped parsley on French rolls or bread slices. Sprinkle with grated cheese if you wish. Heat in oven.

Summer cheese balls. Roll cream cheese balls in chopped parsley. Use for relish plate or salads.

Party deviled eggs. Tuck a tiny sprig of parsley in one end of each deviled egg half.

Meat shortcake. Cut a hole in the top biscuit of individual 2-biscuit shortcakes with a doughnut cutter. When biscuits are baked, spoon creamed chicken or ham between the two biscuits. Stick a little bunch of parsley in the hole in the top of the shortcake for a fresh green summer garnish.

Parsley pinwheels. Cut thin slices lengthwise of loaf of bread; trim crusts. Spread with softened butter; sprinkle with chopped parsely. Starting at one end, roll slices; seal open end with butter. Wrap in waxed paper; chill; slice.

Snappy tartare sauce. To 1 cup mayonnaise add 1 tablespoon each of chopped parsley and chopped dill pickle, 1 teaspoon each of minced pimiento and horse-radish.

Short cuts to fluffy parsley

Chopped parsley. Remove parsley stems; put leaves in a cup. Snip with scissors. To store parsley, cut bundle loose. Wash in cold water; shake to remove excess water. Keep in covered container in refrigerator. Dry thoroughly between two pieces of paper toweling before using.

Fluffy parsley. Roll parsley snips in a paper towel. Give the towel a sharp twist. Parsley stays fluffy and will keep its bright green color.

Home furnishings answers

Q. Should I use lace antimacassars on my overstuffed furniture? Mrs. S. P., Daytona Beach, Florida.

A. No, lace antimacassars simply give your room a dated look. With the cleaning products on the market today, it's an easy matter to freshen up upholstery. Slipcovers are a better way to keep upholstery clean—and they're smarter.

Q. What is the best way to clean books? Mrs. E. F., Akron, Ohio.

A. Dust the edges of the book pages with a clean paintbrush or with the brush attachment of a vacuum cleaner. Wipe the bindings with a perfectly clean cloth. (An oiled duster will soil the bindings.) Then dust the bookshelves before you put the books back.

Q. Should stair and hall carpets have the same color or design? Mrs. L. D., Hartford, Connecticut.

A. Your stairs will blend better with your hall if you use the same colors and designs in stair and hall carpet. If you already have a rug on your hall floor, you would be wise to choose stair carpeting in a plain color that ties in with one of the colors in the hall rug.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ICE INDUSTRIES

From soup to dessert,

They're all made

You'll stir extra richness and healthfulness into your summer meals when you cook with milk

By Frances Meyer

You start with a bottle of milk and, several ingredients later, have velvety-smooth white sauce; a savory casserole; or a mellow, creamy dessert. Let milk play the right-hand man in your meal plans this summer. Now, when it's most plentiful, is a good time to take advantage of milk's versatility and wholesome food value. We give you seven ways to bring milk into your daily meals—from soup to dessert.

Milk is perishable

Milk comes to you fresh and pure—keep it that way. As soon as milk arrives in the kitchen, run cool water over bottles or wipe with a damp cloth and put them in the refrigerator. Keep milk there except when you're actually using it. Rotate bottles in the refrigerator, too, so that day-old milk is used before starting on a new quart. Use leftover poured milk for cooking.

Chicken Cream Soup. Your hot-weather salad meal takes on extra appeal when you serve this rich, creamy soup as a first course. And it's ready in no time—you merely open the can, add an equal amount of milk, and heat. Just before soup goes to the table, top each serving with a fluff of whipped cream and sprinkle on a little chopped parsley with milk

Jonquil Pudding. Here's fluffy tapioca pudding in a two-tone version. One half of pudding is made with egg whites; the other with yolks for yellow and white effect. Walnut halves top servings

Peas and Mushrooms Royal combines fresh green peas with crisp bits of bacon, chopped onions, and broiled mushrooms in a creamy white sauce. Buttered carrots or asparagus spears center the platter

Chicken Cream Soup

1 10½-ounce can cream of chicken soup
1⅓ cups milk
¼ cup heavy cream, whipped
Chopped parsley

Add milk to soup, blend. Heat slowly to simmering. Pour into individual soup bowls or cups. Top with whipped cream and chopped parsley. Serves 4. If larger servings are desired, double the recipe

Jonquil Pudding

White part
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
2 stiff-beaten egg whites
½ teaspoon vanilla

Yellow part
2 beaten egg yolks
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt

White Part: Mix tapioca, sugar, and salt; add milk. Heat to boiling over direct heat, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; mixture will be thin. Fold hot mixture into egg whites. Cool slightly. Add vanilla. Cool

Yellow Part: Mix egg yolks with small amount of milk; add tapioca, sugar, salt, and remaining milk. Heat quickly to boiling over direct heat, stirring constantly. Cool. Spoon white and yellow parts alternately into tall glasses. Jonquil Pudding recipe serves 8.

Peas and Mushrooms Royal

4 slices bacon, chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 6-ounce can (1½ cups) broiled mushrooms, sliced
1 tablespoon enriched flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
1 cup whole milk
2 cups fresh garden peas, cooked

Fry bacon in skillet, remove, and add onion and mushrooms. Cook until onion is golden. Stir in flour and seasonings. Gradually add milk. Cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Add peas and chopped bacon. Serve hot in Toast Cups: Press thin slices of soft bread, buttered side down, in muffin cups, then toast in moderate oven (375°) until lightly browned. Serves 6

Coconut Refrigerator Dessert

1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
3 slightly beaten egg yolks
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup hot milk
½ teaspoon almond extract
½ cup shredded coconut
3 stiff-beaten egg whites
1 recipe Graham Cracker Crust
¼ cup chopped, toasted almonds
¼ cup toasted shredded coconut

Soften gelatine in cold water. Combine egg yolks, sugar, and salt; gradually stir in milk. Cook in double boiler over hot, not boiling, water, until mixture coats a spoon, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add gelatine mixture. Stir to dissolve. Chill until partially set. Add almond extract and ½ cup coconut. Fold in egg whites. Pour into 9-inch piepan lined with Graham Cracker Crust: Mix 1½ cups cracker crumbs, ⅓ cup brown sugar, and ½ cup melted butter or fortified margarine; press firmly in greased 9-inch piepan. Chill until set, about 45 minutes. Fill; chill. Sprinkle with toasted coconut and toasted almonds just before serving.

Cheese Noodle Ring With Curried Shrimp Sauce

1 8-ounce package noodles
⅓ cup dry bread crumbs
1 cup grated American cheese
2½ cups milk
4 slightly beaten eggs
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Cook noodles in boiling, salted water; rinse and drain. Alternate layers of noodles, crumbs, and cheese, in greased 2-quart ring mold. Combine other ingredients; pour over noodles. Bake in pan—1 inch hot water surrounding—in moderate oven (350°) about 45 minutes. Serves 6.

Curried Shrimp Sauce

¼ cup melted butter or fortified margarine
¼ cup enriched flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of paprika
½ to 1 teaspoon curry
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons catsup
1½ cups cleaned shrimp
Sherry flavoring, if desired

Blend butter, flour, and seasonings; gradually stir in milk. Cook until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Add catsup, shrimp, and sherry flavoring, if desired; heat through. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serves 6.

All-American Chocolate Malt

½ cup heavy cream
6 tablespoons malted milk powder
¼ cup chocolate sundae syrup or chocolate sauce
1½ cups milk
1 quart vanilla ice cream

Whip cream; add malted milk powder and mix well. Add chocolate syrup and milk and blend well. Beat in ice cream with electric mixer or rotary beater. Serves 4.

Rosy Vanilla Whip

1 package raspberry-flavored gelatine
2 cups water
1 package vanilla pudding
2 cups milk

Prepare the raspberry-flavored gelatine with 2 cups water as directed on package. Prepare the vanilla pudding with 2 cups milk as directed on package. Chill gelatine until slightly thickened. Chill pudding. Place bowl of gelatine in bowl of ice and water and whip with rotary beater until fluffy and the consistency of whipped cream. Add pudding gradually, beating constantly until blended. Turn into sherbet glasses or large serving dish. Chill until firm. Garnish with cubes of clear gelatine or fresh fruit. Makes 8 servings. Note: Try other flavors of gelatine, too, for variety.

If you could measure the filth in your sink drain...

...would you find solid inches of muck?

In many a sink drain this nasty grease collects, making a home for filthy sewer germs only inches from the family's food and dishes!

You can't get rid of this grease with liquid disinfectants. It takes Drāno to boil out those solid inches of filth and chase it down your drain.

Do this once a week, every week: Put a tablespoon of Drāno in your drain!

Drāno's special churning, boiling action scours out this greasy muck—takes it away with all the germs that breed in it! It keeps your drain clean, clear, always fast-running!

P.S. Remember—Drāno also opens clogged drains in a flash!

My ironing magic. It's an all-purpose work counter. Our home-made all-purpose counter stands 32 inches high, is 30 inches wide and 8 feet long. It's padded as an ironing board. Topped with oilcloth it's a sorting board and useful at canning and freezing time. With oilcloth rolled and padding folded it's a rumpus room picnic table.

Cut time spent on "fix-it" jobs by doing several at once. Keep track of odd jobs on the kitchen blackboard

Buttons. Anchor on when they first pop off and they're buttons saved. Needles kept threaded on a pincushion mean that it takes no more time to tack the button on than to fasten with a pin. Post pincushion with other sewing supplies so you always know where to find it.

Take a look. Families change. Tastes and hobbies are outgrown. House-cleaning season is the time to survey each bit of bric-a-brac, each old book, picture, and bridge prize, with a questioning eye. If it were tucked in the closet or thrown away, would it ever be missed? How long since it's given pleasure or been really used? Collect a clothesbasket of things from drawers, walls, and tables. Clean and pack away. See how long before anyone notices. What a shame to leave something about, taking up space, if it no longer gives pleasure.

Range-side working space? You need a place to slice onions to put directly into the skillet, a place to line up seasonings or packages within reach of range. If your kitchen lacks enough counter space, pull-out boards will help. Or you may use one of the convenient roll-around worktables shown in last month's Better Homes & Gardens, page 71

Tools near range? You save steps if you can reach for a fork, pancake turner, wooden spoon, spatula, or potato masher without moving. Partitioned drawer is one answer. Or you may prefer hanging the tools on a wall rack over the range, or on hooks inside the cabinet door

A place for serving dishes by your range? Range-side serving area lets you line up platter and bowls to receive hot food. You may get added convenience from a breakfast bar running along back of the range since it can be used for either eating or plate-serving space

"Personally, I prefer Columbia Venetian Blinds," she said

Many a home decorating expert has made that remark to young couples starting to furnish, to settled folks wanting a change for the better. The reasons are easy to understand:

- Columbia's decorative, rich-looking appearance makes you proud to own them.
- Columbia's enamel-coated slats (aluminum, or steel) are a joy to keep spotless.
- Columbia's satin-smooth working parts, completely enclosed in the handsome headbox, are superbly efficient, long-lasting.
- Columbia's "famous-fourteen" colors fit harmoniously into any color scheme, any furniture period.

The name "Columbia" on these Venetian Blinds is our promise of a product you'll be proud to own. Why not stop in to see these fine blinds at your nearest Columbia Authorized Dealer—the leading department and furniture stores and shade shops in your town.

Long work counter? It should be at least 24 inches. You need one unbroken counter roomy enough to lay out ingredients and put a meal together without feeling cramped. But too long a counter makes too many steps between major appliances; we suggest 48 inches as the maximum. Area between refrigerator and sink is best spot—ingredients and water are both within reach

Mixing aids on the spot? Battery of partitioned drawers under food preparation area saves useless steps. Top drawer can hold knives and small tools like can opener and spatula. Other drawers may furnish compartments for rolling pin, pastry blender, cooky cutters, salad and dessert molds

A place for each dish? Or do you have to stack plates mile high and juggle dishes to get what you need? Can you add extra shelves and divisions to organize your space better? The photograph shows one way to partition a cabinet. The cabinets are available in many convenient new designs

A ventilator? Located over range, it whisks away cooking odors and smoke, helps prevent film settling on the walls. Here's one type. Air is drawn through grill front; fan inside blows it out. Kitchen ventilating fans can be easily installed

Party tricks with butter

Butter in fancy molds • Butter balls, curls, roll-ups • Honey butter • Garlic butter logs

To make fancy butter molds, pour boiling water over wooden molds; then drop them into ice water. Knead pieces of butter under ice water until pliable. Place butter in bottom half of mold. Put on top half of mold as shown, above left. Press chilled halves of mold together. Scrape off excess butter with knife so there won't be any waste

Open mold. Butter looks like sheaf of wheat. Molds, front row, are shaped like a chicken. Keep in refrigerator

1 To make butter balls, pour boiling water over wooden paddles. Let paddles stand in hot water a half minute, then dunk 'em in ice water

2 Cut 1-inch square pats about ⅓ inch thick. (Put piece of butter wrapper over knife to cut.) Butter should be firm but not crumbly. Shape pats into balls with fingers, then roll between paddles. Hold bottom paddle steady. Roll ball with top paddle using light circular motion. Put paddles in ice water after each use. Drop butter balls in ice water

To make butter curls, dip butter curler (gadget in picture) into warm water. Pull curler lightly over a pound or ¼-pound stick of butter. Butter should be firm but not too cold, or curls will break. Curls should be about ⅛ inch thick. Dip curler in warm water after making each curl

GET WINDOWS WITH

Thermopane

. . . they stay in the year 'round

Why include years of ladder climbing and wrestling with storm sash in the plans for your new home?

There's an easier way to insulate your windows . . . *Thermopane—two panes of glass with dry air sealed between. Almost any type of wood or metal window you choose—double-hung, casement or others—are available with Thermopane. They open and close just like sash with ordinary single panes.

But what a difference—in year-round comfort. In fuel savings. Freedom from downdrafts. Freedom from frosted or steam-covered panes.

With Thermopane you enjoy all these benefits—plus the lazy satisfaction of never giving a thought or muscle to storm sash. And your window washing is cut in half.

Talk to your builder and architect about putting Thermopane in every window of your house when you build or remodel. Write for our book about this really modern windowpane.

To make butter roll-ups, cut pats 1/3 inch thick. Dip paring knife into hot water. Shave opposite corners toward center as shown above. Hold knife at a sharp angle so butter will curl. Tuck a tiny piece of parsley in each open end or on top where the folded corners meet

Whipped butter is specially good with pancakes, waffles, or biscuits and is a gala butter stretcher, too. To make it, cream butter with a wooden spoon, or better still, with your electric mixer, till it's light and fluffy. For Whipped Honey Butter, add honey gradually to butter as you beat it. You will need 1/2 cup honey for each 3/4 cup butter

To make garlic butter logs, crush a clove of garlic with a pinch of salt. Cream in 1/2 cup butter. Shape in log; roll in minced parsley. Wrap in waxed paper and chill. Serve on filet mignon or hamburgers. With fish, serve Lemon Butter Logs: 1/2 cup butter, 2 tablespoons lemon juice

Golden Lemon Cake

- 1⅛ cups cake flour (1 cup plus 2 tablespoons)
- ¾ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ cup salad oil
- 2 unbeaten egg yolks
- ⅜ cup cold water (¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- ½ cup egg whites (4)
- ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar

Sift dry ingredients into mixing bowl; make a well in dry ingredients. Add salad oil, egg yolks, and grated lemon peel in order given. Beat until satin smooth. Combine egg whites and cream of tartar in large mixing bowl. Beat until they form very stiff peaks (stiffer than for meringue or angel cake). Fold egg-yolk batter gradually into egg whites. Bake in 8- or 9-inch square pan in moderate oven (350°) 30 to 35 minutes. Split in layers. Spoon Strawberry Ice Cream between layers and on top. Top with whole or half strawberries.

Strawberry Ice Cream

- 1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine
- ¼ cup cold water
- 2 well-beaten egg yolks
- ¾ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla
- 2 cups crushed strawberries
- 2 cups top milk or light cream

- 2 egg whites
- ¼ cup sugar

Soften gelatine in cold water; dissolve over hot water. Combine egg yolks, sugar, salt, vanilla, berries, and top milk. Add dissolved gelatine. Mix thoroughly. Freeze firm in refrigerator tray. Beat egg whites; gradually add the ¼ cup sugar; continue beating until stiff, and sugar is dissolved. Break frozen mixture in chunks with wooden spoon; turn into chilled bowl; beat fluffy-smooth with electric or rotary beater. Fold in egg-white mixture. Return quickly to cold tray; freeze firm. Serves 8 to 10.

Strawberry Glaze Pie

You will need 1 quart strawberries. To 3 cups of the whole, big berries, add ½ cup confectioners' sugar. Let stand 1 hour. Crush the remaining 1 cup smaller berries and cook with 1 cup water about 2 minutes. Sieve. Mix 1½ tablespoons cornstarch with ½ to ¾ cup granulated sugar, according to natural sweetness of berries. Stir into the berry juice. Cook gently until clear, stirring constantly. Add a little red food coloring if needed. Fill cooled, baked 8-inch pie shell with the berries. Pour hot sauce over. Cool. Spoon fluffy whipped cream around the edge of the pie.

Raspberry Floating Island

Beat 2 egg yolks and 1 whole egg with ¼ cup sugar until lemon-colored; pour 2 cups scalded milk slowly over eggs. Cook in double boiler until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Remove from heat immediately and cool; add 1 tea-

Sooner or later comes the time when your last son or daughter leaves. Then begins a new life together that can give you the most rewarding companionship you've ever known

When you have only each other

By Georgia Reed

The confetti was gone. Jim and I had used the vacuum cleaner everywhere we could and the broom where we couldn't. We had used dusters and damp cloths and mops, upstairs and down. And, when the rake left sparkling trails of confetti behind it, we took the vacuum cleaner out on the grass.

Now the confetti—like our twin daughters on their cross-country honeymoon—was gone; the double wedding we had lived and breathed for was over, and Jim and I were at liberty to take up normal life again.

So, after supper that first night in a tidy house, Jim lit the fire in the living room and, gathering up the paper, sank into his big chair. I tucked a pillow under the small of my back and settled down on the couch with a book that a neighbor had lent me—how long ago I hated to think. The sound of the crackling fire, broken only by the occasional rustle of a turning page, was pleasant and peaceful.

And the silence of the empty house was peaceful, too, until—through the pages of my novel—I began to hear that silence. It echoed in the hall beyond the door. It resounded through the rooms overhead where there were no passing footsteps, laughing voices, or slamming trunk lids. It seemed to come up in waves from the playroom beneath, where lights were not lit, the phonograph was not going and no young voices were raised. It reverberated and echoed all that evening and the following day and the day after that. It became peopled—and not only with the laughing, trunk-shutting daughters of the immediate past!

At breakfast time, when I stooped to plug in the toaster, my hand rested on scratches across the end of the buffet—relics of a long ago high chair that rubbed against it. Instantly, a blue-eyed cherub seemed to be laughing up at me. The curved handle of a baby spoon was gripped tightly in her fat little fist. She banged her spoon gaily on the delightful drum top made by the tray of her high chair. "More egg! More egg!" she demanded. And I fled.

I pulled out the piano bench to dust beneath it and it seemed heavy—as though encyclopedias piled upon it raised a sedate little girl to piano height. She bit the end of her small pink tongue as her fingers searched the keys. Then the tune of "The Farmer's Boy" echoed distantly through the room, and I fled again.

More than once, as I climbed the stairs, I snatched my hand from the bannister to make way for an imaginary rush of skirts and curls and fat, pink legs sliding past in delighted descent. And the telephone! Even as the bell would ring, I'd seem to hear, "I'll go, Mother!" or "I've got it!"

That telephone! It rang at any and all hours. Kindly people who remembered that we'd be alone for the first time in many years, called with all sorts of suggestions for diversion. I told them honestly and as graciously as I could that we were too tired from all of the wedding activities to say "yes" to anyone. So the phone rang less and less often until it, too, just added to the silence that was everywhere.

Then, one evening, when Jim had only skimmed the sports page, he straightened and with a sharp crack of his paper, folded it in half and dropped it on the floor beside him. He fiddled with the fire for a minute and then crossed the room to lift the heavy, flowered curtains that we draw across the windows on chilly nights. Rain streamed down the window pane that evening and drummed on the porch roof. For a minute Jim looked out and listened. Did he hear only the rain, I wondered as I watched him, or did he hear the silence too? He dropped the curtain and turned.

"Funny, isn't it? With just the two of us! It wasn't lonely before!"

He was right! We had never been lonely in the old days when there had been only the two of us. Was there a tangible reason? Eagerly I turned back through the pages of my mind and a picture of one of those pages flipped into view. It was a picture of Jim and me sitting by the living-room window of our long ago two-rooms-and-bath. We seemed to be laughing as we bent over a table that was scattered with cards.

Sitting up straight, I swung my feet down from the couch. "Cribbage!" I exclaimed.

"Cribbage?" Jim brightened perceptibly. "Fine! Haven't had any of that for a whale of a time."

And it was fine to sit by the open fire, count our "15's" and our "goes" and move the colored pegs in the holes of the cribbage board that we hadn't used for so long we felt awkward with it. Truth to tell, we felt awkward with each other, too. Of course, we'd been right together all the years of our housekeeping but what with the cooking and cleaning, washing and ironing, mending [Turn to page 241

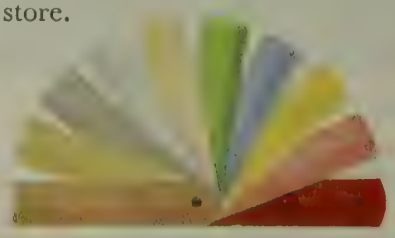
so Beautiful



AND SO EASY TO CLEAN

Of course you want the decorative beauty and advantages that only Venetian blinds can give your home. But you want easy cleaning, too.

The smooth, non-porous finish of blinds made with Acme Galva-bond steel seals out grimy dirt and stains. And quick dusting is so easy . . . each slat bends, then springs back into perfect shape.

All this and enduring beauty too, because each slat is galvanized and bonderized.

Look for—insist upon—the Acme Galva-bond seal on the blinds you buy at your local blind dealer or department store.

of fireside they had always dreamed of on winter evenings, and an interior that welcomed friends to come in and relax.

Mr. Field called in architects Rindge and Rindge and talked fishing until they gathered that he wasn't interested in housework any more than was Mrs. Field, who had decorator Inez Huege help her plan the remodeling as "a woman's dream of easy housekeeping."

When the Fields decided to try a new way of living in the country, they knew that they couldn't escape housework merely by building a small house. In the first place they prided themselves on a well-kept home, and in the second place they liked to entertain often. They have found that their remodeled home stays cleaner longer and that they entertain oftener with less effort. Careful planning made that result possible.

Walls in the living room were left in the original wood siding and finished a soft yellow with a flat paint. Asphalt tile was used instead of carpeting on the entire floor. Twice-a-year waxing keeps the tile glowing, and a dust mop whisked over the tile each morning keeps it clean.

Throw rugs used in the living

[Turn to page 125

In winter, when the river outside their door is frozen over and the woods are weighed down with snow, this fireplace is the favorite gathering spot for the Field family and friends. Apples sizzle in the cup-like tops of andirons and the aroma fills the room when the fire is roaring in old-time country-house tradition. Door at right of entrance leads to full-size guest bathroom. Winding stair leads to two bedrooms and bath

Pine-paneled cupboards make the kitchen as friendly as the rest of the house. Electric dishwasher and waste disposal unit help cut housework room for warmth and hominess are small enough to be sent to the laundry. All the windows have lined cotton or linen draperies that get periodic cleanings and an occasional shaking out of doors on a windy day, all the care they need to keep them fresh looking. Company table linens went into storage, in favor of colorful place mats and napkins that don't require special care in washing and ironing. To save washing and ironing time, Mrs. Field uses ordinary dress ruffling thumbtacked to the kitchen window frames instead of curtains.

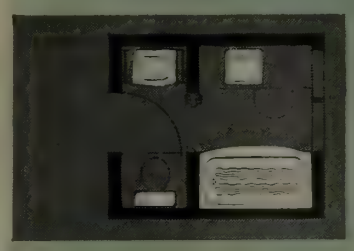
Serving buffet style, the Fields eliminate much of the work that can take the joy out of entertaining. An automatic dishwasher and a garbage disposal unit were included in their worksaving plan and have paid handsome dividends in leisure.

In the two upstairs bedrooms, pine paneling eliminates the need for papering and painting. Waxed floors and small rugs help keep vacuuming to a minimum.

Mr. Field wanted to limit his lawn mowing, hedge trimming, and hoeing, so only the front and side lawns are landscaped. The largest and best part of the Fields' time is spent in enjoying their home.



A dormer cut into the south side of the steep, pitched roof of the original boathouse loft made possible this cheerful, sunny bedroom of Mr. and Mrs. Field. White paint gave sewing machine a quaint Victorian look, made it a decorative piece. Room colors are yellow, coral, and white

The Fields planned their second bedroom for their son, Charles, and for guests. Waxed pine floors, cotton rugs, and walls paneled in pine left its natural color, shellacked, and waxed are easy to keep clean

New fans keep you cooler

This year's fans, handsome and silent, are designed to fit your special needs

By Louisa M. Comstock

Today's electric fans have come a long way from the models that used to cool only at the cost of clatter. The principle is still the same, but the fan has changed.

Even the conventional fan, which cools by creating a breeze, gives more breeze per dollar's worth of fan. It oscillates, can be adjusted up and down, and has safety provisions which make it practically proof against careless fingers. The circulator has horizontal blades. It cools by keeping the air in gentle motion, rather than by creating a breeze. Exhaust fans include the attic, wall, and window fans. They cool by removing heat which has accumulated and replacing it with cooler, fresher air. [Turn to page 133

Watch the window fan. New models are handsome in living and bedroom colors, do not interfere with the use of the window or worry the draperies. Many operate on three speeds. Most are so easily fitted into place that you won't mind moving them as your living arrangements suggest. You can use window fan on the floor, too, as an air circulator

Many new fans invite you to move them around. This one has rubber wheels, on which its 35 pounds seem light. Telescope stand permits you to adjust height. Bring it up to your work by day. At night, place it 3 feet inside open window, facing out—for cool sleeping

← Brand-new fan baby, less than 10 inches high, weighs about 3 pounds. Carry it to your desk, dressing table, kitchen counter, or coffee table for a breeze. Pack it in suitcase on summer trips

An example of new features to look for when you buy a standard fan this year. On this moderate-cost, rotating fan all mechanical parts are encased in a plastic shell which absorbs sound, is cleaner. You can tilt it up or down; or detach it from base and hang it on wall →

Circulators range in size from a 12-inch model no bigger than a footstool, to larger ones that double as hassocks or small tables. You'll find them excellently designed, in chrome or rich wood finishes. Many will operate on 3 speeds

Now everybody's doing it

YOU'LL see people doing this wherever comfort is the first consideration in buying mattresses, furniture or new cars. Why? To be sure they're getting the most gloriously comfortable of all cushionings — Airfoam.

One touch and you'll know it — the yielding softness of a million air cells that empty as you press down, that refill as you let up. It's such magic buoyancy that makes Airfoam the buy of a lifetime — for long-time comfort. This magic latex material never sags or lumps up, keeps its live resiliency always. It conforms to every change of posture to give you uniformly restful support.

So do as other smart shoppers are doing. Look for the Airfoam label; make the "push" test before you buy. That's how to recognize the ultimate in modern comfort. Goodyear, Airfoam Dept., Akron 16, Ohio.

Get professional advice if you're considering an attic fan. Its position will depend on various factors, including wind direction. If your attic is sealed and you have attic stairs, the installation may be merely a matter of setting the fan to face a louver in the attic wall. If your attic isn't sealed, or if you don't have stairs, you may also need a suction box to conduct the air to the fan from a ceiling louver. In low ranch-type houses the fan can be located horizontally over a ceiling louver. Louvers may automatically open and close as the fan is turned on and off. On some models, the daily cooling cycle is controlled by a time clock.

Wall fans, also known as kitchen ventilators, can be built into new homes, installed in old. In both cases professional advice insures success. Modern wall fans consist of an exhaust fan behind an interior grill, with a vent of wall thickness leading to outside opening. This opening is protected by a weather-tight door. On some models this door opens and closes automatically when the fan is turned on and off. The exhaust fan not only expels stale air but also picks up and expels all the air currents drawn into its path. This means that the location will depend on house construction and wind direction as well as on the exact spot you want to ventilate.

Fan heaters are a nice combination in locations where it may be frosty in the morning but hot by noon. The combination may be built into a circulator or oscillator so that you can have just the fan, or the heater with the fan to circulate the heat. Or you can buy a two-part fan which is primarily a fan but becomes a fan heater when you add the heating element.

If dryness instead of humidity is your hot-weather problem, consider the fan humidifier. Some look like the window fan, but operate in reverse, pulling air in through the window, passing it over moisture, and feeding it into the room filtered, moistened, and cooled. Other models stand on the floor and circulate the air already in the room, winter as well as summer.

at your service

Families everywhere are now busily engaged in gardening and building activities. So this month your service column answers questions on these two timely subjects. The responses below are taken from the pages of Better Homes & Gardens Gardening Guide and Home Building Ideas.

Q We wonder how expensive it will be to have an architect help us plan our new home.

A You needn't wonder what he'll charge. The customary fee is a flat percentage of the total cost of the house—usually from 7 to 10 percent for small houses. Discuss freely with him exactly what you are expected to pay—and when. Usually an architect charges a percentage of his fee for each major stage in the development of plans.

Q Last year our melons tasted more like pumpkins than cantaloupes. What can we do to have better melons this year?

A To have good quality, cantaloupes must have a constant supply of nitrogen throughout the season. Old-time gardeners supplied this by burying a bucketful of rotted barnyard manure beneath each hill. You can get almost the same results by putting two tablespoons of balanced plant food beneath each hill and then covering it well with soil before you sow the seeds. That's how you get cantaloupes that really take a prize.

Q Will it hurt to roll my lawn in the spring?

A Rollers must be used carefully. One light rolling in the spring is plenty. No rolling at all is better. Greenkeepers use rollers only to push down soil heaved up by moles or by frost, not to smooth a bumpy lawn. Rollers will smooth a bumpy spot only when the soil is soft—and rolling then ruins the soil structure and suffocates the grass roots.

The books from which these answers are taken are published by Better Homes & Gardens magazine. They are an extension of the editorial service Better Homes & Gardens offers its readers. In the two books mentioned, you'll find hundreds of inspirational ideas and answers to almost all of your questions on building and gardening.

Ready-built house + your personality =

The home you want

When the Aubreys moved in, their home looked just exactly like every other house on the block

By Betty Childs

Now the ready-built house has all the homey charm of an old-fashioned Christmas-card cottage. Its clapboard front has been painted bright barn red and trimmed with white. A new white settle welcomes you at the front door. Jim laid a winding brick walk up the front; Phyllis planted daisies along both sides of it. A homemade rustic rail fence and a quaint iron light set the house off from its neighbors

Photographs: George de Gennaro

You can't buy a ready-made builder's house and expect it to look like a lived-in house—to look like you and your family. The house needs colors you picked out, flowers your husband planted, furniture your children have climbed over. All those familiar books, and easy chairs, and matted prints that make your house a home give it your personality, too.

How you go about giving your home personality is up to you. The secret is to work your own ideas about living into the house itself. You can do it by following decorating rules or by breaking them carefully. You can do it with antiques, or with traditional furniture, or with modern pieces. You can do it with a few knickknacks or with whole rooms.

These pictures of the home of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Aubrey in Hollywood, California, will give you an idea of the results to try for. (Mrs. Aubrey is movie actress Phyllis Thaxter. She starred in "30 Seconds Over Tokyo.") The Aubreys put personality into their builder's house by adopting a New England theme and carrying it through inside and out. See how successfully this personality business has worked out for them.

Pine paneling for the fireplace wall meant a lot of work for Jim and Phyllis, but it brings mellowed beauty to the living room. Jim made a pine mantel and scalloped frame for the fireplace, then Phyllis hopefully whitewashed over the bricks to give them a timeworn look

Tucked rayon-net curtains lend pixie charm to little Susan's room—especially when they're set off by a scalloped valance covered with blue and white checked paper. Furniture (scaled down to Susan's size) is painted pink and decorated with bright peasant figures and flowers

The Maytag Chieftain, America's finest low-priced washer. A genuine Maytag in every respect . . . a truly sensational value. $124.95*

The Maytag Commander, with large, square porcelain tub and fast, efficient Gyrafoam action. $144.95*

The Maytag Master, finest of all. Big, square aluminum tub holds more; keeps water hot longer. $179.95*

...and Maytags are priced as low as $124.95*!

THINK WHAT THAT MEANS! A genuine Maytag for little more than you'd pay for the very lowest-priced washer on the market!

Maytag, making so many washers, has been able to keep prices low. Well over five million Maytags have been sold—far more than any other make.

Fact is, you can own any of these three Maytag models very easily. Pay in low monthly installments while enjoying the many advantages Maytag gives. You'll especially like the extra-fast, extra-clean washing performance of Maytag's famous Gyrafoam action. And the way clothes dry so much faster—because so much water is taken out by Maytag's exclusive Roller Water Remover.

You'll certainly get a lot of satisfaction out of Maytag's all-round excellence and its complete dependability. Why not turn in your present washer for a liberal trade-in on a grand, new Maytag? See your nearby Maytag dealer right away! The Maytag Company, Newton, Iowa.

*Recommended price, subject to change. Higher in Western and Southern states. Extra equipment available at additional cost: automatic discharge pump ($10); gasoline engine; automatic timer (for Master model only).

How to prepare your

Surface preparation can mean success or failure in painting. Here's how to insure a good job and save money, too

The next time your house needs repainting, you can insure a finished job both handsome and durable. The means to this end, if you have plenty of energy, is this: Do the surface preparation work yourself.

You'll save money two ways. A properly prepared surface needs repainting less frequently. And these preparation jobs consume a lot of a professional's expensive time.

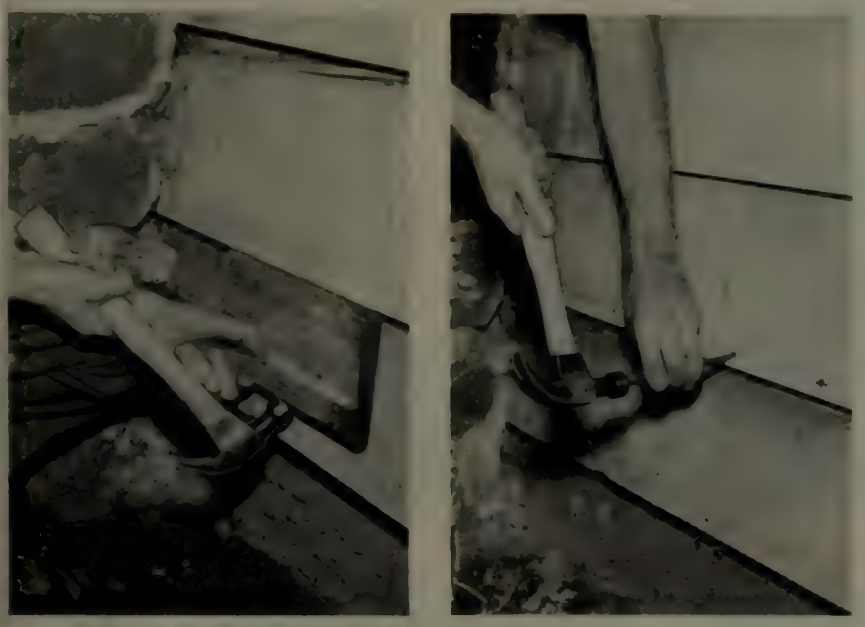
There are other elements in a quality paint job, of course. Good paint is one—don't be fooled by a bargain price tag. Unless you have had quite a lot of painting experience, have the paint put on by a professional. Make sure work is done while weather is mild and dry.

But the biggest single element in successful repainting is proper surface preparation. This job calls for more muscle than finesse; you can do it almost as well as a man with years of experience.

Photographs that follow show key steps in getting your house ready for a fresh coat of paint, whether you plan to apply the paint yourself or have a painter put it on.

Scaling paint in limited areas calls for this treatment. Scrape away loose paint with a putty knife and wire brush. Then sandpaper to feather edges of paint that still adheres. If your entire house is scaling, have all the old paint taken off with a blowtorch or a liquid paint remover

Photographs: Camera Associates, Inc.



A priming coat of quality paint should go on when a section is scraped, sanded, and dusted. To mix paint, pour off top liquid, stir the pigment smooth, then slowly pour liquid back, stirring constantly. Load brush with as much paint as it will hold, and work paint well into all cracks house for paint

By William W. Atkin

Knots often "bleed" through paint. To remedy, scrape away loose paint over each knot (left). Cover the knots with a priming coat of paint (center). When paint is dry, seal the knots with fresh shellac (right); old shellac may not dry. You'll find that a touch-up with paint will keep shellac from washing off

Loose clapboards should be pounded back in place. To avoid marring wood, use a scrap of lumber between the hammer and siding (left). Once the siding is in place, drive nails to hold it there. Use finishing nails, and set the heads of all nails one-eighth inch below the surface of the wood with a nail set (right)

Cracked putty around windows should be replaced before the sash frame is repainted. Remove old putty down to bare wood. Replace missing glaziers' points, and coat the wood with linseed oil before you apply new putty. (See "How to replace a broken window pane," page 186)

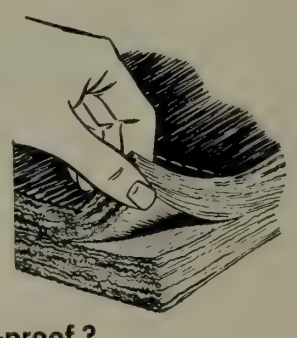
The right answers can mean money in your pocket



Q. What should my income be to afford insulation?

☐ $3,000 ☐ $8,000 ☐ $15,000

A. Regardless of income, anyone can afford to insulate his home. Installed in a new home, KIMSUL* insulation may cut yearly fuel bills as much as 44%; in an existing home—up to 33%. Thus KIMSUL quickly pays for itself. And so, after a few years, KIMSUL actually begins paying back more than the original cost of the insulation. Moreover, to insulate an average new 6-room home costs only about $150.

Q. How much cooler does insulation keep a home in summer?

☐ None ☐ Up to 8° ☐ Up to 15°

A. Double Thick KIMSUL, installed in the attic, lowers inside temperatures as much as 15° on hottest summer days. Keeps your home snug and warm in winter. And the exclusive many-layer stitched design of KIMSUL provides uniform temperature control. Unlike some types of insulation, it leaves no money-wasting thick spots, no thin spots where heat can seep in or out.

Q. Will insulation make my home fire-proof?

☐ Yes ☐ No ☐ Depends on where the fire starts

A. No insulation can make a home fire-proof. However, KIMSUL insulation can effectively retard a fire. KIMSUL is the only fire-resistant insulation with Pyrogard* fire-resistant cover. In addition, KIMSUL is permanently resistant to insects, vermin and mold.

Q. How much will I save by insulating when I build?

☐ 66% ☐ 20% ☐ 3%

A. Insulate the walls with KIMSUL when you build and you'll save 66% over what it would cost after the house is completed. For but a few cents added to mortgage payments, KIMSUL insulation brings lifetime comfort to you and your family. Owners of existing homes can save by installing KIMSUL themselves. No special skill or equipment is needed. However, your KIMSUL dealer will arrange for professional installation if you so desire. Builders will tell you the KIMSUL way to insulate is the scientific way—leaving air space on both sides of the insulation to reduce heat lag and condensation.

How to prepare your house for paint

Putty nail holes and cracks to cover exposed wood and get a smooth surface (above). Use the best putty you can buy; cheap putty may shrink and fall out. You can make your own quality putty by mixing two parts white lead and one part dry whiting, adding a little linseed oil if the mixture is too stiff. Touch up dry putty with paint (below) to prepare the surface for putting on finish coats of paint

Protect shrubbery by pulling it away from the house and covering it with burlap or canvas. Paint chemicals will harm most plants, and foliage may mar the fresh paint. Also ask the painter to use a canvas on roof areas around dormers. It's almost impossible to remove paint from surface of roof after it has been permitted to dry

Is one of her major interests decorating?

Do you know a homemaker, a former decorator, and/or writer, whose chief interest is her home and family—and whose major outside interest is home decoration and furnishings?

She may be a private decorator or a decorator employed by a department store. She probably is known in your area for the good ideas she has—frequently inexpensive ideas.

She may be with your local newspaper, doing women's page features that include furnishings and decoration.

This woman may have an occasional afternoon or day to do some work for us. She might like the satisfaction that would be hers from representing Better Homes & Gardens editorially in her community and receiving a fee for what she did.

If you know such a woman, suggest that she write Home Furnishings Editor, Better Homes & Gardens, Meredith Building, Des Moines, Iowa, telling her experience and background.

Please tell your friend not to send us a story.

If she qualifies, we'll write her and tell her what we have in mind.

Home furnishings answers

Q. Can I use figured upholstery with a figured rug? Mrs. R. D., Syracuse, New York.

A. With a multicolored figured rug, you can use a stripe, a self-patterned damask, or a very small-scaled figured fabric. Or you can use all three. Just be sure that the colors in the upholstery pick up colors in your rug pattern.

Q. Can I have floor-length draperies if I have a radiator under the window? Mrs. J. C., Bangor, Maine.

A. It's easy! Use a cornice board at the top and extend it six or eight inches beyond either side of the window. Draperies will hang free of the radiator—and give a nice broad look to the windows.

Q. Can furniture be placed at an angle in a room? Mrs. D. K., Tampa, Florida.

A. Avoid placing furniture at an angle if you can. Furniture that is placed at various angles has a disturbing influence in most rooms—and when you put furniture at an angle, you won't be able to use the room space to best advantage.

Should Dad do the disciplining?

"Just wait till your father comes home." Is this the way discipline is handled at your house? Should Dad be chief executioner? Should you punish children at all?

By N. E. Cutts, Ph.D., and Nicholas Moseley, Ph.D

"Should my wife leave all the discipline to me? I get home late and I'm tired. I used to look forward to playing with the baby. But now that he's growing up, as soon as I get in the door my wife says, 'I want you to talk to Jimmy.' Whatever he does wrong all day, it's 'Wait till your father comes home'."

The other young fathers in our class for young parents smiled. But the question, like any on discipline, caught their immediate interest. The discussion was fast and furious with many anecdotes of children's behavior and parents' reactions. But by the end of the session everyone agreed on these five principles. And they should help you if you're troubled about discipline in your own home.

1. Punishment is desirable only as a means of keeping your girl or boy from doing something that he should not do, in general something dangerous to himself or others. It has no virtue in itself. The question is whether waiting for father is the most effective means.

2. Effectiveness of punishment does not depend on its severity. It depends on your child's understanding what he has done wrong and on his knowing that he is not going to be allowed to do it again. If he understands why he should not do something, so much the better. But an unpleasant association, a definite punishment, is usually a better "why not" to a young child than a long and complicated explanation. Mothers are just as capable as fathers of expressing disapproval, exercising firmness, and making clear explanations. But they must know how to punish as well.

3. Immediate punishment is more effective than delayed punishment because the youngster is more likely to associate it with his offense. Therefore, if you punish "on the spot," there is more chance of your boy's or girl's learning what he must not do than if he goes unpunished for several hours. The only reason for delay is to avoid punishing him when you are angry. Venting anger may relieve the adult, but it often results in injuring a child physically and emotionally.

4. Threats are notoriously ineffective, and "Wait till your father comes home" is a threat. If mother forgets or father is late or if they disagree, their child begins to take chances. He ignores the threat and may even play father against mother. Or, if the boy or girl really expects punishment, he thinks mainly about what is coming. The punishment rather than his offense looms large in his mind. He may spend the hours of waiting in hating his mother for telling on him and in fearing his father. He loses the trust and affection needed for constructive discipline.

5. Spanking is most usually implied when a mother says, "Wait till your father comes home." Though often an excellent means of control, such punishment is far from being the only means available. If the occasion calls for it, the proper method of spanking, "bare hand on bare buttocks," can be used by a woman as well as a man. When a child reaches an age of understanding, other methods of punishment are better.

"It looks," a mother said, "as if all the punishing is to be done by me. Won't this make my children hate me? Or at least prefer their father?"

These questions represent legitimate worries. But the firm bond that constant loving association builds up between mother and child is not easily broken. There will be no real strain on it if the occasions for punishment are kept to a minimum and if, from the beginning, necessary control is firm and consistent. Then little punishment will be necessary, and the child will accept the little as reasonable.

Fathers should see and enjoy their children as much of each week as possible. If the father's time with his boy or girl is always associated with punishment, both father and child will begin to find ways not to see each other. But fathers, like mothers, must be willing to punish promptly when there is need for it.

How a Simple Idea revolutionized Home Heating twice since 1930

Forced-warm-air heating, as it is known today, had its start in a simple idea. That was to circulate warm-air heat mechanically!... for greater comfort... for increased heating efficiency and economy.

By adding a return-air duct, a blower and dust-catching filters to a gravity furnace system, pioneers proved their idea was right. They also learned, to the delight of their womenfolk, that this new heat is clean—that removal of air-borne dirt by the filters saves both housework and costly redecorating.

Millions of families today enjoy the benefits of this new type of heating. But a second big development was to come, perfected this past year.

By slowing down the blower, so it operates almost continuously, engineers found they could prevent stratification of the heated air in the house... could eliminate cold areas near the floor caused by the warmer air rising... could provide, for the first time with any system, floor-to-ceiling comfort at all times, in every room, and with substantial savings in fuel. Best of all, at only nominal cost, existing forced-warm-air systems can be changed to operate this way.

If you are buying or building a new home, or desire greater comfort from your present forced-warm-air system, get the facts about this better, modern heating. Consult your architect, builder or warm-air heating contractor. OWENS-CORNING FIBERGLAS CORPORATION, Toledo 1, Ohio (makers of DUST-STOP* Air Filters, standard equipment in most modern warm-air furnaces since 1930).

In Canada, address Fiberglas Canada, Ltd., Toronto, Ontario.

DUST-STOP AIR FILTERS
— a FIBERGLAS product

Forced-warm-air heat is thrifty heat... quickly responsive and automatically controlled.

Proper humidity protects family health; compactness of furnace and ducts saves valuable space.

Inexpensive replacement of efficient DUST-STOP filters saves fuel, housework and costly redecorating.

Continuous air circulation makes possible floor-to-ceiling comfort, at all times, in every room.

How to butcher a good house

By Mort Reed, Jr., A.I.A.

You don't have to make a number of changes to ruin a good house; one small change can be enough.

Here, for example, is Better Homes & Gardens Five Star Home No. 1802. It's a good-looking house, with a simple exterior given interest by the texture of the brick wall. It's a good house, with a well-arranged, carefully thought-out plan.

But look what trouble one change —of the wrong kind—can cause:

▶ One man who built the house knew that every jog in a wall or break in a roof costs money. He decided he'd rather put his money into more floor space, a legitimate change. But he got his space by extending the living room forward (left) and cutting down the size of the bedroom (right). The result is a house with an unbroken front wall that looks homely and lifeless. He lost the jogging wall and contrastingly straight eave that gave the original house its beauty.

▶ Another man made no changes in the plan. The only thing he did was to substitute clapboards for bricks in the exterior finish. That couldn't affect the appearance of the house—he thought. But you can see the damage he wrought. He achieved, by the monotony of straight horizontal lines, as characterless a wall as the man who removed the jog. He lost the value of the texture contributed by the brick, especially in the lower half of the projecting wing. And without window sills there is no shadow line to break the blankness of the wall surface.

▶ Here is the same house built by a couple who made three changes, but were consistent in these changes. They wanted a fireplace, put it in the correct wall, and added a sturdy chimney in perfect proportion to the house. They couldn't get wrought iron, so they used slender wood strips at the corner of the porch. They preferred double-hung windows to casements, but were careful to keep the lines and shape of the original windows intact. The result: still a fine house.

How to get a better house

Plates. It takes several days for a slab to harden, during which time the slab should be kept moist to retard setting. Be sure bolts to which 2x4 plates for exterior walls will be attached are in place before the slab is poured. As soon as the slab will bear a man's weight, locations of partitions should be chalked out on the slab, and the sole plates, also 2x4's on which the partition studs will rest, are spiked into the "green" slab. Spikes should go at least 2 inches into the slab.

Basement height. It's always poor economy to skimp on the height of your basement. Eight feet is a minimum distance between concrete floor and the bottoms of joists. Since blocks (plus standard mortar joint) are 8 inches high, 12 courses make an 8-foot wall. This will leave you ample headroom for a room in the basement. For appearance's sake, set the basement fairly deep in the ground so your house won't look as though it's standing on stilts.

Piers for girders. In a cinder block or clay tile basement, brick piers should be built into foundation walls at the points where the girder will rest. The girder is the main support for the center of your house, and—whether of wood or steel—it must have a solid bearing on the basement wall. Foundation walls of poured concrete or concrete block are strong enough to support girders without brick piers.

Brick reinforcing. Though quite strong enough for unbroken wall surfaces, cinder blocks are not adequate around wall openings where extra stresses occur. Bricks, which are strong, should be used above and below window openings. Often bricks are used at both sides of openings, as well. Two or three courses of brick are always used atop all cinder-block walls that carry heavy weights. Steel lintels should be used to keep weight off window frames.

Basement walls. Foundation or basement walls of a one-story house should be at least 8 inches thick. A two-story house requires at least a 12-inch-thick wall. Poured concrete, stone, tile, cinder block, and concrete block are commonly used. If the exterior wall is to be faced with brick or stone, the first two courses should be laid just below the ground line. Work starts at corners of the house, and moves toward the centers of walls, which carry less weight.

Parging. Greatest difficulty with basements is the ease with which they leak. Many basement-wall materials are permeable, and must be waterproofed. First step is to parge outsides of walls by troweling on a cement-rich coat of mortar over the whole outer surface that will be underground. This provides an unbroken surface that water won't seep through readily. It's a good precaution to parge the walls of any basement.

Tarring. Ordinary cement mortar isn't completely waterproof. Most builders use a mixture of cement and waterproofing compound as a parge, or else use regular cement mortar, then spray or paint a coat of hot tar over the parge coat. Tar forms a membrane through which water rarely penetrates. Parging and tarring must be done on the outside, though; otherwise water held in walls will make them disintegrate.

Draintiles. Water collecting at footings will quickly cause a house to settle or leak. To avoid this, lay a system of draintiles around the base of the house before the earth is backfilled around the wall. Joints between the four- or six-inch clay tile pipes are left open so water can seep through; tops of joints are covered with tar paper to keep earth out. Tiles should lead to a drain line that will carry the water away.

Basement areaways. Most basement windows are below ground level. To let in light, areaways should be built around these windows. So areaways won't flood after a hard rain, bottoms should be filled with gravel to let water escape into the ground outside the wall. In clayey soils a drain line should lead from the areaway to the draintile system. Areaways should be kept free of trash, not clogged like this one.

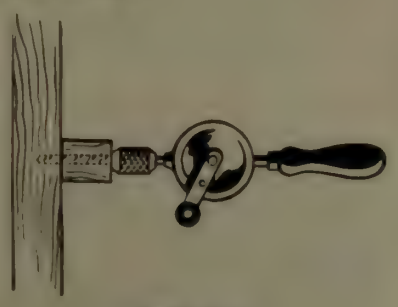
The handy man



Lawn-mower holder

Do you have trouble keeping the handle of your lawn mower against the wall? Then cut a notch in a section of old tire casing and nail the casing to the wall at the proper height. The handle will catch in the casing and hold mower in place.—E. H. Stutz, Cleveland.

Paintbrush stand

A wet paintbrush can be laid down with safety if you drive two small nails into the wood just below the metal band. The nails serve as legs.

Drill stop

Many times you will want to drill a hole only to a certain depth. You can do this by first drilling through a small block of wood. This block should be just thick enough so that the length of drill showing is equal to the depth of the hole you want to drill. Be sure the block is broad enough so it won't turn as you drill.—W. E. Danneman, Chicago.

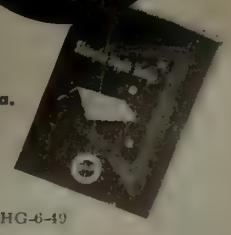
"Atomic bomb plant... and OUR house... both have Barrett* Roofs"



"We figured it this way. If Barrett materials are good enough for the Atomic Bomb Plant, Barrett certainly ought to know how to make a roof for our house. That's why we chose Barrett... and, believe me, it's a nice comfortable feeling to have a Barrett* roof over your head."

Barrett* asphalt shingles are husky... storm-tested in special "weather-machines." Saturated through and through and coated with life-lengthening, waterproofing asphalt... then armor-coated with wear-resisting, fire-resisting, mineral granules, they last and last and last. CHERRY VALLEY

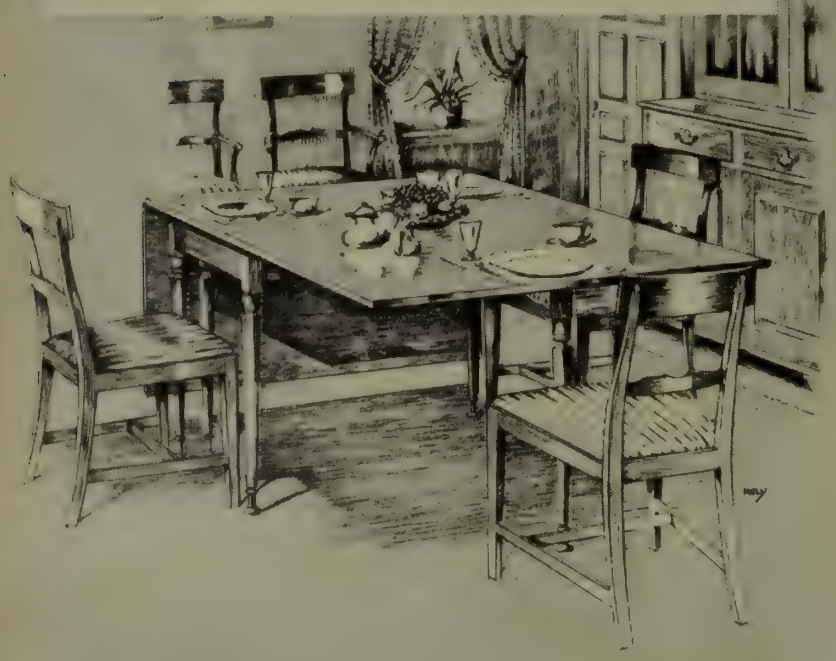
a developing American Style



Stickley

OF FAYETTEVILLE

In his Cherry Valley workshops, Stickley of Fayetteville creates a furniture unmistakably marked with the quaintness and charm of treasured American originals. Yet there is a difference. One that blends the influence of early Puritan, Dutch Patroon and English gentleman-adventurer with fundamental trends in the Cherry Valley of today.

The table illustrated is an example. Made from antique-finished cherry, its long graceful leaves, unaffected simplicity and wide-swinging legs accurately copy a centuries-old piece. The chairs are Stickley creations — featuring modern comfort stamped with the simple beauty of pioneer days

L. & J. G. Stickley Inc., Fayetteville, N.Y.

A STICKLEY "Little Heirloom"

Typical of Stickley's cherry wood, rugged construction, and "Old Mansion" finish, this foot-stool is offered specially as an introductory piece.

Included is a full-size container of famous Stickley Furniture Dressing, the exclusive formula that preserves and beautifies the finish of any cabinet wood. Both shipped by post paid mail for only $6.50.

bedroom—comfortable even if temporary means several years.

There is a separate dining area, screened from the living area by a portable wardrobe and served by a pass-through from the kitchen.

The kitchen has well-planned cabinets, good light, and a shelf which slides out below the counter to act as a snack table. The sink, range, and refrigerator are only three steps apart. A kneehole under part of the counter stores two stools. The pass-through connects the kitchen counter with a large serving shelf in the dining area. A ventilating fan directly over the range carries off kitchen odors.

The remaining room can serve as a den, or as a bedroom if you build a closet into the recess beside the fireplace or over the basement stairway.

The rear entry and bathroom are well located. The entry links the kitchen, outdoors, and basement laundry. It also connects the bedroom-den and kitchen to the bath. Because the bath is near the back door, you don't have to tramp through the house to get to it from outdoors.

Requirement No. 2: The two additions, bedroom wing and garage, can be added at the same time, or separately. Each wing has a separate roof that butts against the main roof, so no tearing out is required. Walls fit into existing walls. Your only costs will be the actual cost of material and labor for additions—virtually none for preparatory ripping out.

Requirement No. 3: When you are ready to add to the original house, you have only two openings to cut in existing walls—one to enlarge the front door, the other to give you access to the new bedroom wing. Except for this one corner of the house in which both openings will be cut, your existing living space is not disturbed. There will be no drafty holes in the walls, because additions can be built before the new openings are made. [Turn to page 152

Kitchen—unchanged when additions are made to the house—has a compact U-shaped work space, with a pull-out board that serves as snack bar, breadboard, or extra work space when counters are full. Lower cabinets are dark green so they don't show dirt or fingerprints

Crook between bedroom wing and living room makes a good place for a concrete terrace, with wading pool and sandbox cut into it. Terrace can be laid in either stage. Most rooms in the house have the combination fixed window with double-hung sash at one side that you see here

All-purpose room can be a den, guest bedroom, or recreation room. If you build only part of the house at first, it could be your bedroom. Fireplace backs up to living-room fireplace. Cabinets above and below shelves hold games and stationery; this space could become a closet

Dashing stripes—lively colors—luxurious terry, and plenty of it! There is nothing to prevent you, of course, from building Five Star Home No. 1906 all at once, and by doing so you'll save the expense of moving equipment to and from the site two or three times. In its final stage, the house has everything you need for comfortable living: large rooms full of windows, excellent storage space (owners' bedroom, for example, has two walk-in dressing closets with drawers), a large porch, two-car garage, separate tool and workroom, two baths.

The house will look well on many types of sites. The asphalt shingle roof overhangs far enough to shelter the six picture windows and 27 double-hung windows. A wall of glass block beside the front door lights the entrance hall. Exterior walls of thick-butt white cedar shakes can be left untreated to weather to a silver gray, cutting maintenance cost.

Inside, the house is designed to cut down upkeep. Mopboards and doorframes are partly recessed to minimize accumulation of dust. To keep plaster from possibly shrinking away from moldings, they are beveled sharply inward so plaster partly covers them. All doors are the slab type without dust-catching recesses. There are no valance boards or curtain rods. Instead, traverse rods are recessed into the plaster ceiling in all rooms.

In all its stages, Five Star Home 1906 is complete. You'll find it a house easy to grow into—but hard to outgrow. [Turn to page 156

Child's bedroom in the wing you can add on later has enough linoleum-covered floor space to double as playroom, even with twin beds. Desk, with its long work surface, and toy cabinets are not attached to wall, can be moved if necessary. Windows provide ventilation and a view, too

Triple cabinet above lavatory of bathroom in bedroom wing provides more than extra storage space for medicine and other supplies: the two end doors open to form a three-way mirror that aids in shaving or putting on make-up. Linen cabinets flank bathtub on the opposite wall

10 days in New England

Since this is your longest day—about 275 miles—start early. You sleep tonight in the middle of Cape Cod. Even with pauses here and there, you ought to make it before dark.

For a flying start, the Merritt Parkway takes you to New Haven where you turn into U. S. 1 along the route on which rode the first post rider in America. Pleasant towns founded in the seventeenth century still retain a surprisingly colonial flavor. Houses and churches face lovely greens proud of their ancient elms. In Saybrook, Yale University began in 1701. In Groton, "Mother" Bailey tore off her red flannel petticoat so her boys could wad their guns against the British. In Westbrook dwelt David Bushnell who invented the first submarine actually used in warfare. The shipbuilders of Mystic built the modified clipper ship, Andrew Jackson, which beat sailing records made by the more famous Flying Cloud.

Just beyond New London you head for the Jamestown Bridge across Narragansett Bay, 12 miles wide and poking 28 miles into Rhode Island. At Jamestown you take the ferry to Newport, summer resort for Southern planters in the 1860's, but now for New York millionaires. You drive among famous estates, some of grotesquely dated architecture. If you make good time you can stroll on the famous Cliff Walk. Here is your chance to see also that ancient riddle, the Old Stone Tower. Its origin is now in dispute, but you can ask yourself, "Was it really built by the Vikings, as Longfellow believed, or was it only a windmill erected in 1675?"

At New Bedford, once jammed with whalers, visit the biggest whaling museum and see a full-sized cooperage shop, sail loft, and a half-size model of a full-size whaling ship. Cross Bourne Bridge over the Cape Cod Canal and you're on the Cape itself. Via the south route by way of Falmouth you put up for the night at Hyannis.

2nd DAY

You drive 176 miles today, and what sight-seeing! Taking Route 28, you pass through one picturesque village after another into Chatham. See Chatham Light and the breath-stopping expanse where Nantucket Sound joins the Atlantic Ocean. Turn north; at Orleans another tiny side trip unveils another sweeping expanse of ocean. Or, a little north, turn off for Nauset Light and look down upon the sea from lofty sand cliffs.

As you approach Provincetown, Cape Cod Bay bursts in upon you. Here the Mayflower first dropped anchor in North America. Provincetown is the nation's largest art colony. Its Art Gallery is worth visiting. Call on the 252-foot granite shaft known as the Pilgrim Memorial Monument on Town Hill, and be sure to drive among the colossal sand dunes on the ocean side of this scenic peninsula.

Turning back you enter the north shore road. Again you are among authentic Cape Cod homes, some smothered with rose vines. Drive slowly in Sandwich where the colonial atmosphere is especially noticeable and where, between 1825 and 1888, the famous Sandwich glass was made. You leave Cape Cod by the Sagamore Bridge. Less than an hour away you stand beside Plymouth Rock where the Pilgrims landed in 1620. Pilgrim Hall contains an interesting collection of Pilgrim relics. Another 40 miles—you're in Boston.

After dinner tonight you can see some of Boston's historic shrines,

"Ironing is 3 times easier with Satina in my starch!"

WRITES MRS. DONALD BUTLER, WAYNE, ILLINOIS

"SATINA WORKS LIKE MAGIC!" writes Mrs. Butler. "Satina in my starch makes ironing 3 times easier and gives the clothes a lovely fragrance. I like it very much for dresses."

Satina is a wonderful ironing aid that you use with boiled or unboiled starch. It dissolves easily in boiling water or the boiling starch solution.

It not only makes ironing lots easier, it makes clothes smell fresher, look newer, and stay clean longer, too!

FREE FULL-SIZE PACKAGE

WE'RE SO SURE you'll love Satina, if we can just get you to try it once, that we're offering you a free full-size package. Enough for 4 big starchings. Just try it and judge Satina for yourself!

A Product of General Foods

only a stone's throw from downtown hotels. And by all means, step out to dinner tonight—at one of Boston's really unusual restaurants. Here are three suggestions:

Durgin-Park Restaurant, directly opposite Faneuil Hall. For lots of atmosphere and a real New England dinner. (But get there before 7:30.)

Locke-Ober's, 3 Winter Place, a narrow alley in the heart of Boston. Over 75 years of steaks and sea food.

Union Oyster House, 41 Union St. Fixtures here are as they were over 100 years ago; sea food is here in wide variety. Upstairs Louis Philippe, later King of France, lived while teaching French in Boston.

(Side note: If you can stay on Cape Cod another day before going to Boston, take a boat to Nantucket. You'll never forget the huddled-together colonial homes and the cobblestone streets.)

3rd DAY

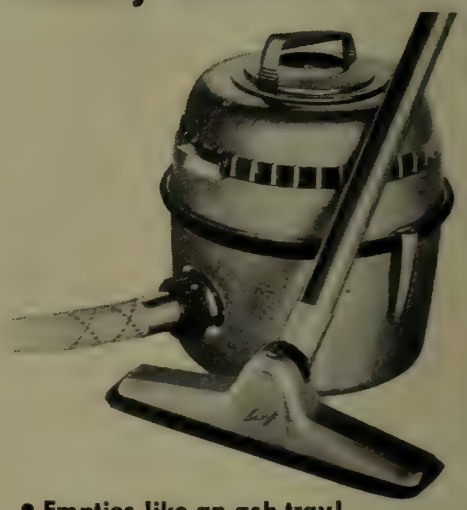
At breakfast face the question, "Shall we go sight-seeing by ourselves or climb on a bus?" On the organized tours you miss nothing. But, on the other hand, you can make out very well by yourself. You can't miss Boston Common, where in 1634 citizens could graze their cattle while learning musketry. Here British troops assembled for the battle of Bunker Hill. A few steps beyond and you're at the State House, built in 1795, with additions later, then comes the Park Street Church (1810), and the Old Granary Burial Ground where lie John Hancock, Samuel Adams, Paul Revere, Ben Franklin's parents, Mary Goose and Thomas Fleet who first published her Mother Goose rhymes.

King's Chapel (1749) is a fine example of early English architecture. Following a pocket map you come to Old South Meeting House, where aroused colonials demanded the withdrawal of British troops who had turned it into a riding school.

You may not have time this morning for all the sights listed below, but remember that you also have tomorrow morning for some of the musts.

Boston Athenaeum, begun as a library when proper Bostonians acquired George Washington's books after his death.

Old State House (1747). Here occurred the Boston Massacre. From the balcony were proclaimed the repeal of the Stamp Act, the Declaration of Independence, and peace with England.



Faneuil Hall—cradle of liberty—where stirring meetings were held just before the Revolution. (Rebuilt 1763.)

Paul Revere House (1660), oldest home in Boston and furnished as it was when its famous owner dwelt there.

How to visit a baby

By Judith Kaye Reed

How many times have you seen it? A brand-new grandmother turning hurt, puzzled eyes to a brand-new mother.

"I was only trying to help. After all, I raised three children and this is only your first. . . ." Grandma trailing off tearfully. The first visit eagerly planned by mother and daughter, off to a disappointing start. . . .

Visiting a household with a new baby involves as much tact, understanding, and self control as loving enthusiasm. Whether you are a grandmother, favorite uncle, or a friend just dropping in to deliver a present and peek at the baby, here are some hints that should help make your visit a pleasure to the new parents, rather than the trial it so often turns out to be.

For Grandma and other relatives

Let the cat get your tongue. This is the hardest bit of baby-visiting etiquette. Don't volunteer advice. Remember that the new mother is nervous and unsure anyway and more than anything else needs confidence in herself. "Are you sure that's the right way to bathe him?" is the best way to hinder, not help, a new mother. If you know an easier way—forget it. Mother will learn it soon enough.

Don't lick your wounds in public. Don't take on a hurt air if your daughter or favorite niece accepts cordially a hint from someone else after she has turned down the same suggestion from you.

Criticism from you disregards her new role of mother. When she is assured you have accepted her new dignity—she will welcome your experience and assistance.

Curb your dogma. "In my time" relates to one generation ago, but this is her time, and the inexperienced mother is more confident when following the methods of her contemporaries. Instead of ridiculing new methods of child care, read the books and articles the new mother is following. You may find yourself agreeing with them. But even if you don't, you will have a clearer understanding of what she is trying to do.

Sit on your hands. It's always a temptation for an adoring relative to pick up or otherwise comfort a crying baby. But if the new parent believes it best to let the baby alone at the time, respect her decision.

Respect the nurse. If the new mother is lucky enough to have a nurse to help her, don't make things difficult. Don't protest nurse's "heartless efficiency" or laugh at her for sterilizing everything that comes in contact with Baby. Her job is to protect Baby and help its mother.

If you are a friend

Don't drop in at odd hours during Baby's first weeks. Phone before you visit so you don't upset a schedule or deprive a young mother of a much-needed nap. Not staying too long will be appreciated, too.

Do it solo. The whole gang paying a call on Baby may seem like a happy thought, but it will exhaust the mother who needs time and rest to adjust to her new role.

HUDSON brings you THE MOST of all you've wanted most!

The amazing and exclusive New Hudson "step-down" design is the key, not to just one or two "features", but to overwhelming advantages in beauty, room, ride, performance and safety obtainable only in this entirely new type of motor car!

The modern design for '49!

ONCE you drive the gorgeous, low-built New Hudson, it's easy to forget vague promises of just a little "more" of this or that!

Here, in one magnificent automobile, is thrilling proof that the lower a car can be built, the more graceful its lines can be made, the better it will ride and perform, the more surely it will handle and the safer it will be!

Incidentally, all makers now claim their cars are "lower". But the New Hudson is not just "lower". It's the lowest-built car on the highway! Yet, thanks to "step-down" design, Hudson has amazing head room and full road clearance!

Here is not just a "more" beautiful car, but the perfectly proportioned, wonderfully symmetrical car millions vote America's most beautiful. That's "step-down" design!

Here is not just a "roomier" car, but a car with the most seating room in any mass-produced automobile built today! "Step-down" design again!

Here is not just a "more" hug-the-road ride. The New Hudson has the most stability in motion you've ever experienced in an automobile, because it has the lowest center of gravity in any American car! And that's "step-down" design!

And here is not just "more" performance. Hudson brings you two great engines—the all-new, high-compression Super-Six—America's most powerful Six—or the masterful Super-Eight, the basic power plant for Hudson-built cars that hold the most official AAA records in the book!

What's more, only Hudson provides exclusive features, such as chrome-alloy motor block, that contribute so much to low upkeep costs.

Your Hudson dealer has one of these great cars awaiting you for a trial drive. Won't you see him right away?

HUDSON DESIGN OTHER CARS

Hudson's "step-down" zone (at "A", above left) permits a lower center of gravity for greater safety, improved roadability, smoother ride; provides amazing head room, far more seat room; allows a low, streamlined silhouette—full road clearance.

All other cars have floor on top of frame (see "B", above right) so they fail to utilize vital space between frame members. Result is a higher center of gravity and either a high roof line or insufficient head room. Seats are also narrower.

Grow plants that can take it

You can get valuable garden help from New York parks where plants have to be tough

By Hal Burton

When you need advice on gardening, you try to find a man who has done a lot of it. Here's your chance to get some valuable tips from the biggest gardener in the nation.

Commissioner Robert Moses heads the New York City Department of Parks which cares for two-and-a-quarter million trees spread over 25,000 acres. No one has ever been able to count the shrubs and other plants in those acres.

His problems are yours magnified a thousand times. You are concerned about one type of soil; New York has all types. Your garden is in one piece; his is scattered over hundreds of square miles. And he operates on a strict budget.

Experience under conditions like that has taught the New York Department of Parks a great deal about growing things. Some of the things it has learned may be helpful to you.

Photograph: Pix

Commissioner Robert Moses of New York's Department of Parks has the job of keeping the city's parks and streets green. His organization must know what to plant and how to plant it

Shade: Japanese black pine
(Pinus thunbergi)

Small tree: English hawthorn
(Crataegus oxyacantha)

Shrub: Scotch rose
(Rosa spinosissima)

Low cover: Vine honeysuckle
(Lonicera—many good varieties)

Here are suggestions to help you find the right plant for any soil

Planting in sand

If sandy soil is your problem, you may find a solution among the list of plants which grow on sandy ground in New York City. Most of the sprawling area of Brooklyn and Queens lies on sandy subsoil, while the wind-swept Atlantic coast of Long Island is almost pure sand.

Shade trees: The adaptable London plane tree and the silver poplar grow even along the seashore. So does the Japanese black pine which resisted even hurricanes that hit the region. Don't depend on it for planting in the central part of the country, though, because it likes to be near the ocean. However, the willow is a tough, resistant tree for sandy, windy spots, and does well inland. Pin oaks grow well on sandy subsoil and so do the red oak, honeylocust, and sugar and Norway maples.

Low trees: Intermediate trees for sandy earth are the well-shaped hawthorn, and the inkberry (Ilex glabra) whose rich, black-green foliage and shiny black berries can do a lot for your garden. Use it in naturalistic plantings or as a foundation shrub; it grows 6 to 8 feet tall.

Shrubs: Beach plum, holly, Rosa rugosa, and Scotch rose are all excellent shrubs for very sandy soils.

Low cover: Try honeysuckle vine for sandy as well as other types of soil, but don't use it for formal plantings because it likes to ramble.

Too much clay?

Clay-base soils are common over big sections of the United States; in New York they exist in the upper Bronx. Don't expect to grow any plant in pure clay, though. If yours is that bad, you'll have to do something to improve it before planting.

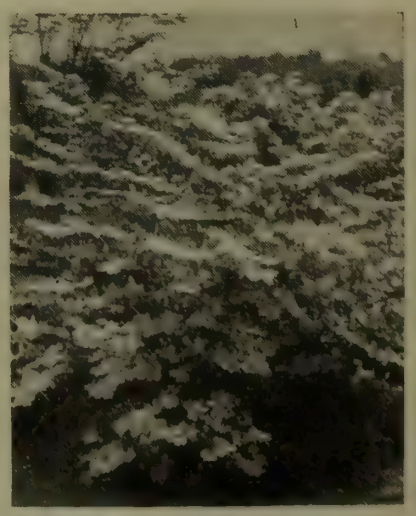
In general, most plants which grow in sandy or rocky soil will do well in clay, along with some additional ones, because clay holds water better.

Shade trees: The pin oak which grows freely in the Bronx will give you an excellent shade tree. Other suggestions are the Norway maple and the London plane.

Small trees: The versatile hawthorn takes to clay as it does to the drier sandy and rocky soils. Deciduous magnolia is another small tree for your home; its early-spring flowering has few equals for beauty.

Shrubs: Black haw grows well in either dry or well-watered spots. Or you can borrow the viburnum from the Bronx. It grows 6 to 8 feet tall, and you'll like its spring flowers, its scarlet berries in late summer, and its glossy foliage.

Low cover: Matrimony vine will spill gracefully over your rock walls and difficult slopes. Boston ivy is lower growing, and so is evergreen English ivy, whose hardy variety, Baltic ivy, will grow in climates colder than that of New York.



McFarland, Davis, Smith, Costain, Healy

Shade: Pin oak
(Quercus palustris)

Small tree: Saucer magnolia
(Magnolia soulangeana)

Shrub: Doublefile viburnum
(Viburnum tomentosum)

Low cover: Matrimony vine
(Lycium halimifolium)

Dry, rocky soil?

Rocky subsoil usually means trouble for plants. Since roots can't go down after moisture, they spread out near the surface where soil dries out quickly.

The New York Department of Parks has that difficulty in rock-bottomed Manhattan. In addition, plants there must contend with gasoline fumes, dust, and the tramp of many feet. And yet, the right plants thrive.

Shade trees: The London plane is first choice among large trees for Manhattan. For your own rock-bound garden you might also select the sugar maple—a handsome tree at all times, and without equal when it takes on its amazing autumn coloring.

Small trees: The all-soil hawthorn again proves its worth in Manhattan where it's a standard intermediate tree. Try it for your own problem spot; its red berries make it striking even in autumn after leaves are gone. The flowering crabapple also grows well on rocky soil, and Regels Privet is a top choice for Manhattan.

Shrubs: The black haw can take Manhattan's worst punishment and still look good. The prairie rose is another good drouth-resistant shrub.

Low cover: Clematis is a hardy and attractive plant which makes a good cover for stone piles, slopes, and other rough spots. Choose one of the hardy varieties if your climate is severe.

Shade: Sugar maple
(Acer saccharum)

Small tree: Flowering crabapple
(Malus floribunda)

Shrub: Prairie rose
(Rosa setigera)

Cover: Sweet autumn clematis
(Clematis paniculata)

Hillsides and slopes

Visitors to New York are always impressed by the miles of beautiful plantings along the magnificent parkways that cut through the city's traffic knot.

The planting problems there are much the same as those of any homeowner on average fertile soil, while parkway slopes create the same difficulties as those on any garden slope or hillside.

Shade trees: The choice here is wide, but among the best for your own home lawn are red oak, sugar maple, walnut, hackberry, and the old stand-by, elm. However, don't use elm in areas where blight affects it.

Small trees: Again there are many, but among the best for you to adopt are hawthorn, deciduous magnolias, dogwoods, and flowering apples and crabapples.

Shrubs: For your difficult hillside planting try aromatic sumac, forsythia, and climbing and shrub roses. There are a few plantings of laurel and azaleas along the New York parkways, but only in special places because motorists are too apt to stop and pull off branches. You can use them freely without that danger.

Low cover: Honeysuckle vine and matrimony vine are good for covering steep banks. Or use Boston ivy or English ivy, especially in shade. English ivy stands deep shade—in fact, it dislikes much sun.

Shade: Red oak
(Quercus borealis)

Small tree: Flowering dogwood
(Cornus florida)

Shrub: Mountain laurel
(Kalmia latifolia)

Low cover: English ivy
(Hedera helix)

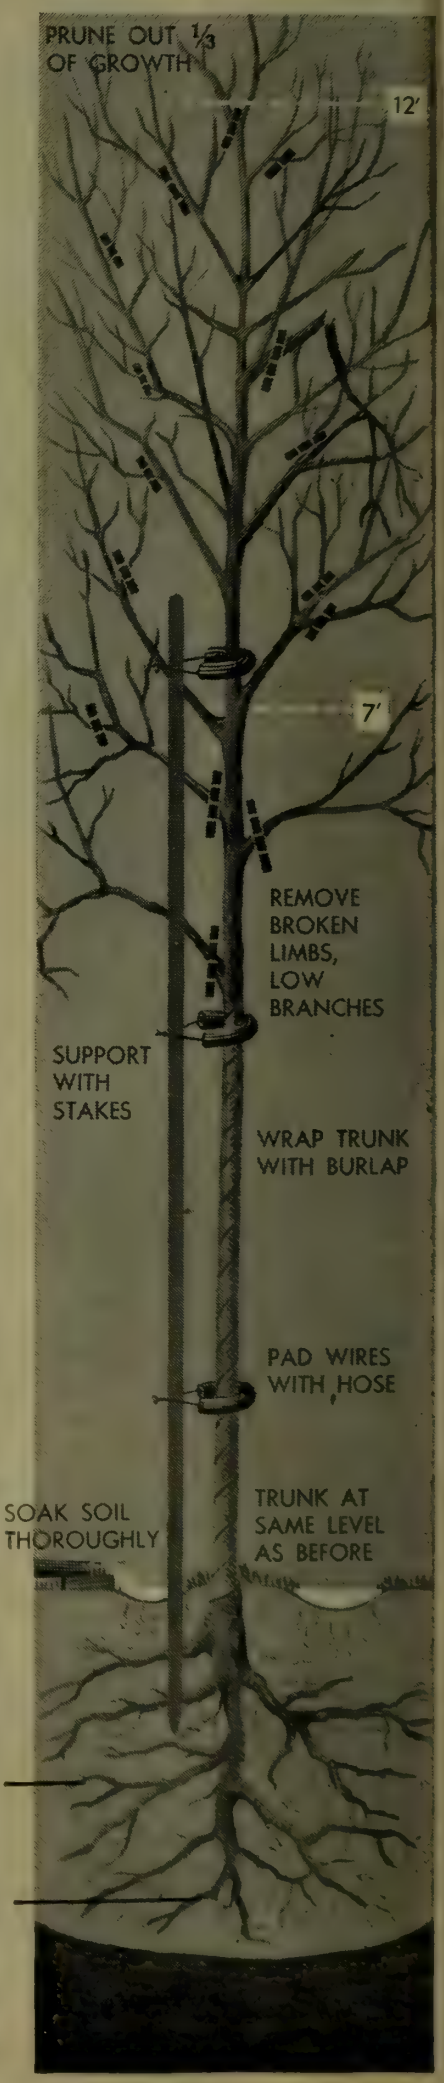
Plant a tree so it will grow

Because the New York Department of Parks plants thousands of trees, its methods have to be foolproof. You can assure your own success in planting trees by borrowing these techniques.

Planting size and season: The Parks Department considers spring the best time to plant trees, although late autumn is almost as good. Trees 2½ inches through and 11 to 12 feet high are usually selected.

Digging the hole: The pit for the tree is dug 5 feet across and 3 feet deep, although it is made half again as big if subsoil is very poor. It is also dug larger, if necessary, to provide at least 12 inches of space between roots and side of hole.



The right soil: Rich topsoil mixed with one-seventh its bulk of organic fertilizer is used to fill the hole around the tree. You can do as well in your home garden by mixing peatmoss or compost into the topsoil. Also add about a quart of plant food for each hole, and mix thoroughly into the soil.

Planting the tree: The tree is set at the same depth as before, and the space under and around roots filled with topsoil enriched as above. This soil is firmed and afterwards thoroughly settled with water. Leave a depression around the trunk to catch water.

Staking: Park trees are supported by 8-foot stakes driven into the ground a foot from the trunk. Wire padded with a length of garden hose ties tree to stake. Guy wires will do just as well where there is no danger of anyone tripping over them. Never tie wires tightly around trunk.

Pruning: Broken and damaged branches are removed, and so are limbs less than 7 feet from the ground which would eventually interfere with traffic under the tree. Other branches are thinned until at least one-third of all top growth has been pruned out.

Care after planting: Wrap the trunk from ground to first branch with a burlap bandage to prevent sunscald during the first year. Water frequently and deeply.

LITTLE BURNS OFTEN LEAVE UGLY SCARS!

Why butter a burn? Use a real burn remedy! Butter or lard are useless in preventing infection.

Apply medically famous Unguentine! Antiseptic and germicidal as well as soothing. A complete remedy for minor burns, it works three ways:

Stay put. Don't urge your presence in the nursery when mother is feeding, bathing, or diapering Baby. Many new mothers are too polite to say no, although they prefer getting acquainted with Baby's needs in solitude.

Don't second guess the doctor. There are probably as many theories on child care as there are doctors and babies, so don't attempt to discredit her doctor's methods if they differ from your doctor's. Despite the changing, contradictory theories most babies develop healthily and happily. Why plant a doubt in the new mother's mind?

Be nonchalant. If you have little experience with infant behaviour, expect to be surprised by the queer actions of this one. Don't utter loud exclamations of dismay or fear when the baby spits up or looks otherwise miserable. You may startle the baby—to say nothing of his mother—more than you realize.

Many happy returns. Don't splurge a week's salary on an adorable bit of handmade, unwashable fluff for the baby. The well-dressed baby today is attractive and comfortable with a simple and easily cleaned wardrobe. So save a busy mother a trip to the store to exchange an impractical gift.

Barbecue makes

By Elizabeth Gilrain

Eating outdoors around a barbecue fire is anybody's idea of fun. Your job as host or hostess will be an easy one if you plan ahead. Locate the fireplace and table close to the kitchen, if you can, so serving will be little work. Arrange for some shelter to break the wind and cast shade during the hot part of the afternoon. Plan to have lights placed close enough to keep the fireside bright, but far enough away to outwit the bugs. Here, at the home of Bud and Virginia Cutler, Westwood, California, is a simple sheltered barbecue-terrace that fills the bill. See how they did it.

Adjustable gooseneck ceiling lights can be focused directly on the dinner table, the fireplace, or terrace. Bud extended his cement driveway up to the fireplace to avoid a muddy patch around the barbecue entertaining easy

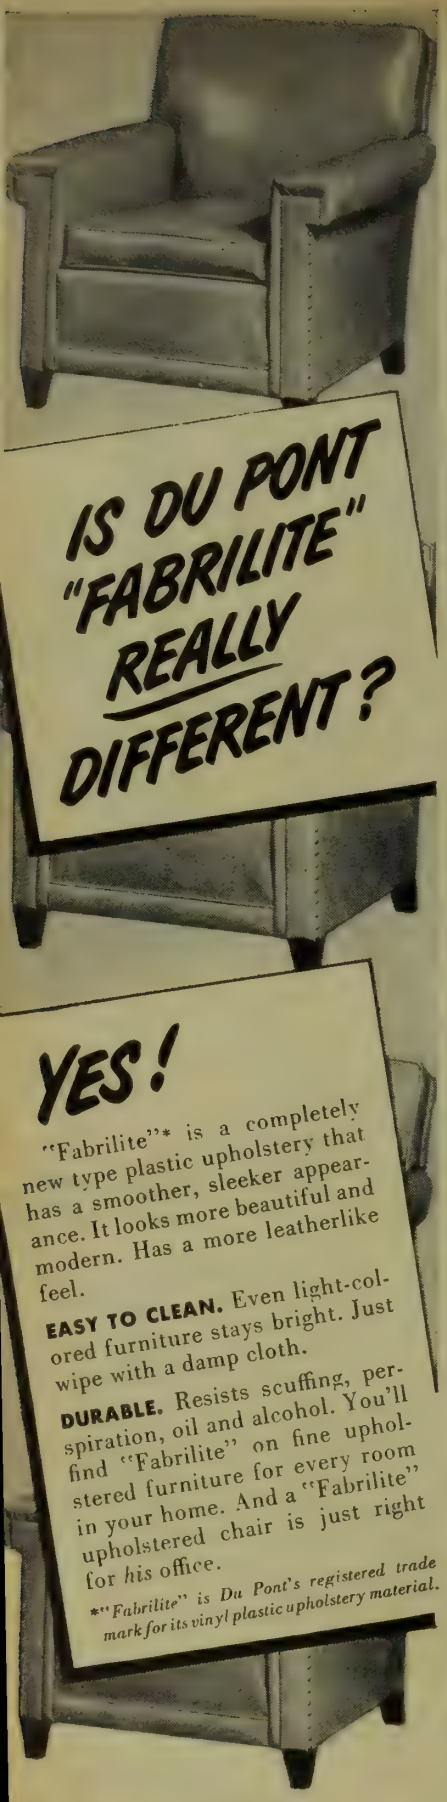
Barbecue shelter shields guests from sun and wind, protects the fireplace from sudden gusts. Bud Cutler cut into the hillside behind the fireplace to make space for cement platforms and retaining walls at either side of the fireplace. Then he built the shelter itself from old lumber (see back view below). Virginia cut seat cushions from discarded mattresses



Photographs: George de Gennaro

Porch of the Cutler home is close to the barbecue so it's a handy serving aid whenever the Cutlers are eating outdoors on the terrace. The inside of the porch is painted green. A wide awning protects it from the sun

Shelter barbecue for use all season

By Martha Darbyshire

If you think the weather's too unpredictable for you to get much use from a barbecue fireplace, you may want to examine this barbecue shelter. Wind and rain can't spoil your fun if you build a roof like this over the fireplace and serving table. The idea for the shelter is simple: a lean-to with three walls and a roof. Change the size and construction of the shelter to suit your own needs. See how well the shelter works.

Whatever the weather, you can grill your steaks or hamburgers here. A sturdy pine roof and back wall, with fencing and lattice at two sides, cut off north winds and drizzle. The shelter has been left open to the south, though, so it catches the summer sunshine. Weatherproof redwood furniture like this can be left out in the rain or rolled under the shelter

Tiny kitchen at the right of the same fireplace saves many a trip to the house. Utensils and dishes are kept here in cupboards. Sink counter is two-inch planking, heavily varnished and waxed to resist wear. Mrs. W. W. Coates, Carmel, California, owns the fireplace; Hugh Comstock designed it

Indoor barbecue is fun rain or shine

The unused side of a double garage, a breezeway, or a sunroom with outside entrance can hold a barbecue wall like this. You'll get more use from a sheltered barbecue. Since food and furniture can be moved in or out quickly, this barbecue room lets you plan a barbecue in any weather.

George de Gennaro

When the weather's fine, trestle table and benches on the driveway make a comfortable eating spot handy to the indoor barbecue. The iron door beneath the grill opens for quick ash removal. A bamboo roller shade over the garage door provides sun protection with ventilation. Home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Levy

When it's rainy or cold outdoors, you can move the table and benches inside and still have a barbecue at your indoor grill. This white brick barbecue has an iron grill, a separate oven (to left), and built-in niches for seasonings. Cupboards at the right store dishes, silver, cooking utensils. How to enjoy being a father dominates the family by default because Dagwood doesn't function as a father. She disciplines the children, spends the money, and manages Dagwood.

Even in earning the family income, Dagwood's constantly threatened by his boss, Mr. Dithers, who is always reminding him that circumstances beyond Dagwood's control may close down the Dithers Construction Company any time.

Perhaps you are up against the same problems as Dagwood. Like him, you may be an absentee father, nonfunctioning except on weekends. In the morning you can't stop to visit because you have to catch the bus. In the evening you're so pooped you take to the sofa as soon as you get home. You want more than anything else to be left alone. Like Dagwood, you seek escape in reading your paper, smoking your pipe, and taking a bath. You're bewildered by your children's questions and their problems. No wonder you end up crying, "Blondie!"

Well, what does your family need from you, anyway?

If you were away during the war, the members of your family got a chance to see what it was like to get along without a father. And if you were any good at all, they discovered that you provided things they couldn't get when you were gone. Important things like security, an intimate masculine response both to your wife and to your children, a model of male living for daughter and son to understand, and continuous contact with the workaday world. Millions of mothers were emphatic about it. "Children shouldn't be reared without a father."

One of your family's greatest needs is security. Your ancestors could turn to their clan in time of need. But your family's a lucky exception if it has a nearby uncle who can take your place if anything should happen to you. That's really the big reason why you're still important. It isn't a case of deciding who's most important. If yours is a small family, cut off from its kin, both you and your wife are indispensable.

But you're needed in a different way than she is. It is you who will become your daughter's first boy friend. On you she will practice her social repertoire, and she'll expect you to respond. She expects you to help her understand and appreciate the things that interest men. In the end, she will learn to love men genuinely and fully because you reward her first attempts at loving someone of the opposite sex.

It's also up to you to save your young son from too much feminine influence. By being around you, he learns what a man is supposed to be like and builds ideas of the sort of man he wants to become. Hero worship is powerful stuff.

But perhaps more than anyone, it's your wife who needs the affectionate response of a functioning husband. Your companionship and affection, if they're adequate and satisfying, enable her to be a better mother. To put it bluntly, your children need to grow up unhampered by the "smother" love of a mother who is starved for lack of affection from her husband. Your children will grow up and break away, and your wife must let them go. You, on the other hand, are a durable object for her affection. You can keep her maternal love so balanced that she can see your children become independent without its being too hard on her.

These are things which make you more than a mere earner and supplier of good things. Your reward comes in finding you belong in the family circle even more than Father Day in Life With Father—a lot more than tragic, nonfunctioning, absentee fathers like Dagwood.

How much fathering do you do?

There's a lot more to fathering than merely siring one or two children. How many of the services we've been talking about do you provide your wife and children? Are you so tied up in your job that you haven't time for your family? Margaret Mead, the distinguished anthropologist, believes that American fathers are victims of a system which throws all the homemaking onto mother and all the earning of a living onto dad. "We present to the child a father who is an animated whip to enforce his mother's role of affectionate ruler," she claims. Doctor Mead doesn't wonder that some fathers get less fun out of fatherhood than mothers do from motherhood.

How true is this statement of you? Are you nothing more to your youngsters than an "animated whip"? Do you do little or nothing to help take care of them and of your home?

Prof. Zella Dague studied 300 Iowa fathers a few years ago. Eighty percent helped punish, but only 30 percent did anything to help develop their children's interest in art, music, and other cultural activities.

Do you agree with the fathers who told sociologist Rachel Ann Elder that they enjoyed being a father as much as their wives enjoyed being mothers? As against two-thirds who said that, only 15 percent said they guessed motherhood was more enjoyable. Most of the fathers in this postwar study said they did things as a family.

Prof. L. P. Gardner, of Cornell University, studied 300 fathers and their 847 children. He found that 70 percent of the fathers figured they were "pals" with their offspring. But they didn't think their own fathers had been pals with them. They criticized their own fathers for the way they had handled discipline and for having been poor companions. Most of the young fathers figured they could provide enough income, but they weren't so confident of their ability to guide and teach and build character. Over half of them admitted they teased their children too much. And only a third of them had given any sex instructions.

What returns do you get from being a better father?

Yesterday a man expected and often received thanks, respect, and prestige as head of a large family. He might even look forward to his children supporting him. Today you can get your meals cooked and your clothes mended more cheaply without a wife than with one. Each child costs $15,000 or more by the time he's 18. What indeed are your returns?

Well, there is still prestige in fatherhood. The community pins the badge of maturity on its fathers. But this is nothing compared with the returns which come from the love and companionship in a growing family.

If you try just a little, you can get as much out of fatherhood as that contented dad, Better Homes & Gardens' "Man Next Door." Remember some of his memories that make all the alleged "hard work" of fatherhood seem like nothing? Here are some of them:

"When your youngest confides it makes him happy, as he goes to the bathroom at midnight to see a light shining under your door. . . . When your 8-year-old tells you he'll build a special room on his house for you and mom to live in when you're old. . . . Your pleasure when your daughter kisses you on top of the head. . . . When your small son asks if you're going to be out for dinner and cheers if you say no. . . . When your daughter comes home only 5 minutes late after a date and perches on the edge of your bed for a chat. . . . When you're in the middle of a lecture to your son (and secretly feel pretty stuffy about it) and he suddenly says 'You're right, Dad.' . . . When your daughter treats you as a contemporary. . . . When you suddenly discover that your family shares your secret idealisms and scorns the same things you scorn."

You can have memories like these, and 10 or 20 years from now you won't take a million dollars for them.

What is a good father?

What do you think of when you try to visualize the ideal father, the ideal mother, the ideal child? These ideals themselves can make or break you as a parent.

Professor Elder tried to find out just how fathers pictured themselves. She asked each father to write down three things a good father does, three things a good mother does, and three things a good child does. What she found was a wide variety of opinions which she divided into two concepts of parenthood—traditional and developmental.

Before reading further, you may wish to write down your own answer and then see if you hold traditional or developmental notions about you and your children.

Professor Elder found that two-thirds of the fathers were predominantly traditional in their ideas. The traditional fathers felt it was up to parents to make children be good and "mannerly." As one of them put it: to the best of his ability, and likes to have his family have the best he can offer. A good mother takes pride in her house, pride in its appearance, and enjoys keeping a nice home. A good child is polite, minds, and knows enough not to act a fool."

"A good father makes an adequate living, maintains his family

A third of the fathers, though, agreed with one who answered: "A good father is interested in what his child does, helps his child to be interested in what the father does, and wants to help the child attain his own goals. A good mother is interested in the child, shares activities with the father and the child, and places the care of the child high. A good child is lively, not smart aleck if intelligent, and is full of the devilment so that he wants to be in everything."

These last fathers had predominantly developmental concepts. This may be a new one to you. But being developmental means nothing more than paying more attention to the growth and development of your boy's or girl's personality than to little Lord Fauntleroy notions of "being good." In addition, to be developmental is to let your wife and yourself grow and develop as persons instead of as model housekeepers and upright perfectionists. A developmental father respects his child as a growing person, likes to hear him "speak up," takes pride in his increasing self-reliance, replaces punishment with an understanding, growth-encouraging type of guidance.

Take the developmental instead of the traditional path and you'll get greater satisfactions from your family than you could ever get from outside success. Instead of feeling that parenthood is a duty which you're expected to discharge, you'll look upon parenthood as a privilege which you have chosen to assume.

What can you do to be a better father?

My first suggestion is that you share more of your business and professional life with your children. You can provide a link between the known, thoroughly explored region of home life, and the unknown, unexplored, intriguing world of outside affairs.

Children play "house" because they understand it. They don't know how to play "office" or "shop." You should give your young hero worshippers an opportunity to learn how "Dad goes about his business." Later, as they grow up, they will enter upon careers with fewer feelings of uncertainty.

Let your children visit you at the office, shop, or factory. Let them lunch with you, take a business trip with you, or get an earful of the shop talk from the men with whom you work. These are great helps to understanding what it means to be a man of affairs.

My second suggestion is that you use your time at home to be a better father. Are you really so tired when you get home that you must do as Dagwood? Must your wife be burdened with explaining: "Quiet, daddy has worked all day. Leave him alone like good children." Napping before supper is stealing time from fathering just as much as if your wife chose the same period to take her siesta. And many dads I've known find they get a real change from the wearing pace of the day by relaxing with their youngsters.

But if you're hopelessly worn out when you get home, try taking a nap at noon. A friend of mine called this an impractical suggestion. "How many dads can take a nap at noon?" he asked.

Well, if a table top, bench, or bare floor is all you can find, nap on them. It may be unconventional, but it's certainly not impractical! Napping is probably as valuable as lunching, and no one has called that impractical! At any rate, you have only yourself to blame if your boys and girls get the impression you're an old tired man who does something mysterious by day and can't be bothered at home except to give punishment.

It's true that you probably have fewer hours at home than your father did. Only one man in five earns his living at or near his home today. Hence the feeling has grown that, as a father, you don't count for much in the life of your children. But the facts are just the opposite. Although the time you have to spend with your children is limited, it is fully as important to them as the longer time they spend with their mother. Your actions are more likely to be remembered. Your words are more likely to be listened to because your hearers haven't developed as good a case of father-deafness as they have of mother-deafness. Your deeper voice and greater vigor in dealing with issues make a more lasting impression than you realize.

What's more, George Bach, a psychologist who has asked a lot of children what they think of their fathers, says you don't have to be a superman to succeed at fathering. You don't even need to have "a way with children" as long as you are moderately friendly and understanding. Bach found that children exalt their fathers into the kinds of persons they dream of becoming. He passes on this advice, "All that is necessary is to be with the children, and they will supply through their own active imaginations, those special qualities that they like to see in their dads."

It's too bad that more dads don't realize this. Actually if you'll just listen to Junior's questions and try to answer them you'll find that's all you need to crack the monopoly on child rearing which mothers and lady teachers have been forced to exercise.

If you can learn to listen and respond when Junior's still a baby, you'll have a start on listening and responding to him as a preschooler. And preschoolers, you'll discover, talk better if you get down on the floor and look across eye to eye to understand the things that chal-

There's far greater pleasure in music you play yourself!

To know how rewarding music can be, don't just sit on the sidelines and listen! Play it yourself, on your own Hammond Organ.

When you press the keys of the Hammond Organ, you release music's most glorious voice. This is the instrument that inspires you to play. You match your moods with the rapturous music of mellow woodwinds, bright brasses, tender strings, and soulful reeds. You add rich color and expression to everything you play.

You range at will from a mere whisper to the full-throated voice of the world's most versatile organ.

Think what this can mean to your children. They can learn great music by playing it themselves on the Hammond Organ.

And it's all so easy.

If you can play the piano, you can quickly learn to play the Hammond Organ!

If you're an average piano player, or if you just read simple music, you can quickly learn to play the Hammond Organ. A few lessons won't fit you for a concert career, but they will enable you to express yourself in music as you never have done before.

And the price of the Hammond Organ is much less than you think!

Costs no more than most fine pianos!

There's no bother about special installations with the Hammond Organ. It fits into any living room and it can't get out of tune. Just plug it into an electric outlet and you're ready to play.

Why wait any longer?

How to enjoy being a father

lenge them. Talking together, playing together, and working together follow in order. In fact, your youngsters will be more conscious of your love if you do things with them than if you try to demonstrate your love in stereotyped ways.

It was at the dinner table particularly that children were once supposed to be "seen but not heard." But now we know that family table talk is the best way there is to establish togetherness.

After-dinner hours can be story hours, play hours, or discussion hours. Tell your wife to let the dishes soak until the children are in bed. Then pitch in and help her while you relive the day together.

All these suggestions imply that every family needs to do things together. Belongingness and togetherness are important words. Both are by-products of things you do as a family.

How to get closer to your children.

You're not alone if you find it hard to talk freely with your children. Lots of fathers have the same difficulty. They're waiting for the day Junior grows up and shows an interest in things like politics and baseball. This is like buying a dog that's already housebroken. You can't get the same understanding of dogs from one that's already trained that you get from a pup you've trained yourself.

Mrs. Hill and I had three children, Judy 7, David 4, and Susan 1½ at the time we first tried our "What do you think" technique. The "What do you think" technique is our name for a method we worked out to break down the barriers between a dad and children who don't talk freely to each other. I'm going to let you in on it.

My wife, like most women with three children, was loaded with tasks which pyramided just when she had to start getting dinner. Together we discovered that life was a lot more satisfying if I took over the two older youngsters just before dinner and kept them in charge until bedtime. Thus freed, Marion could concentrate on feeding Susan and getting a hot meal on the table. I found that Judy and David really needed a father at this time of day. This was just when they were the most active and needed the most attention.

I experimented with roughhousing, playing games, practicing acrobatics and other tricks, but these were too strenuous and stimulating before bedtime. We tried storytelling and reading, too. But, because David and Judy wanted nothing but blood-and-thunder adventure stories, I felt I was missing the chance to share their thinking about other aspects of living. I promised myself to vary the story menu.

One night, quite by accident, we discovered a method for getting much better acquainted. Questions which had been raised about the story were still pouring out of Davey's head as he and Judy climbed into their double-decker bed. Davey said, "Let's wait up a few minutes, I want to finish, please, Dad."

I looked at my watch. "All right, would five minutes do it?" It would. Off went the lid with the question, "If snow falls from the sky, why doesn't the moon, or the stars?"

Why, Daddy?

Ask me no questions,
I'll tell you no lies.
Spare your poor parent
That torrent of why's.

From dawn till exhausted
You endlessly yelp:
Why must I . . . ?
Why, Daddy? . . .
Why can't I . . . ?
HELP!

I'm forced to renege
When beleaguered and riled.
It's a why's father
That No's his own child.

Ethel Jacobson

I stuttered mentally and tried to remember my physics. What was that principle in the law of falling bodies? I couldn't remember, and that's when I passed to Judy with the key question we asked so frequently thereafter, "What do you think?" Judy suggested that they were so far away, that's why. Davey countered that it looked as if fairies held up the horseshoes when the neighbors pitched a game, so why couldn't God hold up the stars and moon.

Surprised at this willingness to take the ball and run with it no matter how complex the questions, I agreed to continue some more discussions like this the next night I put them to bed.

I found "What do you think?" amazingly productive in getting discussions going and pushing it deeper. My pattern of action was one of active listening and passive ball-passing. I allowed the discussion to go wherever it would, and ideas spilled all over the place.

Direct questions from either youngster were met with "Anybody have any ideas about that one?" Often they didn't really care whether I gave them the final answer. Once I asked in fun, "Don't you care what I think?" Judy grinned and said tolerantly, "Sure, but don't talk too long, it's almost time to quit."

Mrs. Hill and I discovered that either one of us could operate the discussion without spoiling the spontaneity of the questions. And we found that talking them over afterward added to our enjoyment of growing up with the children. Both children appeared to us as more understandable personalities.

What kind of questions did we get? Well, there were some about reproduction, sex differences, and conception, but these in turn brought questions concerning the processes of digestion, respiration, and elimination.

Because our youngsters had just lost a grandmother and also a playmate, Mary Ellen, who had died from polio, they asked questions about life and death: Why did Grandma die? (Judy thought her body wore out.) Is her body still in the ground? If you can't breathe, do you die? Is that why Mary Ellen died? Does it hurt to die? Why didn't you pray for Grandma not to die? Is heaven in the sky? Is God like magic? Is God alive? Do angels really have wings? Are there really giants? Was Goliath that kind of giant?

We also got questions involving personal and social relationships: Why do people say it's better to give presents than to get them? Why can't we just pray for God to give the poor people in Europe enough to eat and clothes to wear instead of us sending these things to them? Why do people have babies who don't have enough money to take care of them? Why are there so many Santa Clauses at Christmas and none other times?

I think I've illustrated what the "What do you think?" technique can do to open up the silence between dads and children. With us, and with many of our friends who have tried it, it became a short cut to issues which were most pressing to Davey and Judy. It provided a sort of sounding board to which they could bring both questions and possible answers. It established a chummy "we" feeling between us. And strangest of all, there was a keenness in the questions and in the answers that we had not anticipated. We were frankly dismayed to discover how badly we had underestimated the shrewdness of our youngsters.

The formula for being a better father is still in the making. All I have tried to do is give you some ideas I know have worked. It isn't easy to be a father in 1949, but you can make it the greatest experience of your life.

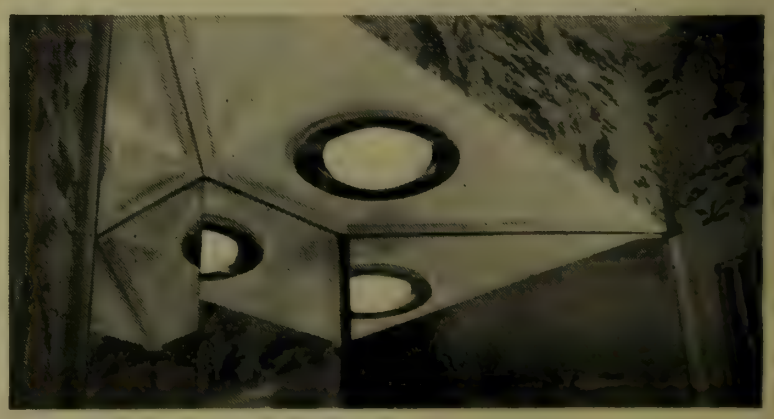
You men will appreciate the fact that the kitchen equipment has taken your job as helper, and fired you into the living room or recreation room. If you tinker with tools, puddle in photographic chemicals, or tie flies, you can have the hobby room in the basement to yourself.

You will be pleased with the out-of-the-way but not out-of-reach space provided for storage of storm windows and screens. Moreover, you don't have to open or shut the garage door—just push a button to set the electronic controls in motion.



Your children, too, will enjoy playing in the recreation room, where they can roast wieners and marshmallows in the raised fireplace. There's little they can do to harm the wood wainscoting on the walls or the asphalt tile floor.

And they'll find the quiet and seclusion of the study will make homework as pleasant as it can be.

This, then, is the Trend House: a home engineered to save you steps, and give you comfort, but with the slide-rule and drawing-board calculations artfully concealed by good taste. It's full of ideas for your home.

Are you really giving yourself to your children?

Putting first things first is important. But how do you decide what is first?

By Helen Reeder Cross

"I think I'd faint, if you ever really looked when I asked you to," my young son said in obvious despair. Shocked, I dropped what I was doing and really looked at the boat Jack had been trying to show me. He had been working on that boat for weeks. Here he was, honoring me with a first look at it. I had given it one glance, a cursory, "Fine, Jack," and had turned away.

I began that evening after the children were in bed to ask myself how I rated—from their viewpoint—as a parent. Jack's accusation had obviously not been prompted by this one episode. I must have failed him before and Ginny, too. How many times, I wondered, conscience-smitten, had I failed to give them appreciation, encouragement? Sure, I thought of myself as a good parent. I kept a pleasant home atmosphere for our family. I fed Ginny and Jack a carefully balanced diet. I kept them clean and neat.

I saw that they visited the dentist and the doctor; I drove them regularly to music lessons; I attended Sunday School with them. Yet Jack's tone, as well as his words, showed that he was beginning to expect that I would fail him somehow.

It took some thinking, some looking back over the day before it dawned on me that I hadn't been putting first things first with my children.

The things I had been doing weren't the most important after all. It was a spiritual accord with his mother and dad that Jack had missed.

Routine and the pressure of work can dull one's awareness of a child's need for our encouragement, help, and inspiration. An institution could give him all that he requires of physical necessities. But only a home and understanding parents can water and nourish the spirit.

There had been other times—I remembered now—when Jack had asked me a riddle, but I was too busy to stop and think of an answer. Times, too, when he had invited me to look at a new oriole's nest, only to have me beg off.

Just yesterday Ginny had asked me to make a new dress for her doll. Finishing Ginny's own skirt had seemed much more important to me.

But a child's set of values is not the same as our more mature one. In all fairness, we should weigh some things by their standards of importance, not ours. Only when we do so can we teach a democratic way of life.

There is such a thing, of course, as allowing a child to become too demanding. Some children exact every morsel of their parents' attention, whether the family is alone or has company. I am not speaking of these, but of children who lead busy lives of their own. Because they're so absorbed with outside interests, we become weaned from a readiness to grant them attention.

We pay attention to them only at certain specified times of our crowded day. We do not welcome interruptions or requests. Yet, how much we miss if our children stop thinking we are interested in all that interests them.

Dropping one's work at a moment's notice, can, I'll admit, put you hopelessly behind in work that has to be done. But most boys and girls are reasonable enough if you don't simply dismiss them with a careless nod or an absent-minded word. Sometimes it means taking time to explain, "Yes, I'd love to sit down with you for half an hour, Jack, and look at your papers. If I do, will you help me catch up by sweeping the porch for me?" Being dealt with on such an adult basis is flattering. And children love making bargains, even when the bargain means work.

First things first. But often it is difficult to tell what should come first. It often helps to project the two conflicting demands into the future.

Which will Jack remember in later years—the basement that was cleaned dutifully by his dad on a Saturday morning, or the fact that he came out when invited to watch Jack fly his kite?

Of which will Ginny think most fondly when she reminisces about her childhood—the ironing that her mother finished to the last piece, or the tea party she surprised her with on a rainy day?

Some people seem to have been born with a gift for knowing which are first things. They know that a glorious spring day is for picnicking or seeking wildflowers, not for washing windows.

But there are a lot of us—I was one—who must remind ourselves every once in a while that our children's values are not only different from grownups', they're even better sometimes.

How to make strawberry preserves

If you like strawberries plump, whole—like old-fashioned sunshine preserves—follow the pictures

1 Place washed and stemmed whole strawberries in heavy saucepan. Cook 3 cups berries at a time for best color, flavor

2 Add 3 cups sugar. Pile in cone in center of berries as shown in picture. Do not stir berries and sugar together. The berries will absorb sugar, and stirring would mash them

Photographs: Wesley Bowman

4 Fill hot, sterilized glasses with cold preserves and seal with paraffin. Here are strawberry preserves so perfect, opening them will be an occasion, and eating them a special treat

Individual Veal Pies

Fluffy mashed-potato border on top—

- 1 pound veal breast or shoulder, cut in 1½-inch pieces
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons fat
- ½ cup sliced onion
- 1 cup cooked carrots, cut in 1-inch sticks
- 1 cup peas
- 2 to 3 cups moist mashed potatoes

Flour meat and season; brown on all sides in hot fat. Add 2 to 3 cups water. Simmer until tender, about 1 to 1½ hours. Thicken if necessary. Add vegetables—transfer to individual casseroles. Top with border of mashed potatoes. Brush potatoes with 1 beaten egg mixed with 1 teaspoon paprika. Brown in moderate oven (375°) 30 minutes. Serves 4 to 5.

Broiled Lamb Chops

Serve chops on toast to catch every drop of juice goodness—

Buy 6 loin lamb chops 1-inch thick. Place skewer through tail end of chops to hold in place. Preheat broiler. Broil 2 inches from heat 6 minutes or until brown. When brown, season with salt and pepper; turn and brown other side; allow 12 to 15 minutes for chops 1 inch thick.

Minted Pineapple Sherbet

Cool and delicately green, with the refreshing tang of mint—

- 1 cup milk, scalded
- ½ cup chopped mint leaves
- 1 cup (1 8-ounce can) crushed pineapple
- ¾ cup sugar
- ¼ cup light corn syrup
- 1 cup light cream or top milk
- Green food coloring

Pour scalded milk over mint leaves. Cover and let stand 1 hour. Strain; add remaining ingredients. Tint a delicate green with food coloring; mix thoroughly. Freeze in refrigerator tray. Turn into chilled bowl; beat thoroughly. Return to cold tray; freeze until firm. Note: If you do not have fresh mint, use 3 drops peppermint flavoring. (Don't heat milk.)

Mr. & Mrs. Hatlo live in Carmel, California, where Jimmy Hatlo creates the daily cartoons laughed over by millions...

say Mr. & Mrs. Hatlo—

"This California custom of the Olive Bowl is a wonderful idea!

"There's no easier way to say 'welcome' when friends call ...and it's an equally nice idea when just the family gathers.

"You simply fill up a bowl or two with your favorite brand of California ripe olives — and set them out where folks can help themselves! Try it...and listen to the compliments."

Ripe olives from California fill an honored place in the diet. Among other good values, California ripe olives offer nourishing protein...and they're a source of Vitamin A and iron. But the reason California ripe olives are famed throughout the world is FLAVOR!

Bite into one. Here's plump, meaty goodness. Here's good eating. Have another...enjoy all you want! (Yes, even if you're a "calorie-counter." For 8 to 10 California ripe olives just about equal 100 calories.)

Dried-Beef Casserole

From start to finish, it takes less than 30 minutes—

- ¼ cup chopped onion
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- ¼ pound dried beef, shredded
- ¼ cup fat
- 4 tablespoons enriched flour
- 2 cups milk
- 2 cups cooked macaroni (1 cup uncooked)
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley
- ⅓ cup grated American cheese

Cook onion, celery, and dried beef in hot fat until onions are golden. Stir in flour; add milk gradually and stir till slightly thickened. Add macaroni, seasonings, and parsley. Pour into greased individual casseroles. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in moderately hot oven (400°) about 20 minutes. Serves 4 to 5.

Tuna Salad Mold

Celery and green pepper give it crispness, lemon juice furnishes a tart accent—

- 1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1½ cups hot water
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 7-ounce can tuna, flaked
- 1 cup chopped celery
- ½ cup chopped green pepper

Soften gelatine in cold water; dissolve in hot water. Add lemon juice and salt. Chill until partially set; add tuna, celery, and green pepper. Chill in individual molds until firm. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

Bran Muffins

They're feather-light and tender, with flecks of bran—

- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 egg
- ¾ cup milk
- 1 cup bran
- 1 cup enriched flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons baking powder

Cream shortening and sugar; add egg and beat well. Stir in milk, then bran. Add flour sifted with salt and baking powder; stir until dry ingredients are just moistened. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in hot oven (400°) 25 to 30 minutes. Any type of bran may be successfully used in this recipe.

Strawberry Shortcakes

Old-fashioned shortcake with golden butter, whipped cream, and sweetened berries—

- 2 cups enriched flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ⅓ cup shortening
- ½ cup milk
- 1 slightly beaten egg
- 1 quart strawberries

Sift flour, salt, baking powder, and sugar; cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk and egg, all at once; stir until mixture follows fork around bowl. Pat out on floured surface to 1-inch thickness. Cut with 2½-inch floured biscuit cutter. Bake on ungreased cooky sheet in hot oven (400°) 20 minutes. Split; spread with softened butter. Put sweetened berries between layers and over top. Serve with plain cream or sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Makes 6 shortcakes.

Spiced Canned Apricots

Apricots steeped with vinegar, sugar, and mixed pickle spices for that piquant flavor—

- 1 No. 2½ can (3½ cups) whole peeled apricots
- ½ cup vinegar
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon mixed pickle spices

Drain apricots. To the syrup add remaining ingredients; heat to boiling and boil 5 minutes. Add apricots and simmer 5 minutes. Cool and store in covered jar in refrigerator.

Broiled Luncheon Loaf

Orange marmalade makes the sparkling glaze—

- 2 12-ounce cans pork luncheon loaf
- ½ cup orange marmalade

Slice luncheon loaf. Spread slices with orange marmalade and place under broiler for about 5 minutes. Serves 5.

Q. How can I plan a conversational grouping for my long, narrow living room? Mrs. G. L., Albert Lea, Minnesota.

A. Plan two or three conversational groupings rather than one. Try a pair of chairs and a game table near far windows; group chairs and tables around the sofa or fireplace; work out another grouping around your radio or piano. Small separate groupings will make your room seem cozier because everyone will be part of an intimate conversational circle.

How to replace a

By Stanley Schuler

Can you replace a broken window pane—and pocket the cash a professional job would cost you?

Think twice before you answer yes. There's more to glazing than slapping on a little putty. You want a job that will keep the rain outside. You want it to be reasonably permanent. You want it neat enough to look well.

That doesn't mean the job is difficult. Far from it. Setting glass is one of the simplest jobs you can do. But you need know-how and the ability to pay attention to details. One professional trick, for example, comes in replacing broken windows that are large, or on the second floor. You can simplify such jobs by removing the frame and placing it on a flat surface. To remove the frame, pry off the stops—the wooden side strips on the inside of the window.

You'll find other tricks of the trade in the pictures, which show you, step by step, how to glaze a window.

1. Remove broken glass. If the pane is shattered, put on a pair of heavy work gloves and pull the pieces out before you do anything else. If the glass is only cracked, however, remove putty first (see below). That way you can remove the larger pieces with less danger of cuts as you lift them out

2. Chip out old putty. It pays to take pains with this job. Every trace of old putty must be removed so new putty will stick. Use an old chisel or jackknife, and chip out the putty a little bit at a time. If you try to pry out a long piece, you may split the wood. Remove the glazier's points (metal triangles holding glass) as you go. Then measure for new glass

3. Apply linseed oil. Before you insert new glass, daub a heavy coat of linseed oil on all wood that will be covered with new putty. That keeps the wood from soaking oil out of the putty, making it dry and crumbly. Put oil on with an old brush. You can substitute thin lead-and-oil paint if you want broken window pane

4. Apply bed of putty. Using a putty knife, spread a thin (1/16-inch), even layer of putty on wood strips the glass will rest against. This is called "back-puttying." It stops leakage of moisture and air, and cushions glass against shock of driving glazier's points in

Photographs: Camera Associates, Inc.

5. Set in the glass. To forestall breakage, set new glass in the frame with the concave side in. You can determine the concave side by sighting along the edge. Center the glass in the opening. Press it down firmly, so all air pockets in putty are eliminated and you have a window sealed from the weather

6. Drive glazier's points. About every 4 inches, lay a glazier's point flat against the glass and start it into the wood with your fingers. Then tap it halfway in with the edge of your chisel. Slide the chisel on the glass, and you'll reduce the danger of cracking the pane. Inspect points carefully; replace those not wedged tight against glass

7. Apply putty. The putty should be about the consistency of dry, thick dough. It's best to start with a fresh can, but you can use old putty that is somewhat plastic. Just add a few drops of linseed oil and knead mixture on a piece of glass. When putty is pliable and free of lumps, roll it into pencil-size strips. Then, starting at a corner, lay strips end-to-end around glass. Press the strips of putty lightly into place

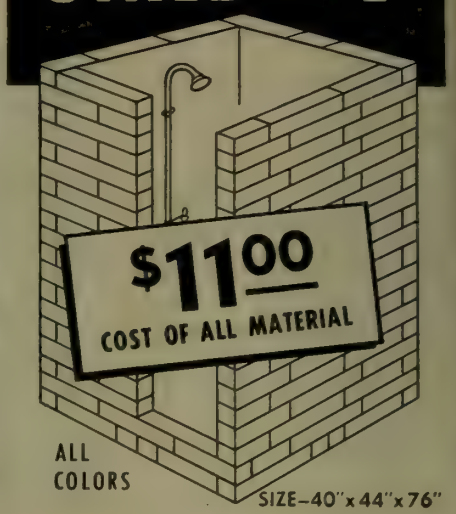
8. Smooth putty. Holding putty knife at an angle, smooth out the putty. Use long, corner-to-corner strokes. Don't let the putty spread so far onto glass that it can be seen from inside. Scrape up putty that is cut off and use it to fill despressions. Repeat the process until bevel is smooth. You can wipe stains off glass with turpentine cloth



9. Paint two days later; putty won't be hard, but the surface will have toughened enough to withstand drag of the brush. Use outside paint, and apply two coats. Use a metal shield to keep paint off glass. But don't neglect to seal edge between putty and glass; paint at this point keeps out moisture, helps insure a lasting job. Paint that gets on glass can be removed with a razor blade when dry

Door glass. In many doors, glass is held with thin wood strips instead of putty. If you are careful, you can remove these strips without breaking them. Insert edge of chisel behind a strip on long side of opening. Pry gently, and strip will bow out without breaking. Nails will pull through, can be removed with pliers. After first strip is out, others follow easily. Set in new pane, nail strips back in place

Our storage wall was built into an entry hall, but it could easily be fitted into almost any room. We spent about six weeks of spare time on the job. Some of our decisions, reached by trial and error, may help you.

For example, the 9-foot ceiling called for 9-foot supporting panels. That meant waste and fitting with standard 4x8 plywood panels. So we cut three uprights from a 5x9 table-tennis top, without waste; the fourth upright is built of scrap lumber and faced with ¼-inch plywood.

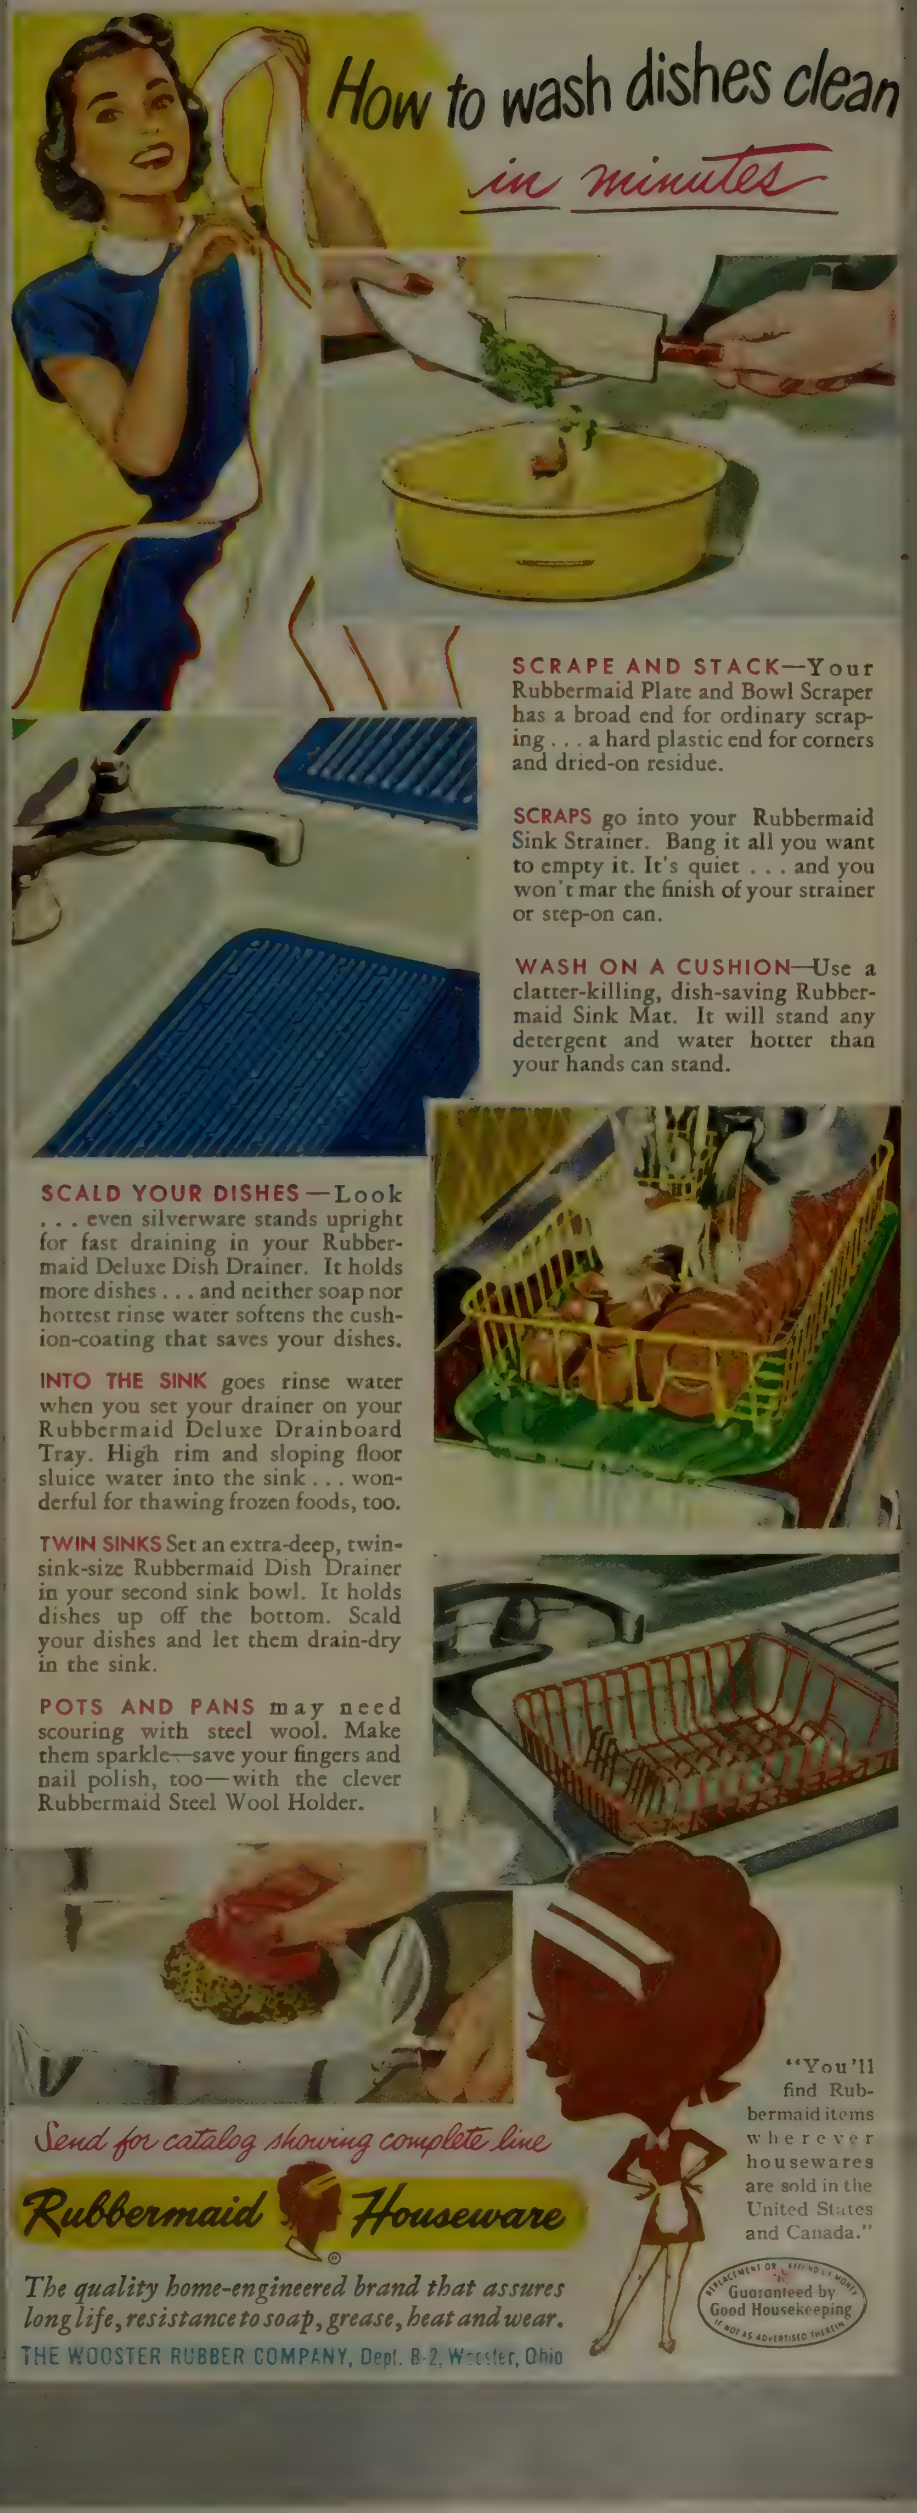
The chest of drawers presented difficult construction problems, so we had the job done by a professional cabinetmaker. As sides and back are not exposed, a skeleton frame holds the drawers. This part of our storage wall cost us $38.75 for labor, $23.93 for lumber.

Pine facing strips nailed on front plywood edges finish the unit neatly, strengthen it, give a solid foundation for door hinges, and add a valuable inch of inside space.

The plywood doors were lipped in an hour by a friend with a power saw, making it unnecessary to get the precise fit required with flush doors. Hinges are of the offset type made for kitchen cabinets.

The photographs show, step by step, how we went about building our storage wall.

Use long wedges where necessary to level each section of your storage wall. Few old houses are square, and if leveling is omitted doors won't work right. Note that pilot holes for flathead screws have been drilled and countersunk; the upright can be attached to shelves as soon as leveling is completed. Shelf near floor strengthens the unit, improves its appearance, and makes cleaning of unit much easier



Square each joint as you go, and you'll more than make up time on subsequent fitting. Strips of plywood, glued and nailed to edge of each upright, will add strength to facing strips of pine on which doors will hang. Note skeleton frame of scrap lumber against wall; it was used instead of plywood for economy, will be faced later with thin plywood

Long screws, driven into the edge of a plywood shelf, serve as dowels and give the unit all the strength necessary. Note that the shelf is set into the reinforcing plywood strip at the edge of the upright. Where possible, it's good practice to cover rough plywood edges with neat wooden facing strips

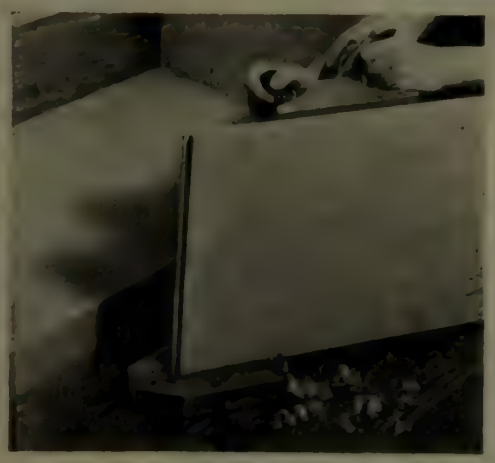
For children, consider adjustable shelf and hanging rod. This one is held with metal strips and movable clips, usually sold for use in bookshelves. The opposite side of this upright is exposed. To avoid having rows of unsightly screw heads showing, the fixed shelves rest on cleats which were screwed from the inside

Skeleton frame for drawers, built to order, slips neatly into place. You can expect a fit like this only if you have measured carefully and kept sections square and level. Frame will be anchored by screws driven through uprights. Note facing strips along floor and in background



By sighting along straight-edged board, you can line up sections before tying them together. Side sections will be joined by high center unit and by screws holding chest. Block tacked to upright brings it to same width as those with facing strips. In the rear strip, note recess provided for joint

Hide the nailheads with stick shellac, melted on spatula and pressed into place. As shellac hardens, smooth it out with a sharp chisel, then with fine sandpaper. Select shellac that will match the final finish of the wood, as it will not take stain

Doors lipped on a power saw, like this, are easy to fit as the lip hides slight errors. If you have only hand tools, flush doors are easier to make. Hand clamps hold the door upright while the outer edge is rounded with a plane, in preparation for the sandpapering

A simple jig, made by nailing two scraps of wood together, will help you locate door pulls so they will be spaced evenly. You'll find that this method is quicker and more accurate than measuring for each pull; also, the location of all pulls can be marked at one time

To attach pulls, clamp them on, drill pilot holes, and drive round-head screws through from the inside. The washers keep screwheads from chewing into the wood. These pulls, as well as those on drawers, were made by cabinetmaker who built chest—at no extra cost

Final sanding with 3-0 sandpaper includes rounding all corners slightly so finish will adhere. As the first step in finishing the unit, all plywood was coated with fir sealer to subdue the prominent grain. Then oil stain, selected to match woodwork, was wiped on all wood with a cloth. Over this went a sealing coat of white shellac followed by two finishing coats of satin-finish varnish

Cars have interior decorators, too. They are called trim engineers and a whole staff of them create the interior charm of GM cars.

Key to smart fashion

THERE'S much more to car styling than meets the eye.

It takes, first of all, the skill and judgment to create styles which are right.

But it also takes expert research, engineering and production to translate fresh new designs into a gleaming reality of glass and metal.

The reason that GM styling pleases so many car owners is that so many people in General Motors make it their full-time job to keep ahead of the style parade.

With the same precise skill lavished on fine jewelry, craftsmen carve the dies from which come door handles and other body fittings.

Keep your range like new

By Genevieve Callahan

Will that shining new range of yours still look bright and new 2, 5, and 10 years from now? The answer depends almost entirely on how you take care of it; how you treat its finish. Good care assures longer wear, better cooking results, and eliminates unnecessary service calls.

There are four ways a range can lose its brightness: 1) Boil-overs on surface units or burners, 2) scratching, cracking, and spotting of porcelain, 3) boil-overs in the oven, 4) grease film and meat spatters on oven lining. Here's how to prevent them, and how to clean up after the spills and splatters that do occur:

Cleanup can be easy

Top of range

Wipe up spills immediately, especially acid foods like tomatoes. The porcelain enamel on your range is acid resistant, but it is not acidproof. Spills not wiped off right away dull the finish. If range is hot, use a dry cloth. Later when surface is cool, you can go over it with a cloth wrung out of warm soapy water. Rinse with clear water, polish when dry

Photographs: Stanley

Surface units

On most electric ranges you can lift the surface units and remove the pans underneath. Use very fine steel wool to get a high shine which will reflect heat back to the cooking utensil. Enclosed electric units are self-cleaning; spilled food burns off hot coils. When unit is cold, brush with a stiff (not wire) brush. Wipe chrome with damp cloth; spots may need rubbing with a mild cleaning powder

Grates on gas range

Grates lift off for soap-and-water scrubbing and to allow you to wipe pan underneath. When boil-overs do not occur, wiping the grate, burner head, and porcelain enamel parts with a damp cloth is sufficient daily care. In case of boil-overs on burners, see page 198

Keep your range like new

Porcelain shell around burner head lifts out for an occasional sudsing and rinsing in the sink, and to get at burners if a boil-over occurs. Boil-overs that drip onto burners form sticky black coating unless burner is cleaned before it's used again. See below.

After a boil-over, burner from gas range should be scrubbed in hot soapy water with a stiff brush. Rinse, pat with absorbent paper toweling, and allow to dry in warm oven thoroughly before replacing in range. Drip tray below burners is easy to remove and wash in sink, just as you would a dish.

The oven. To loosen fat spatterings in oven, saturate a cloth with ammonia or pour about one-half cup into a saucer and allow to stand in closed oven overnight. If there's a burned spot on oven bottom place ammonia-soaked cloth over it. Ammonia fumes soften the greasy film.

Next morning: Take out oven racks; wipe oven thoroughly with ammonia-dampened cloth. Wipe again with a cloth wrung from clear warm water, then with a dry cloth. If it's an electric range, be very careful not to get any moisture on heating units. Scrub oven racks in the sink with a mild abrasive and hot soapy water.

The broiler. Immediately after using broiler pan, pour off fat, wipe pan with paper toweling, then run hot water over it and brush with stiff brush. Follow this quick treatment with a soaking in hot sudsy water during dinner. Occasionally you'll need to wash the lining of the broiler oven. In some gas ranges, the broiler glides can be removed, and in others the entire compartment comes out for easier washing.

How to prevent cracks and scratches

The porcelain enamel on your range is remarkably sturdy. But sudden temperature changes can cause the surface glaze to crackle into tiny squares, called "checking" or "crazing." So avoid wiping the hot porcelain enamel with a wet cloth or spilling cold water on it.

Scratches on the range top usually come from sliding hot heavy pans from the unit or burner to the porcelain work surface. Lift, don't slide the pan. And set it down gently. If the bottom of the pan is hot, rest it on a heat-resisting pad to protect the range.

How to prevent boil-overs top of range

Big thing to remember is that "high" heat is starting heat only, and should be used just until boiling point is reached—no longer. Boil-overs happen when heat is not turned down as soon as food begins to cook. "Low" heat is hot enough to keep food at the boiling point.

A minute minder—either the one on your range or one you can buy in any housewares department—will police your cooking. Set it for the number of minutes it usually takes for the food to reach the boiling point. It will remind you that it is time to turn down the heat.

The kind of food you are cooking, the amount of liquid, and the size of the pan are important, too. When you are making jelly or jam, for instance—where directions call for a "full rolling boil"—you will probably need to use medium or high heat; but if you use a big, broad saucepan, and stir the boiling syrup constantly, you can avoid overflows.

This does take a few extra minutes, but not as long as it takes to clean an oven. Top crust should hang over one-half inch all around the rim. Tuck this in between the bottom crust and the pan, then flute the edge with thumb and fingers to seal. A strip of dampened parchment-paper pie tape stretched around edge gives extra security. So does a china pie bird in the center of the crust; the syrup boils up inside the bird, instead of overflowing and burning.

Covered casserole dishes are habitual boil-over offenders. The cure is to avoid filling the baking dish to the brim, and to use low to moderate oven heat. As for scalloped potatoes—which are notorious boil-overs—one good way to prevent trouble is to add only about half the milk at the start; bake, covered, 30 minutes, then add more hot milk almost to submerge the potatoes, and bake uncovered until tender and brown.

When baking just one pie or one casserole you can use a small cooky sheet to catch possible spill-overs. If, however, two or more pies are being baked at one time, a sheet large enough to catch the juice would cause uneven browning.

How to prevent oven spatters

You can practically eliminate spattering of grease from roasting meat—and consequent cleaning job—if you keep the oven temperature low (300 to 350 degrees).

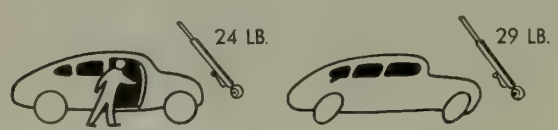
Your tires

How to make them ride smoother, last longer, go flat less . . . know the symptoms and save trouble and money

By Walter Adams



Photographs: George Fletcher

Remember how your car, when new, squatted down to the road at 70. Does it still? Or do you feel an uncertain flutter in it, as if it were rising up, quivering, ready to take off? That is one of the evils of unbalanced tires. And your car is dangerous even if you usually drive only 50. Here you see how balance is checked. An unbalanced wheel spun at high speed shakes the whole front end

This is about things you've got to watch yourself because nobody else is going to watch them for you.

Take that very simple old-hat thing, tire inflation. "Inflate low-pressure tires to 24 pounds," says the rule of thumb. That rule may be all right for low-pressure tires when they're cold, when they've been standing several hours. But if you inflate them after you've driven around town a mile or two before you get to the service station, you ought to inflate them to 27 pounds. And if you inflate them after you've been wheeling along the highway for a few miles at high speed, you ought to go to 29 pounds.

Inflate 24-pound tires to 29 when they're hot

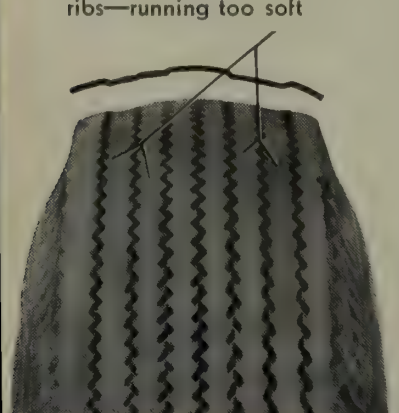
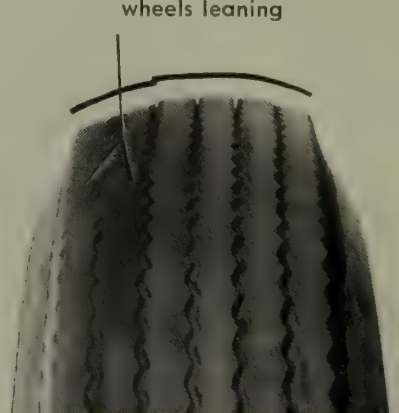
You see, as you drive, your tires flex, and this flexing heats the air in them and increases pressure. This is normal, desirable. If you inflate a tire only to 24 pounds when it's hot, it'll be 5 pounds under-inflated when it cools. When you drive again, this under-inflated tire will belly out, flex too much, and grow excessively hot, which results in faster wear and sometimes in broken casings.

Some auto manufacturers recommend more than 24 pounds pressure in cold tires anyway. Their cars are heavier, particularly in front, and they recommend 27 or 29 pounds. Follow their recommendation and increase your hot-tire pressure accordingly.



What wear indicates. You can read tire wear just as your doctor reads your physical condition with his stethoscope and little bottle.

Below in the photograph at left you see a sort of front-tire wear that sometimes shows up after about 3,000 miles. Note that the second and third ribs from the outside are slightly more worn than the center ribs. If this wear pattern becomes pronounced, or if it appears in rear tires, check with your service shop; it's a symptom of driving with your tires too soft.



Now note the second photograph below. Cars are designed so that the front wheels are like the legs of a bowlegged, pigeon-toed man—they lean out faintly at the top and toe-in a bit toward the front. It makes for easier steering and less tire wear. If worn bushings, a bent suspension arm, or sticking springs or shock absorbers change this bowlegged, pigeon-toed wheel alignment even one degree, you can cut your tires out in a hurry. If, as in this second photograph, two or three ribs on one side of a front tire wear heavily, it indicates your wheels are leaning in or out too much at the top.

But if each tread rib is worn down more on one side than the other, giving a saw-toothed, stepped effect across the tire as in the next photograph, your toe-in is off. Usually the high side of each rib has a feather edge (you can see it better on a tire). If the inside of each rib is high, the wheels are excessively toed-in. If the outside is high, the wheels are [Turn to page 202

GENUINE CLAY tile

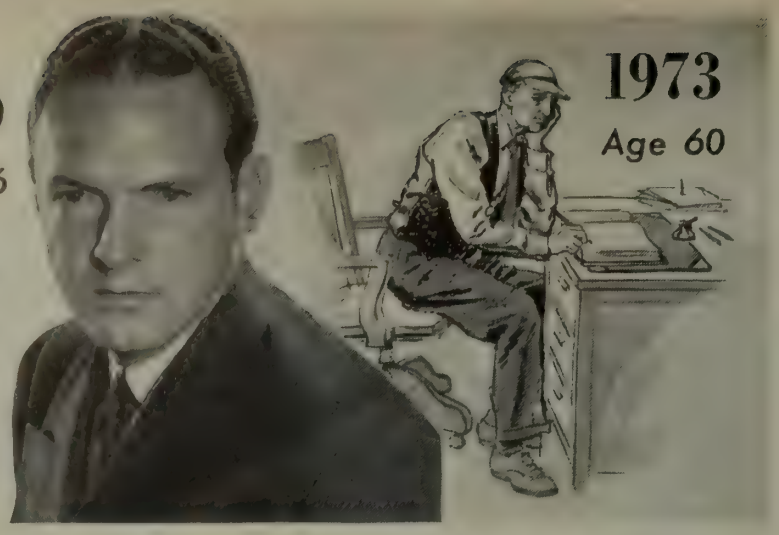
In this modern bathroom, all eyes turn admiringly to the sparkling tile walls and floor. But look a little further and you see many other interesting ideas to keep in mind for your own home.

A multi-purpose room that serves two or even three members of the family at once. Folding doors that afford privacy when needed. And all made bright and attractive with clay tile in decorator colors.

You'll appreciate the efficient tile floor that never needs waxing, polishing or refinishing . . . colors that won't fade or darken because tile's beauty is fired in to resist water, soaps and stains.



With sparkling tile on the tub area and service walls, they can be cleaned—and kept clean—as easily as a china dish. Never a worry about peeling or long exposure to heat and dampness.

Yes, tile sets the stage for modern ideas, modern living.

excessively toed-out. Either is bad.

You haven't the tools to correct this misalignment yourself. But by knowing the symptoms you can get to the shop with it before it ruins your tires.

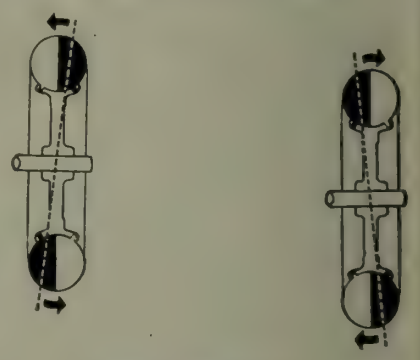
Now look at the last photograph on page 200. When you see a shallow cup wearing into the tread, get at the trouble, for the cup will grow as this one has in the photograph. It may develop into a series of cups. In time, in a sensitive car, you'll hear and feel a distinct slap every time the cupped part hits the pavement.

There are four possible causes: a crooked or out-of-round wheel (called run-out); an unbalanced wheel (this is most likely); an imperfect tire; or faulty brakes that wear the tire in that one spot.

Checking balance and run-out, like everything else that involves brakes and steering, is a shop job. But you can rough-check out-of-round by jacking up the wheel and revolving it, and holding a pencil or key so that it just clears the center tread. If clearance varies more than a tenth of an inch, there may be your trouble. To rough-check for a crooked wheel, hold your pencil so that it just clears the bead seat of the wheel (that's the part that the tire bead seat's in; don't use the rim, it's less accurate). If the clearance varies more than .075 of an inch (approximately the thickness of two dimes), it's suspect. Have it looked into. Often it can be corrected merely by repositioning the tire on the wheel and rebalancing it.

But by far the most common cause of cupping is unbalance. Maybe you remember when your car was new, how it squatted down and hugged the road when you stepped up to 70. Does it still? Or do you feel a strange, indefinable fluttering in it, a feeling as if it were rising up uncertainly, quivering, ready to take off? (Keep it up and it probably will.) Sometimes it goes so far that the steering wheel quivers in your hands. Do you put that down to wear and age?

It isn't, usually. For the thing that causes this flightiness is the same thing that causes most cupping: unbalanced wheels and tires. The cupping, like a headache, is not a disease in itself but a symptom. And the cure is simple: get your wheels balanced, and switch the cupped tires to the rear wheels, where the wear is more even.



Perhaps best balancing methods balance the tire and wheel right on the car, so that the tire, wheel, brake drum, and hubcap are balanced as one. But any method that balances the wheel and tire together off the car is usually adequate. For best results, particularly if you have the wheels balanced on the car, you ought to have them rebalanced every time you switch wheels and tires around. Tire wear alone is enough to change wheel balance

Now to complicate things there are two kinds of balance: static and dynamic. Remember how you used to test the bearing adjustment in the front wheel of your bicycle—lift the wheel off the ground to see if the weight of the valve was enough to swing it to the bottom? That wheel was statically unbalanced: it had a heavy side; its weight was not distributed equally around the hub.

Now if the wheels and tires on your car have a heavy side like that, they are statically balanced. Even slight unbalance is enough to make them hop and pound up and down at high speed.

But even a wheel that is balanced statically may not run smoothly at high speed. To see why, suppose you tie a weight to a string and start swinging it around over your head. The faster you swing it the higher the weight rises, until it is swinging straight out at right angles to your arm. As the physics book would put it, any weight tries to swing at right angles to its axis of rotation. Now look at the diagram below. Suppose one side of your tire is heavy on the outside, the other side heavy on the inside, as indicated in the black areas in the diagram. The weight of the tire is balanced around the diagonal line through the heavy areas.

In dynamically unbalanced wheel, weight is not centered around axle. Dark areas below indicate the too-heavy areas

When wheel spins, heavy areas try to spin at right angles to axle, as line and arrows indicate. This starts your shimmy

Suppose now you start spinning this wheel. Like the weight on the string above your head, the heavy areas indicated in black will try to spin at right angles to the axle, as indicated in the diagram at the left. The top half will push to the left, the bottom to the right. But when the spinning wheel is half a turn farther around, as in the diagram at the right, the forces will try to wobble it the opposite way. When Grandpa watched Little Egypt wobble and shimmy at the Chicago World's Fair half a century ago, he didn't see anything like the high-speed shimmy twisting at your tire when it's unbalanced. The faster you drive the more violent the shimmy and distortion become, until finally the whole car is quivering with ecstasy as it contemplates one final self-destructive fling into the ditch.

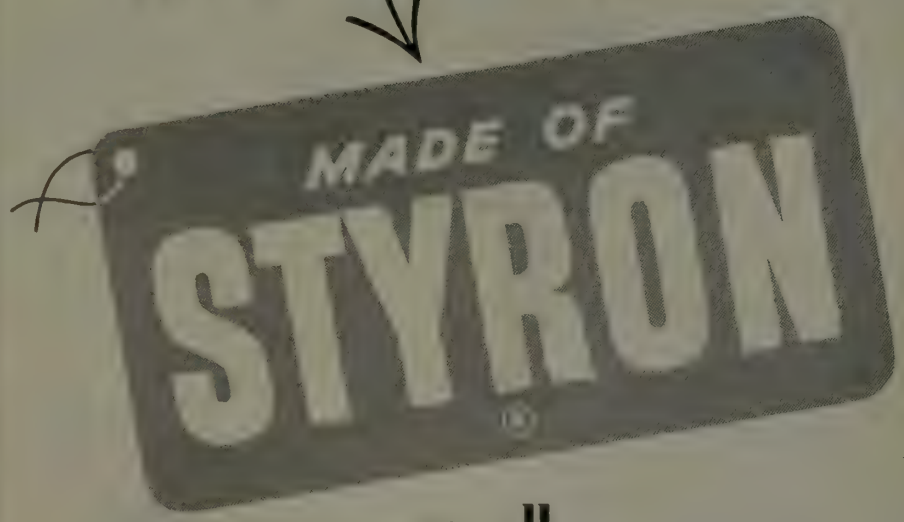
But balance these tires, switch the cupped tires to the rear wheels, and once again your car hugs down to the road and runs straight and true at high speed. The trouble wasn't old age after all, just unbalance.

Cups

Now look at the photograph above. One cup in a tire may give birth to many cups, until they circle the tire. When you ignore the unbalance that caused the first cup, the hopping and shaking wear steering parts, and this looseness aggravates the cupping until it circles the tire. To check for worn bearings and bushings, jack up one front wheel. Take hold of the tire top and bottom and shove in and out. Everything tight? Now take hold of the front and rear of the tire and push and pull. Everything tight? Then jack up and check the other wheel too. There ought to be no looseness, no wobble or turning independent of the other wheel, even in the wheel bearings.

You'll find it an economy to have wheel alignment checked at least every 12 months; and especially after you've skidded into a curb or culvert or had some other such minor accident.

When you know the wheels are properly aligned, note the position of the steering-wheel spokes exactly when your car is running straight ahead. Then when your car is bumped or you hand it up on a stump and you find the spokes off their original position, you'll know something is bent somewhere and your tires are in for fast wear. Even a slight bend that may not show up on a casual check will change the spoke position of the wheel.



How to pull crisscross. Even if you keep all tires properly inflated and wheels aligned and everything tight, your tires will not wear evenly. Front tires wear slower because they aren't power driven, but they wear less evenly because the continuous steering and turning distorts them more. The percentages on the diagram on the next page indicate the relative rates of wear on the different wheels.

To equalize wear, to get maximum tire life, crisscross wheels and tires from one position to another every 4,000 miles, as in the sketch. There are other switching systems you can use, but the point in any case is that changing the tires to different positions will help keep your tires wearing evenly. If you wear your tires out evenly and buy five new ones at one time you can get a better price on the lot.

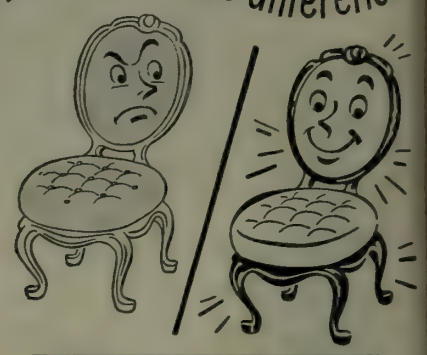
Never let a good spare remain idle. Tires need to be massaged or exercised, in order to stay alive.

How to keep from having flats. Flats on the road cut up good tires and tubes. The AAA makes almost a third of its service calls because of roadside flats. Changing flats is a dirty, exasperating job. But tests by fleet owners show you can avoid 9 out of 10 roadside flats by this simple system:

1. Check tire pressures once each week, when the tires are cool and before adding air.

2. Compare the pressures. If one of the tires is down more than two pounds below its running mates, that is a danger signal. Find and correct the cause of the excessive loss. Most punctured tires start as slow leakers, run a thousand to two thousand miles before they go suddenly flat. So by finding and correcting the slow leak you eliminate the sudden flat.



3. Each time your car is greased have the tires inspected, or do it yourself. See if any blisters or bruises have developed, look for nails or bits of glass or metal which have become embedded and are cutting through. A large percentage of punctures are caused by embedded objects that do not penetrate the inner tube until the tire travels thousands of miles. Pull or dig the objects out with pliers and screwdriver. If they have left sizable cuts, have them sealed, for minor cuts grow deeper; water and grit work into them and later destroy cords inside the tire.

This inspection takes only a couple of minutes. Your station man can run his jack under each end occasionally when you get gas. That's a lot easier than putting your own jack under while lying half in the ditch on a country road.

It will work. It has worked for fleet owners and it worked for the army advancing into Germany in '45. The supply trucks were rumbling bumper to bumper, through rubble and over blasted roads and over no roads at all. Tire casualties were so severe they threatened to slow the drive. An order went out. "Hells fire, probe that tire." At every stop drivers were out with pliers and screwdrivers, digging glass and metal out of the rubber. As a result tire casualties went down by more than half, and the army kept rolling.

It will work for you, too.

ally considered to be allergenic. There is evidence that the dust that causes allergies comes from within the house, that it doesn't represent merely fine particles of the various fabrics in the furnishings but that, somehow, it is produced in those fabrics. Some authorities even think it may come from microscopic organisms.

Whatever its true nature and origin, house dust, according to one noted allergist, is the most important single air-borne cause of asthma and rhinitis, probably the greatest producer of respiratory allergy including bronchial asthma, and the cause of a fairly large proportion of eczema. According to one conservative estimate, five million persons in the United States are sensitive to house dust. Other guesses put the figure nearer to 15 million.

To combat this nuisance, allergists have prescribed allergen-proof beddings or encasings. But there remain the draperies, bedspreads, rugs, carpets, and upholstered furniture which may produce dust.

Often, because complete elimination of offending allergens has been difficult and even impossible, patients are desensitized. Starting with small doses and gradually increasing the quantity, dust is injected, usually at weekly intervals, in order to change the body-reaction of the patient so house dust no longer will bring on symptoms. Yet desensitization may be only partly successful as long as the patient is exposed to overdoses of house dust.

Doctor Coca himself was a serious victim. In him, house dust produced such symptoms as watery eyes, chest oppression, diarrhea. He had put dustproof covers on all of his bedding and most of the upholstered furniture in his home. He had even installed a filter to remove dust from other sources. These measures had helped. Yet, whenever he was in the house during vacuuming or within a few hours afterward, he would suffer immediate chest discomfort and, by next morning, would be a victim of diarrhea.

Then, in November 1947, Coca had an idea. He knew of a company which made an oil for catching bacteria in the air as a means of cutting down infection in such public places as banks, restaurants, stores, and hospitals. At Coca's suggestion, the company began experiments to devise an oil that might be practical for use in sealing dust.

Doctor Coca tried the first sample himself, thoroughly soaking all his rugs with it. It worked so well that thereafter he could stay in the house even in the midst of the vacuuming. It kept working too when he discontinued use of the air filter.

Coca then began trying it on various patients allergic to dust—those with asthma, chronic rhinitis, canker sores, headaches, nervousness, abnormal tiredness, indigestion. Results were excellent and, as soon as Doctor Coca announced his findings in a medical journal, other doctors began to try out the new method.

The new product, called Dust-Seal is not a cure-all. Certainly, it's no substitute for medication where the allergy problem is a multiple one—caused by more than one agent. Yet, even in such cases, elimination of the dust factor may help to some extent and may simplify the doctor's search for the other irritants.

A white oil compound prepared so it mixes easily with water, Dust-Seal has no odor, creates no fire hazards, and is said to be nonirritating, nonsensitizing, and nontoxic in the concentrations employed. It harms no colored fabrics to which water can be safely applied. In fabrics which can be cleaned, such as carpets or upholstery, there is no change in color, texture, or appearance after treatment.

Not only simple to apply (by sprinkling rugs, carpets, and upholstery fabrics and by immersing launderable items such as blankets, pillows, slipcovers in a wash), it is also relatively inexpensive. Cost of a pound is $4.25. Generally, one pound more than the number of rooms (seven pounds for a six-room house, for example) will be sufficient to treat every possible source of house dust.

One treatment will last a year and probably until the item is laundered or dry-cleaned. Moreover, because much of the compound remains even in washed fabrics, the amount needed thereafter will be less. A carpet, for example, that takes $3 worth of the compound the first time takes 30 cents worth each year thereafter.

Most effective procedure is to consult your physician first. Make certain that yours is a case in which house dust is a factor and a case which might be benefited by its elimination.

Consult your doctor, too, to determine which fabrics ought to be treated. Some patients may benefit from application to floor coverings and bedding alone. These seem to be the most important sources of allergenic dust. However, it may be necessary to apply the compound to upholstered furniture, quilted bed pads, draperies, bedspreads, slipcovers, and even cloth upholstery in the automobile. In the beginning or later, your doctor may decide that fabrics previously removed from the bedroom or house on his advice can be safely returned if treated with the compound.

Doctors are cautious about new developments. They want reports based on thousands, not just dozens, of cases. That, of course, takes time. Dust-Seal has not been tried long enough for all of them to know whether or not it will end the menace of allergenic dust in your home. But leading allergists agree that Doctor Coca's idea is sound and that any effort to make household dust stay put is a definite step in the right direction.

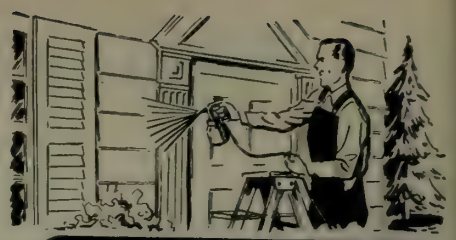
Make the most of space and view

Place your dining table in front of the window



Make the most of a dining-room view by placing your drop-leaf table in front of the dining-room windows. One leaf up, the table seats three. With both leaves up, you can set places for five—and still keep the table at the window. Chairs are covered with stainproof plastic material

Photographs: Grand Rapids Furniture News Bureau

Make the most of dining-room space by setting your drop-leaf extension table between a pair of windows. Two mounted masks between the windows, and above the table, tie the window-table grouping together. (You could use pictures or plants instead.) Comfortable host chairs make your table before the windows right for reading, studying, or games

You want your dog to learn to "fetch"—but not the neighbors' chickens!

By Russell K. Lowry

My dog has a habit of killing chickens, my own and the neighbors'. How can I stop him?—A. E. A., Indiana.

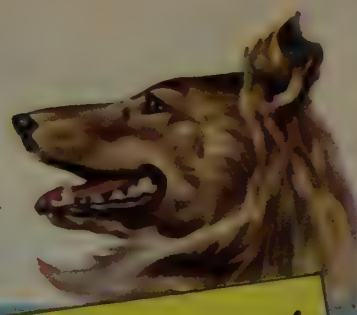
Cure is difficult and requires much vigilance, because all misdeeds must be corrected when they happen. Best results have been obtained by tying up the dog in the chicken house for a week to 10 days, feeding him scant rations (to make his confinement as unhappy as possible.) Theory is the criminal will get so fed up with the society of chickens he will never want to look at one again.

Last summer our dogs suffered from the heat, had skin rashes, and were plagued with swarms of flies. What can I do to make my dogs more comfortable?—Miss G. M. O., Tennessee.

First, provide plenty of daytime shade and breezy-cool sleeping quarters, with ample amounts of fresh, clean drinking water available at all times. Dogs exercise less in the heat and food can be cut down a bit. Step up proteins (meat) somewhat, but lessen amounts of carbohydrates (starch and sugar). Get the DDT gun working on the flies, but use a water-base (wettable) solution in proximity to the dogs. Remove droppings promptly, as these are gathering places and hatching headquarters for all types of insects which plague dogs. Brush and comb your dogs daily, to increase their comfort and well-being.

Three months ago I got a 1½-year-old female Chow for protection. But she's very friendly and lets everyone come into the house. Can I train her to be a watchdog?—Mrs. B. A., Pennsylvania.

Three months is a short time, measured in dog-ownership and association. Your pet has not yet had time to develop strong ties and deep loyalty. She hardly knows her new home. More and more she will develop the required sense of watchdogging, as her fondness for you grows. Give the dog a chance.



I want to train my Cocker Spaniel in the same way the army trained dogs for the K-9 Corps. Where can I get a book of instructions?—H. L. K., Florida.

War dog training is not for a Cocker! The only breeds which seemed to have the required temperament for this kind of work were the Doberman Pinschers, German Shepherds, and Boxers. Use a regular obedience training manual.

Which breed lives the longest?—W. E. M., Ohio.

We've heard a lot of arguments on this question, but as far as we know, no one breed can claim greatest longevity.

When the children play with our dog, they get their faces close to him and even put their hands in his mouth. Is there any danger of infection?—Mrs. L. P., Maine.

Danger of infection from dog to child is practically nil. Only two things are communicable to humans, as far as dogs are concerned—rabies and ringworm. Happily, these are exceedingly rare ailments. But danger of infection from humans to dogs is another story. Practically all pulmonary ailments, such as colds, flu, and pneumonia are communicable from humans to dogs. If you or your children have a bad cold, it's best to keep away from the dog.

My dog bites at her posterior and drags it across the floor. Does this mean worms? I've been told that making a dog swallow a copper penny eliminates worms, because the penny is dissolved by stomach acids and the copper kills the worms. Would this be harmful?—F. L. V., Maryland.

If you want a live dog, don't, for goodness sake, give credence to the copper penny yarn. This is no doubt one of those quaint superstitions our great, great, great granddads cooked up. Biting and dragging the rear across your floors could mean (1) tapeworm, or (2) anal gland infection. In either case, get a veterinarian to look into the situation. Save your pennies.

My highly bred Cocker Spaniel female broke away and mated with a mongrel. Will this accident ruin her for future breeding to a fine, selected sire? Does it take a certain amount of future litters to clean her out so there won't be any remaining strain of the mongrel in her puppies?—Miss R. B. G., Minnesota.

The fact that your female was mated to a mongrel will have no effect on future litters. Once she has her coming litter, that's the end of the contamination.

GATOR ROACH HIVES

Removable canvas roof

keeps porch cool and dry

By Virginia Wallace

Want a screened-in porch for summer living? We did, too. For years we planned a front porch where we could enjoy outdoor living and dining by day or night. We couldn't have a regular porch with shingle roof, though, because a permanent roof would darken our living room in winter.

Most practical and least expensive solution was this awning-like canvas roof that can be put on in spring, taken off in fall. The roof is tight-fitting and rainproof when it's up. Plastic porch screens can stand the year round. Dark green coloring was mixed right into the concrete for the floor, so the floor color won't fade, chip, or peel off even after seasons of wear and weather.

Here's how the canvas roof works out in actual use.

Before we built the screened porch, our only outdoor living space was a back-yard terrace —where we were fair targets for every insect in the country

Photographs: Stanley

After the porch went up, we added sheltered outdoor living to our list of summer fun. The canvas roof gives us shade on the hottest days. Screens keep out evening insects. New shrubs and flowers outside make the terrace more pleasant than ever

Our new porch has plenty of room for a drop-leaf dining table as well as chairs and wicker couch. Kitchen door at back is close, so it's no trouble to serve summer meals on the porch. A door at right leads into the living room—linking indoor and outdoor living areas rug with dye

Mix dye in concentrated form, one packet to 16 ounces of boiling water. Mix thoroughly, simmer for three minutes, strain through cheesecloth to remove sediment. Then test color; to get a lighter tone, double the amount of water. Dye will set best if applied hot; let dye pot simmer

Apply dye with brush of the right size—two-inch width for large color areas, small and large watercolor brushes for small pattern areas. Protect floor with newspapers. Dye background first if pattern is worn; that brings up design. On patterns, apply light tones first, then dark hues

Solid-color rugs can be redyed rapidly. Place rug on lawn or concrete driveway. Apply dye with clean broom, brushing solution well into rug. Dissolve two to four packages of dye in two gallons of boiling water, depending on color you want, and put the entire solution on the rug

Ants on peony buds

Do ants on your peony buds worry you? Relax. The ants do not feed on the buds. They do carry aphids or plant lice to the buds and these often puncture and suck on the outer peony petals causing minute blemishes which bother the sturdy peony plants not at all. If you think ants are a nuisance later, this is your first chance to kill them, thus preventing the build-up of more powerful colonies. Expose special ant poisons in bottles only ants can enter.

Spray for early tomatoes

Seedless tomatoes have been much talked about, but Dr. S. H. Wittwer at Michigan State College thinks it's really early tomatoes we wanted all the time. Left to themselves, tomatoes do not set fruit until the temperatures rise above 59 degrees. By spraying the first flowers with parachlorophenoxyacetic acid, Doctor Wittwer found he could get fruit to set at this temperature. This results in early crops when tomatoes are most welcome, before local crops of tomatoes from naturally pollinated flowers are ready, and while prices are still high.

Radioactive fertilizers?

Before you dash out to buy the giant economy-size bag of super-irradiated plant food, read a little further. Despite claims, to date no scientist worthy of the name has been willing to say that there has been any increase in production due solely to the use of radioactive fertilizer or that such a fertilizer will be forthcoming at some date in the near future.

Miraculous results in your garden from using such a fertilizer are years away, if they ever come. So for the present, save your money until first-flight scientists give you the signal to go ahead!

Success with redbud

Have you had trouble growing the lovely redbud tree? Your trouble may be due to lack of the necessary bacteria in the soil. Redbuds are legumes—like beans, peas, and the clovers. Try a heavy feeding of nitrogen in the spring, when the buds show color and again in August. A tree food rated as 10-8-6 is just right. Test your soil. About neutral, a reading of 6.0 to 6.9 on a soil tester, is best soil. Give your trees good drainage, a loose open soil, and plenty of water—but no wet feet.

Invasion helped chrysanthemum growers

The Japanese invasion of the Philippines resulted in a better way to grow and ship chrysanthemums! Dr. Vernon T. Stoutmeyer of the United States Department of Agriculture and in charge of the valuable quinine-producing seedlings that got out ahead of the Jap invasion, tried shipping them in sphagnum moss instead of soil. The plants arrived in perfect condition.

Commercial growers were quick to make use of the discovery. Today, one big seed firm grows all its hardy chrysanthemums in plant bands filled with sphagnum moss and cuts shipping costs to a fraction of what they were when soil was used. Packages containing rooted cuttings have been sent from coast to coast and back to arrive in perfect planting condition. One lot I saw had been deliberately set on a warm radiator overnight, yet revived with only a little water.

JUNE GARDEN GUIDE

In all sections:

- Prune spring-flowering shrubs as soon as they are done blooming
- Plant seeds of hot-weather annuals like zinnias, marigolds, and cosmos
- Finish planting dahlias by June 15
- Soak, not sprinkle, garden in dry weather. Water should go down at least 6 inches
- Keep insects and disease under control
- Mulch wherever possible to save work with hose and hoe during hot weather

SOUTH

Keep rose blossoms cut; cultivate after each shower or use ample mulch to conserve moisture. Spray or dust weekly, and, in Middle and Upper South, give a light feeding (2 pounds to 100 square feet of bed).

Feed, seed, and mow lawns. Feed centipede grass sparingly. Plant hulled Bermuda grass seed and stolons of Zoysia matrella, centipede, and St. Augustine grass. Try iron sulfate—one pound to 1,000 square feet—on yellowed St. Augustine and centipede grass, and soak thoroughly.

Make softwood cuttings of azaleas, rhododendrons, roses, and deciduous shrubs. Cut cleanly, treat with a rooting chemical, put ends in sand, cover with glass, and keep moist. Transplant when roots have formed.

Plant German iris in Middle and Upper South; plant gladiolus bulbs at two-week intervals. Dig spring bulbs if you wish, but wait until tops are dead; place in a cool, airy spot to let them dry off.

—W. Elbridge Freeborn

TEXAS-SOUTHWEST

Set out fall-blooming crocus as soon as you can buy the bulbs. Transplant azaleamums started in flats and give them a good feeding. Make cuttings of gardenias, oleanders, hydrangeas, and Grand Duke jasmines.

Prune both vine and tree forms of wisteria to keep them within bounds. Remove old bloom stalks from gladioli.

Give Bermuda grass lawns a good feeding, especially if rye is being sown with it for winter green.

Watch for red spider, especially on violets, and control by removing foliage, dusting with sulfur, or low-pressure spray from garden hose. Spray crape myrtles for aphids, and water them well unless season has been wet.

Spray vegetable garden for insects and disease. Plant pumpkins, sweet potatoes, and late cabbage. Thin cantaloupes to two vines to a hill, and feed liberally.

—Marian Price Scruggs

Plant out geraniums now that frost danger is past. Transplant young perennials to the flower bed. Make light applications of plant food along rows of annuals, perennials, and vegetables twice a month and cultivate in—frequent light feeding is better than one heavy one.

Repair your lawn if you've neglected it, although it's late for general reseeding. Feed when lawn is dry and water plant food in at once. Cover reseeded spots with peatmoss to hold moisture; use seed mixture with about 10 percent annual grass to protect young lawn grasses.

Pull weeds as they appear, especially crabgrass. Use 2,4-D for heavy weed infestations, but only on lawns three months old or more. Watch lawns closely for brown patch in rainy weather; spray at once with a copper compound.

Spray glads every 10 days with DDT to control thrip. Use sulfur-DDT combination on dahlias to kill both leaf hoppers and red spider. Use a combination of DDT and lead arsenate for cankerworms and other chewing insects on trees.

—Harvey Bicknell

Divide primroses and plant in semi-shade. Remove dead flowers from camellias, azaleas, and rhododendrons and feed plants with an acid-soil plant food.

Spray roses with double-purpose spray to kill insects and control black spot, mildew, and rust. Spray broad-leaved evergreens with lead arsenate to control strawberry weevil. Use poison bait to kill the same pest around primulas.

Sow string beans, corn, and Lima beans for late use, also carrots and beets. Plant late-bearing tomatoes for fruit until frost. Give strawberries and raspberries plenty of water and liquid plant food to insure a heavy crop.

Give lawns a second application of high-nitrogen plant food. Water plant food in at once, and repeat watering two or three days if weather is sunny to prevent burning.

—Ada V. Turner

Remove some of oldest shoots on climbing roses to encourage growth of new, flowering wood. Cut back longest shoots on wisterias to help check growth.

Dig up yellowing clumps of ranunculus and anemones; dry roots in shallow boxes, then dust with sulfur and store. Divide bearded iris, discarding portions affected by borer or rot. Pinch back chrysanthemums to keep them compact.

Dust roses every 10 days to prevent black spot. Spray shrubs for scale insects which are active now. Use poison bait and DDT for ants which carry scale to orange trees.

Potted plants

House plants are usually better off if they can spend the summer outdoors. To arrange them like this is to turn a problem into an asset. Note no balance is attempted, but the tall trained ivy and taller rubber tree are kept out of the wind

Shelves produce a banked effect such as florists use. This accommodates many more small pots, and low plants in front hide leggier ones. Roof and house wall cut force of wind. Stakes keep tall plants from tipping. Pretty and practical

How to keep something bright growing all summer in a shady space right outside a large window is beautifully solved here. Wide pots of tuberous begonias are set down where tulips grew earlier. Begonias were already started, need only a daily spraying to stay in good health

egins on page 52

Maynard Parker

Potted plants can even take the place of shrubs. Here bright tubbed azaleas, and sweet olives dress up a small paved front yard. Sun them for a few hours each week, if you want to keep potted flowers other than tuberous begonias in shady places. Be sure they get plenty of water

Stanley

Pots of red geraniums say welcome in a universal language when dropped into rings attached to a terrace railing like this. Glazed pots are better than porous clay pots in such exposed positions. The soil they contain dries out much less quickly

This ad for men only

MEN should buy the garden hose—but keeping the women very much in mind. If you do it right you can sell them the idea of doing more outdoor work and liking it.

If your wife will never use the hose maybe you don't need Koroseal. It costs a little more (but only $9.85 for 50 feet and makes up for it by lasting longer). If you don't buy Koroseal it will pay you to remember the name Garden Club, a rubber hose made by B. F. Goodrich, sold in the same stores. It's lighter than most, strong, long-lasting, a wonderful value.

But Koroseal's a third lighter still (weighs only half as much as some hose) is so easy to carry around—just pick it up like a light bundle, drag it or toss it around like a piece of rope. And it's clean to handle—its polished surface doesn't pick up dirt. It will last for years because it never checks nor cracks from exposure to sun and air. You never need to drain it—just don't leave it (or any hose) shut off at the nozzle. You can leave it outdoors all year round if you want to.

Look for label. Every length of Koroseal hose is plainly labeled Koroseal. Be sure you see the name to be sure you're getting the real thing. The B. F. Goodrich Company, Industrial and General Products Division, Akron, Ohio.

I been sharpening lawn mowers thirty odd years now. So I guess I know a good mower.

Course you want a good one. No sense having to buy another four, five years from now.

First place, remember that what you want a lawn mower for is to cut grass. Just that.

There's a lot of important things about a lawn mower you can't see. Like the kind of steel in the blades—whether it has good ball bearings and cut gears on both sides—whether you can true it up and be sure it'll stay trued up. Average man has to take things like that pretty much on faith.

Tell you what you do:

Find out where they sell Pennsylvania mowers. There's five of them—Great American, Meteor, Pennsylvania Jr., Penna-Lawn and a power mower—for different kinds of lawns, different kinds of grass and different size pocketbooks. Those Pennsylvania people been making fine lawn mowers for more than 70 years. Some of their mowers been cutting grass for ten, twenty, forty years.

You'll be mighty pleased with a Pennsylvania-made lawn mower.

The diary of a plain dirt gardener

By Harry R. O'Brien

Maggie was hanging up the wash—in work clothes, tired, hair every which way. Then strange autos stopped in our drive, an uninvited garden club, which flustered her no end

June 1 Business matters will require me to do a good bit of traveling by spells this summer and a long trip is just ahead. So the next few days are to be devoted to catching up on all work that must be done and to getting the place in such shape that only maintenance chores will be necessary while I'm gone.

Roses, now beginning to bloom, are already in good shape. They have been cultivated, hoed over again, weeds raked up and hauled off to the compost pile. All have been given a good square meal of plant food—a good practice ahead of blooming.

They have been dusted, too, with a good general-purpose dust to protect against diseases and insects. So here, with more dusting as needed, with maybe a cultivation or two, is all they will need until July. Mrs. Maggie, of course, will have to keep faded blooms clipped off—one garden chore she really seems to enjoy doing.

A good bit of the iris needs to be dug, divided, and reset elsewhere. The correct time to do this is, as I view it, any time after they are through blooming until along in August and I hope to get it done in this period, by installments. To get the jump on it, I began this afternoon to dig the varieties of table iris I have. Donald already has some spaces worked up and ready for iris.

Table iris, in case you haven't heard, is a kind of tall bearded iris, except that it isn't tall and the blooms are small sized. They are simply little jewel editions of the large-flowered sorts. Stems are slender and graceful. Height varies from 12-24 inches. They bloom at the same time as the tall bearded.

These table-iris varieties have been developed especially for cutting and indoor arrangement. Miss Mary Williamson of Bluffton, Indiana, has done more than anybody else to develop these varieties, and I believe she gave them the name. Some of the real old varieties, too, such as Tom Tit and Sherwin Wright, can be classed here.

I dug all we had on the place, divided them, and reset them to make a new bed by themselves.

I got up to make a garden-club speech —and then discovered I still had garden dirt under all of my fingernails

This bed is behind some dwarf evergreens, so hidden that I hope Maggie doesn't find them as cutting material until year after next.

June 2 Set out cauliflower plants in a great hurry, for I had to rush off to a garden-club meeting tonight at a distance, where I had been invited to be on the program. As I was there and ready to speak, I discovered that there was dirt under all of my fingernails. Oh well, it was honest dirt—and that cauliflower will taste downright good, come late summer and fall.

June 3 Hot weather has brought sweet corn, beans, and glads popping up and growing. Between rows, weeds are getting started too. So got out the jolly little garden tractor this evening and gave everything a good cultivating in the back garden. Also went over ground not yet planted. The best time to kill weeds here is before the ground is planted.

With hot, dry weather, the asparagus has begun to play out and it is time to stop cutting. By now, Maggie has a lot put away in our basement zero box, frozen, for use next winter. So Donald went over the bed with the tractor, to give it a light cultivation. Then I scattered an application of 4-12-4 plant food.

While I was using the tractor, though, and just when I was at the bottom of the vegetable garden, the critter stopped dead. Out of gas. I looked in the can where we keep gas. Empty. I asked Donald to go to town for more. He mumbled that David should do it. David growled and said it was Donald's job.

Well, at that moment I had on an old torn shirt, which made me look like a hobo on a picnic. I just stopped arguing with the boys, jumped in the car and went after that gas. And thereby suffered great loss of local social standing, as divers important citizenry recognized me and saw that shirt.

June 4 By now, roses are opening up all over the beds. I took time out this morning to check up on newer varieties. One of special note is the dark-red Nocturne. My opinion is that here is a rose of real merit, both as to quality and amount of bloom and vigor of foliage and bush. This holds true, too, of Diamond Jubilee, a large-flowered buff-orange. Both were 1948 introductions.

I have another outstanding new one too, which the originator, a good friend, sent me under number to try out for him. I now know that it has been named Fashion. This is a floribunda type, of an excellent, thrifty low-growing bush with lovely glossy foliage. The semidouble light blooms seem to me to be a new shade of color in roses. It is quite hardy and resistant to black spot. Watch out for this in the news.

June 5 Last night there was a little shower. Morning paper says rain is coming. So today, being Saturday anyhow, was a day to get a lot of work done. If I can set out plants and sow seeds just ahead of a rain—why that's fine. So with David to help, things began to happen.

First job was to water well the cabbage and tomato plants in the coldframe. Then while this soaked down, we turned to other things. I had managed to get some seed of the Burpee Hybrid cucumber—sold out when I had first inquired for it at the seed store downtown. This is the one that Maggie liked so well and that yielded so liberally.

David and I planted nine hills in a row across the vegetable garden. He scooped out shallow holes with the spade. I scattered some plant food in the bottom of each. David used a hoe to refill the hole with soil and make a flat hill mebbe two inches high. I followed after and planted the seeds, about six to a hill—to be thinned to three plants.

I saw too that the muskmelons are beginning to come through the ground. Success with these is to keep them constantly protected while small from beetles and other insects, which both eat the plants and spread wilt.

Began whacking bushes grown out of bounds. In places we can hardly get by when rain weighs down branches

So I hurried for some dust suitable for melons and cucumbers and dusted each hill. This contains rotenone and I get it ready mixed at the store.

Then David made furrows with the wheel hoe and I followed, dropping seed for a second planting of seed corn. He came after and by running the shovel alongside, threw soil over into the furrow to cover the seed. Then on to set out cabbage and tomatoes—a job I wish I had managed to get done two weeks ago. But betwixt weather and earning the family living, things don't always get done on the day the book says is right.

I dug the cabbage and tomato plants carefully, so that as far as possible, I could have a little ball of moist earth about the roots. The plants were not so large, but they ideal time, in the cool of evening. But actually we set them out in mid-afternoon under a broiling sun. But within an hour, every tomato plant was standing erect and by suppertime, the cabbage had perked up likewise.

You see, as I set them out, David came along behind and watered them in with a starter solution. This he made readily by dissolving some plant food in the water. This gives the plants a quick pick-me-up and prevents wilting. At this point I released David, but went on working myself.

I had neglected to raise any broccoli plants, so in part of a row I sowed a packet of broccoli seed. These should come up, and if thinned and tended, make a crop for fall without transplanting.

With the wheel hoe, I gave the mum bed a good cultivating. With hand hoe, I went through the strawberry bed and dug out various weeds which had been missed by the cultivator. Now I was ready for that rain—and the supper bell was ringing.

After supper I firmly insisted that Maggie go back with me to see the new roses, including Lavender Pinocchio—which is really that color, and gaze upon progress amid the vegetable patch. I stood on the back path, orating and pointing to the cabbages and such.

Hearing no response, I turned around—and no Maggie. I had been talking to myself. She had spied those peonies clear back of the vegetables—some extra ones we have there—and there she was, cutting blooms off.

June 6 In the wee hours and half awake, I heard rain pattering on the roof. It kept raining gently all day, with everything getting a good soaking. I'm surely happy that we got all that work done yesterday. Only regret is, I didn't get in zinnia and squash seeds. Well, we can manage without squash, but I do want a good planting of the new Luther Burbank zinnias, at least.

June 7 Rain again and too wet to work the weeds. But after oration from Maggie, got out shears, clippers, etc., and began job of whacking back some bushes grown out of bounds and over paths and gates. In places we can hardly get through when it rains and water weighs down the branches.

Only work otherwise was to take in mess of spinach, lot of radishes, and quart of strawberries for supper. Hinted to Maggie as to high merits of strawberry shortcake. But my hint didn't work. It is poor psychology to take all those things in at once. Too much time involved in preparing spinach and radishes.

June 8 It is necessary that I leave tomorrow on a long trip, in pursuit of the family living, and

Donald is to go along, to help me. David is having his final exams down at the University and when these are over, he goes on the domestic pay roll at fairly nominal salary, with title of Superintendent of Summer Maintenance.

I've been trying to get it into his head where the Lima beans are and how to weed the strawberries and that the Memorial daisies, now about through blooming, must be cut back so they won't go to seed and what kind of dust to use on everything.

Tonight I took him out to where I keep our dust supply in the garage. I tried to explain to him the uses of the various kinds. He just couldn't get it into his head about rotenone and DDT and sulfur and what not.

Finally, in despair, I told him just to load the big duster with general purpose dust and to use it on everything except the vine crops—roses, potatoes, beans, cabbage. Use this one other dust which says cucumber beetles on the outside on the melons and cucumbers. I didn't say anything about tomatoes, for these doubtless won't need anything until later in the summer.

June 9 Hurried out in brogans and overalls after breakfast for a last look at things. With hedge shears, cut off the faded blooms from those daisies, myself. This way, they will stool from the base and be ready for dividing later. Saw that I had never taken down my winter bird feeders. Did this and stored them in garage.

Then Donald and I, having packed up, climbed in the family chariot and off we went. My last words to Maggie, as we drove away, were: "Please sow that zinnia seed in the end of that bed where Donald spaded, just north of the iris."

We were spending the night in Lafayette, Indiana, and after supper, drove out to howdy with John Allen, the veteran photographer of Purdue University, and his wife—old friends and notable gardeners—at their home just outside town. And learned something.

Brown thrashers have been ruining John's sweet corn. Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher take their young to his garden corn. They dig down alongside a little shoot coming up, pull it out and feed the softened grain to their offspring.

First planting was ruined and a replanting going fast. So John tried covering each hill of corn with a leafy twig. The birds didn't bother the corn under this and he has hopes of a crop after all. The birds simply moved over to a neighbor's garden. We saw them over there, hard at work in the twilight.

June 13 Sunday morning, and Donald and I were driving through Joliet, Illinois. So we turned south a few miles toward Elwood to howdy with Lyman D. Glasscock, whom I have known for years but had never visited at home.

Mr. Glasscock is one of the most important originators of new peonies in the world today. For many EndoWeed for a weed-free lawn.

It's how you cultivate —not how much

By Ralph K. Andrist

Cultivating a garden is like any other job—it's much easier to do a good job if you know just what you're doing and why you're doing it.

Cultivation to kill weeds and stir up soil around plants is probably the biggest single job in your garden. Weeds may cut vegetable yields by one-half or more, and they're just as hard on flowers. Cultivation also puts a fine dust mulch over the top of the ground, which helps slow down evaporation of moisture, especially if soil tends to crack open.

The diagrams below show you what happens when you cultivate, and why there's a good and a bad way. Remember these principles when you work in your garden, and you'll be able to do more for your plants.

What happens if you don't cultivate? The sketch gives you the answer. Weeds grow and crowd the plants, robbing them of necessary moisture and food. Other water is lost by evaporation from cracks in the earth. And, almost as important, your garden looks untidy

Drawings: Brimer

Things look better after you go to work with hoe or cultivator. The weeds are gone, and moisture and food go to your plants as they should. The cracks are broken up, and bacteria which work best in loose, warm soil are busy releasing more food for plants

Deep cultivation might be good—if plants didn't have roots. Restrict your hoeing to the top inch or two or you'll injure roots. Even then, don't cultivate right after a light rain; let water soak down first in order not to hasten evaporation by stirring the moist soil

Don't cultivate too much! Magnified view shows properly cultivated soil, made up of tiny granules. Spaces between contain humus and hold air, water, and dissolved plant food. Roots grow easily in such soil and pick up the nutrients that make a healthy plant

And this is what happens if you overcultivate. Soil granules break down, and spaces are gone. Soil now sheds light showers, gets waterlogged in heavy rain, and packs hard. Your feet are also packing soil between rows when you are in the garden too frequently

Better than hoeing, and far easier on you, is the use of a mulch such as grass clippings or leaves. It insulates soil against hot sun, absorbs rain, slows drying of soil, smothers weeds. Apply at least two inches deep. Use plant food under mulch to get full benefit

We stacked up logs

Begins on page 32

The half-logs make a flat wall inside, which we're furring out with 2x4's before putting on wallboard. I'm nailing one of the 2x4's in place on the north wall of what will be a bedroom

They're half-logs tongued and grooved on the side so they fit together and make a flat wall on the inside. On the inside we're furring out with 2x4's and finishing with wallboard.

We found the logs less expensive than a frame house of the same 26x30 size, paying $560 for all of them. We're preserving their natural color by painting them with a clear oil.

Ours is a four-room house with no basement, but plenty of built-ins and closets, and a good-sized attic for storage space. We're going to heat with a floor furnace.

We were real amateurs. I didn't know a joist from a beam when we started, and Howard knew little more.

To illustrate: not until we had taken the forms off the foundation, laid the subfloor, and started to put the first logs in place did we notice we had cut four feet off our patio in pouring the foundation.

As things usually do, it worked out for the best because that let us add two feet to our bedroom and two feet to the guest closet in the front room, creating storage for bulky things like skis, tennis rackets, and luggage.

Luckily, that was our only major error, unless you count my injury. One Sunday I was chopping down a small tree. I started to shove it over, but I didn't finish that day. The roots of the tree must have gone under a yellow jacket nest on the ground, because the wasps really took off after me.

I took off too, and didn't stop for a good 200 yards! I looked around cautiously and found I had lost the wasps—and had only five stings.

Then I noticed my wound: in my hurry to leave I had taken the ax with me and chopped my knee during the sprint.

We haven't hired a single cent's worth of labor, but have done it all ourselves with some family donations like Howard's grandfather, who helped on the subfloor and partitions; Howard's father, who helped us get started on the plumbing, and my mother, who baby-sat for us.

The three men worked four days of Howard's vacation putting up the logs and inside partitions. We worked weekends and nights as long as we could see and longer.

It took us almost a month to put our shingles on; at the last we got so eager we took a lantern up on the roof and shingled after dark.

We've worked about 670 hours so far. Figuring carpenter's wages at $2.50 an hour, we've already saved $1,675. Before we're done, we'll have saved twice that figure. We have $3,500 to spend, and not a cent more; it's taken some mighty careful shopping, but I believe we'll make it under the wire.

We had intended to celebrate last Christmas in our new home, but three months of bad luck set us back; things like a demolished car and the baby's broken leg kept us from the job.

At this writing the doors are about ready to be hung. Howard's carpentering grandfather is back again, and we're working on the chimney. Yes, the roof is already on; but we left a hole big enough for the chimney: I said we were amateurs, didn't I? (Actually, the idea was to get the house as weather-tight as possible before the rains came.)

Already we're talking of building a bigger place—perhaps at this rate two more amateurs will turn professional! Even if we don't, it gives us a good feeling to know we can lick our problems with a little hard work and lots of fun.

The end of a tough day's work, and time for lunch and hot chocolate in the living room. The table is a slab door across two sawhorses, the seats an apple box, three sacks of cement years he has been crossing various peony species, in a search for new hybrids that will be different from peonies we now have and that will bloom earlier. He showed me seedlings that are the third generation from his original crosses. Some of these have new colors, never seen before in peonies, including some with small, jewellike blooms.

June 20 From Marshalltown, Iowa, I called home on the phone to find out how things are, back there. "Something is wrong with our tomatoes," said Maggie. "They aren't growing and they look so funny. What is the matter?" I can't imagine what the trouble might be.

June 25 About 11 tonight we drove in home, to find things in good order. David was all tanned, which indicates he has been looking after things outdoors. But Maggie had a tale of woe to tell.

It had happened last washday. Washing was all up on the lines in the back yard. She was in work clothes, tired out, and hair every which way. She looked up—and saw a procession of strange autos filling up our drive and parking along the road out in front.

It was a garden club—strange women from a town 75 miles away—on a tour. They had come, all dressed in their Sunday best, without warning or invitation, to see our posies, which flustered Maggie considerably.

June 26 Up betimes and out to view our domain and believe it or not, most everything is coming famously. Peculiarly enough, the tomatoes now look all right. But alas, there is a vacant spot at the end of one bed. The zinnia seeds were never sown. Tonight on went overalls and I went on back in routine form, to cultivating and what not.

June 27 That new little power sprayer, ordered earlier, came while we were away and David had put it in working order. So today we got it out and sprayed the roses with it. This sprayer holds 12 gallons and the little gas engine will pump up to 300 pounds pressure. The nozzle will give anything from a stiff stream to a fine spray. The latter is what we used on the roses.

June 29 Rain today, so studied some of the catalogs and got off orders for new iris.

June 30 When wind died down, dusted about everything on the place. On the potatoes I am using a special dust I bought ready-mixed, which contains DDT for insects and fixed copper for early and late blight. The general purpose dust can also be used.

A reader finds that a hedge can get a new lease on life

"To the editor:

"Thanks to a tip published in Better Homes & Gardens several years ago, a tip that led to the redesigning of our 'living fence', we no longer have the unsightly, partly naked privet so prevalent in many communities, including our own.

"I had long deplored the lack of growth along the bottom of our hedge, but never knew how to correct it. The article I refer to advised trimming the hedge narrower at the top than the bottom so sun and air and rain strike the base and sides as well as the top. . . .

"Many of the neighbors were frankly skeptical and were sure I was ruining a perfectly good hedge, but the years have wrought an almost unbelievable improvement as the pictures show. Now my previously doubting neighbors are convinced that the tapered method of trimming has real merit."

(Signed) Edward C. Grotz
Wilmington, Delaware

"Our hedge looked like this. Growth was sparse, with ugly gaps along the base. So, following your advice, I cut it back to a height of 3 feet to permit trimming without too much bending. I tapered the sides from 1½ feet wide at top to 2½ feet at bottom"

"Both sides of the hedge slope outward from top to bottom. Thus unshaded (privet dislikes shade) the bottom can now thrive on equal terms with the top. This shape also helps the hedge to shed better winter's heavy snows"

"Improvement has been amazing. Thick, green growth has taken the place of the gaps at the bottom and the entire hedge has perked up and filled out. I trim three times a year: Memorial Day, July 4, Labor Day"

Acid soil and moss

Q I'm having poor success with my azaleas and rhododendrons because my soil isn't acid. What can I do to correct it?
R. O. B., Delaware

Hufnagle

Mix about two inches of acid peatmoss into your soil as shown. Better yet, spade in plenty of oak leaves, pine needles, or hardwood sawdust, especially oak. Soil can also be acidified by spreading two pounds of sulfur or 10 pounds of aluminum sulfate per 100 feet of bed and watering it in. For established plants, the easiest cure is to use one of the special plant foods for plants that need acid.

Q Large patches of moss are growing on my lawn. I've been told that this is caused by acid soil, and that lime is needed.
J. J. A., Kentucky

Stanley

Moss is no sign of acid soil; it grows as well on alkaline soil. But it does mean that your lawn needs feeding. Feed with balanced plant food. Then scratch up mossy patches as shown and sow grass seed on bare spots. Don't use lime unless you have definite proof that it is needed.

Buy a good commercial slug bait and poison them. Scatter bait around plants as shown. Cleaning up your garden to get rid of daytime hiding places will also help. Then put down a few short boards here and there and slugs will gather under them in the morning, ready to be killed en masse.

Q Can you suggest a good way to keep moles from burrowing through my lawn? W. F. B., Illinois

Trapping is one sure way to kill moles. Pictured is a harpoon-type trap set over a pressed-down portion of runway. When mole pushes up sod he trips trigger and is killed. Other traps are equally effective. You can also control moles by putting lye, cyanide compounds or other poisons in burrow, or by running hose from car exhaust into runway.

Avalanche—cream-white
White Wonder—pure white
Bokhara—rosy-crimson
Courageous—ruby-red
Charles Nye—buttercup yellow
Wychwood—canary yellow
Mrs. Pierre duPont—salmony-orange.

While the major portions of our chrysanthemum plantings are these hardy garden types, we also get a lot of pleasure from growing the large hothouse mums outdoors. Most people don't think it possible, but we've been growing them for many years.

To grow them here in the midwest, you must choose varieties that will bloom early enough to beat the frosts. We've found the best of these to be:

I recommend you do not let these large-flowered types form more than three or four stems. Pinch out additional growth. When they start to form, leave only one bud at the tip of each stem, pinch out the others. After buds show, feed weekly with liquid plant food. Give a pint each of sulfate of ammonia mixed 1 tablespoon to a gallon of water. Discontinue feeding as soon as the buds show color.

Staking, as I've said, is a must. These plants grow tall—three feet to possibly six. Staking will also permit the smaller types to give you the best display. When color begins to show, you'll want to retie many of them. Tie cords tightly to stakes, then loosely under flower heads so that each can fluff out more naturally.

On following directions

As a child, I loved flowers, and sweetpeas were my favorites. All one cold, snowy winter I looked forward to the spring, when I could plant the seed I had bought with my carefully hoarded weekly allowance.

Then came planting time.

"Now read the directions carefully," mother advised.

But I read no further than the first line which said, "Dig a trench 16 inches deep."

I dug the trench (a big job for a 9-year-old) and then I carefully placed the seed in a neat row along the bottom and shoved the dirt back in—all 16 inches of it.

Weeks passed but the sweetpeas failed to grow. One day when all hope for my flowers was gone my mother asked, "Are you sure you followed the directions?"

I was sure, and to prove it found the seed envelope.

I read, "Dig a trench 16 inches deep and fill to within 4 inches of the top with well-rotted fertilizer and then plant the seed."

The memory of the sweetpea seeds still lying under 16 inches of heavy soil has been a mute reminder of the mistakes that can be made when instructions aren't followed.—Elaine Anderson, Deerwood, Minnesota.

Corncobs help grow better gardens

By Charles R. Milton

Here's the latest prescription for roses, shrubs, vegetables, and flowers: "Apply ground corncobs and let alone."

Results? Fewer weeds with less cultivation, more moisture and less watering, cooler roots and more bloom.

In the past we've known that ground cobs make good mulch. But getting it was another story, and involved driving out into the country to find a farmer who could be persuaded to gather and grind a supply of cobs.

Hybrid corn industry ended all that. Cobs began piling up at seed corn plants and offered a real problem of disposal. Then the greenhouse men tried using ground cobs as a substitute for other mulches which were becoming hard to get. Most of them grumbled at first that it couldn't be done, but the smart men in our college floriculture departments showed it could, and at a cost lower than old methods.

As a result, many of the country's leading rose growers now use corncob mulch entirely. Some are even bold enough to brag about getting better quality and deeper colors.

Cobs do not bring in new weeds because weed seeds are seldom mixed in with them. At the same time, it keeps down weeds that might grow from seeds already in the bed. Because of its light, porous nature, it can be applied three to four inches deep, enough to discourage all but old, established perennial weeds. And since it's cheap, most gardeners can afford to use that deep a mulch.

This thick mulch layer keeps the soil cooler and slows down evaporation by cutting off the sun's rays. Ground cobs are a surprisingly good insulator; if they didn't contain so many starches and sugars, they would probably have been snapped up long ago by the building industry.

If the cobs are allowed to remain on top of the soil from year to year, as is possible in a rose garden, for instance, the chemical composition of the material isn't of too much importance. But when the old mulch is dug under then we run into trouble from the starches and sugars.

Bacteria start breaking down these substances when the cobs are dug under, and require nitrogen for the process. They grab that nitrogen wherever they can find it, and usually take so much of it that plants are robbed.

For this reason, when you do dig under a corncob mulch, be sure you add a little quickly available nitrogen at the same time. On most soils about a cupful of nitrate of soda, ammonium nitrate, or ammonium sulfate will be enough to offset the effects of bacteria in a bed 10 by 25 feet. Or, easier, spread a light dusting of a complete plant food on the soil.

Cob mulch is good for two or three years when used on top of the ground. If your soil dries slowly in the spring, you can remove and pile the mulch for re-use.

A big problem right now is that cob mulch isn't available to everyone. Because it's bulky, it isn't shipped far. However, you can locate a supply almost everywhere corn is grown for feed or seed, and especially where there are hybrid corn processing plants. If they aren't ground, you can usually get a farmer or local mill to do it for you. But no matter where you get them, try corncobs. They'll make your gardening easier and better.

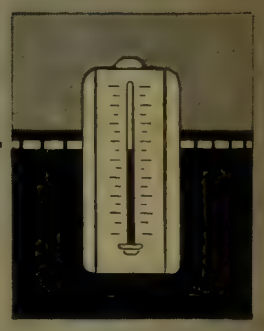
Try drapery camouflage

Draperies of the same size make mismatched windows look alike

Problem One odd high window, set off by itself on a side wall, made curtaining this pair of regular-sized windows difficult for Mrs. W. F. Kucharo of Des Moines. If the pair were given one size drapery and the single window another, the corner would look spotty and unfinished



Photographs: Stanley

Solution Three matching pairs of ceiling-to-floor draperies, topped by a valance, go round the corner to tie the three windows together. The little high window wasn't needed for light so it could be hidden under permanent draperies. You may still guess that there's a third window, but you don't know that it is a different size. Old North Church (1723), from which the lantern hung to warn Revere. Imagine! Under this church 1,000 early settlers lie buried!

In the afternoon you'll go to Lexington, Concord, and South Sudbury. If you drive, follow Massachusetts Avenue to Cambridge, home of Harvard and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In Lexington visit Buckman Tavern where the Minute Men gathered. See the battleground. Visit the Munroe Tavern, used as a British hospital, and the Hancock-Clark House, where Adams and Hancock awaited Revere.

Only a few miles more and you're in Concord where the First Provincial Congress met and where the "rude bridge that arched the flood" witnessed the Battle of Concord. You can visit the homes of Emerson, Thoreau, Hawthorne, and the Alcotts. Turning south you pass Thoreau's Walden Pond, now a state park.

Then to South Sudbury to the inn immortalized by Longfellow in Tales of a Wayside Inn. Its ballroom, the floor suspended on springs to keep legs from tiring, its handsome bedrooms, and huge colonial kitchen will fascinate you. Nearby stands the schoolhouse to which Mary took her little lamb. There are also an old gristmill and the inn's carriage house with its Lafayette coach. And you can stay for dinner at the inn before you go back to Boston.

4th DAY

(About 100 miles.) As you leave Boston, see Bunker Hill Monument. At the Boston Navy Yard you can board the U.S. Frigate Constitution—famed Old Ironsides—and victor in over 40 hot naval engagements. Passing Revere Beach, you drive through Lynn and Swampscott to Marblehead. There you can meander through lanes lined with antique homes, distinguished doorways, fishermen's cottages, and busy boat yards.

At Salem you can't see everything, but here are suggestions—things you won't see elsewhere:

House of Seven Gables, built in 1668, containing Hawthorne relics and a secret stairway.

John Ward House, 1684. It's associated with an apothecary's shop of 1825, a "one-cent" store of 1840, a shoemaker's shop of 1830, and other attractions.

The Salem Maritime Historic Site. Here is the Old Custom House, where Nathaniel Hawthorne had his office; Derby Wharf, which was used as a base for privateering in the Revolution and War of 1812; and Derby House, the oldest brick house in Salem.

The Pioneers' Village, a Puritan settlement with its replicas of bark- and mat-covered cottages, a smithy, brick kiln, stocks, and colonial garden.

After Salem, drive along the waterfront of the famous fishing

town of Gloucester in Rockport, famous artists' colony and on to Newburyport. At Salisbury turn right to see New Hampshire's 25 miles of beautiful beaches. You enter Portsmouth, the state's only seaport, among ancient homes. Get out to walk near the heart of the city to see more old mansions.

Cross the Maine line and put up. For dinner tonight you'd enjoy Wheeler's Inn, near York.

5th DAY

(220 miles.) Turn off for York Harbor and ride north beside long beaches and picturesque rock formations until, at the Cliff House, just below Ogunquit, you park to see Bald Head Cliff, 100 feet high, a convulsed mass of ancient rock full of quartz streaks and lava extrusions. As you enter Ogunquit, see the three-mile beach backed by sand dunes and a tidal river.

At Kennebunk, just this side of the imposing colonial Unitarian Church, turn right to see beautiful mansions once owned by shipbuilders. You'll come to the famous Wedding Cake House, a simple brick home enveloped with lacy hand-carved scrollwork when a Maine swain wanted his bride to have something different.

After driving beside stately brick homes in Portland, you go through Brunswick, home of Bowdoin College. It was here Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin." You pass through Bath, famous for shipyards, and into Wiscasset where, if you look to the left, you'll see a mammoth, white masterpiece of early home-building. Leaving Thomaston, visit Montpelier, a reproduction of the big residence of Gen. Henry Knox, Washington's Secretary of War.

Just this side of the Penobscot River, boys—big or little—will be thrilled by Fort Knox, begun in 1844 and enlarged in the 1860's against possible Confederate raiders. This huge granite structure is in a splendid state of preservation.

From here it's only a brief run into Bar Harbor. If daylight allows, take the boat ride, about an hour, in Frenchmans Bay. You'll see rocky isles over which fly eagles, cormorants, and loons, and you'll have a good look at palatial homes. Or, tonight, or tomorrow morning,

"Now the boys come to breakfast smiling"

"Someone was always late for breakfast at our house . . . until we installed twin lavatories in the bathroom. Now, John and Junior come to breakfast together . . . smiling and on time."

Many families have solved the problem of a morning traffic jam in their bathroom by installing twin Eljer Lavatories . . . side by side or back to back, as illustrated above. A range of sizes and easily matched designs are available in white or beautiful pastel colors.

And, Eljer is first for quality. Bathtubs and kitchen sinks have a rugged, rigid, cast-iron base that makes possible a smooth, extra-thick coating of glass-like enamel that is easy to keep sparkling clean and new looking. Eljer Vitreous China Lavatories and Closet Combinations just naturally resist stains and are impervious to all ordinary acids . . . because they are real china. Faucets are chrome-plated, operate smoothly, and all wearing parts are easily renewable.

drive up Cadillac Mountain, an easy ascent, where the view in all directions is superb. Huge cliffs rise out of the ocean, ancient mountains are rounded by glaciers, ocean islands are topped with firs, spruces, pines. The unique character of Mt. Desert Island, colonized by the French in 1613, caused Uncle Sam to create Acadia National Park.

(Note: If I had a day more I'd break the Maine Coast ride in two. First day I'd stop in York Village to visit the Old Gaol, said to be the most ancient public building in New England. I'd run out to Kennebunkport and along the ocean to Biddeford Pool. Below Portland I'd call on famous 4-mile Old Orchard Beach, summer resort for over 100 years. At Portland I'd take the Casco Bay boat ride among the islands. Next day I'd take the remaining mileage more deliberately, making more stops.)

6th DAY

About 225 more miles and you'll be at Mt. Washington in New Hampshire. You pass through Bangor and Skowhegan, and the mountains rise to greet you. At Gorham, New Hampshire, you can see practically every peak in the Presidential Range. Turn south through Pinkham Notch, a hiker's paradise and stop at Glen Ellis Falls and Jackson Falls.

Now comes the deep defile, Crawford Notch. Near Bretton Woods you make for the Base Station to ascend Mt. Washington by the granddaddy of cog railways, completed soon after the Civil War. Its comical locomotive reminds you of a grasshopper, but it will shove you right up to the top. From bare rocks, 6,288 feet above sea level, you can see most of the mountains in New Hampshire. You can stop tonight in the Summit House and have breakfast here in the morning. It will give you a sunset and a sunrise to brag about back home.

tacular mountain gap. It's another climb, this time by the ultramodern Cannon Mountain Aerial Tramway. It takes only 7½ minutes to hoist you to a spreading panorama of mountain scenery.

The Profile—"Old Man of the Mountain"—has brought out more cameras over more years than any other American face! This 40-foot countenance, 1,200 feet above you, exhibits its features like a matinee idol.

The Flume, at the south end of the notch, is a 700-foot-long chasm between 70-foot walls. You can walk through it easily.

Lost River. Turn off at North Woodstock to see this series of titanic potholes and glacial caverns. The river appears and disappears to emerge at the gorge as Paradise Falls. Here you'll also find 300 varieties of ferns, mosses, and flowering plants, all carefully labeled.

Passing Squam Lake you come to Lake Winnepesaukee, New Hampshire's biggest and most beautiful. Coves and bays indent its 283-mile shore line, and scenic islands rise as high as 400 feet from the water. If you've time, take the 65-mile boat ride. You sleep in or near Meredith.

8th DAY

You won't drive more than 150 miles today. After passing through Laconia, you go on through Franklin where Daniel Webster was born. It's a short run from Lebanon up to Hanover to see Dartmouth. Cross a bridge and you're in Vermont. You drive beside the serene Connecticut River, made famous by Thoreau on his canoe trip, into White River Junction.

At Woodstock are more colonial homes set amid a lush green landscape. At Sherburne Pass you enter the Green Mountains. The Long Trail Lodge may be a stopping place for lunch, and you ought, at least, to go inside this outdoor man's dream of a place. Here the Long Trail, Vermont's "footpath in the wilderness," runs north and south the length of the state.

From Rutland to Manchester you view one Green Mountain after another. In Manchester tonight be sure to take a stroll on the marble sidewalks.

9th DAY

In today's 120 miles the abundance of green-clad mountains amazes you. Vermont, they say, contains more peaks than the White, Adirondack, and Catskill systems combined. Passing through Arlington, birthplace of Ethan Allen, you enter Bennington. In 1777, on the site of the 306-foot Battle Monument, Stark's colonials defeated Burgoyne. Run out to Old Bennington to see the Old First Church and the 185-year-old Wallomsac Inn where you can sit in the very room where Allen and Stark discussed the fate of Vermont. If you like old pottery, historical manuscripts, and ancient uniforms don't miss the Bennington Historical Museum.

Going east again on the Molly Stark Trail get out for a view when you're on top of Hog Mountain. At Brattleboro you head south for Greenfield, Massachusetts, turn west again on the famous Mohawk Trail through a state forest that provides some of the trail's finest scenery. Put up at Charlemont for the night and see the Inn built in 1787 when Charlemont was a major coach stop between Boston and Albany.

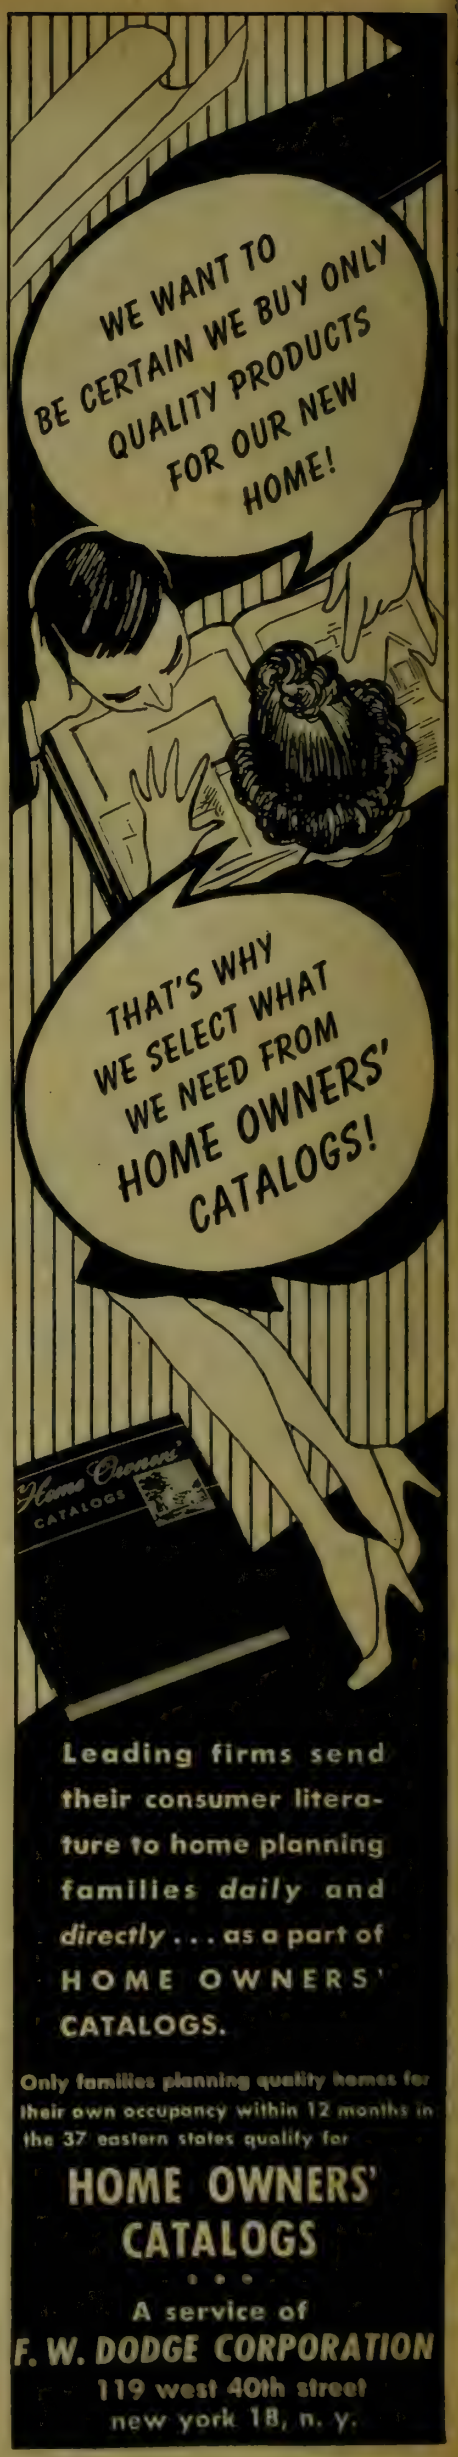
10th DAY

Two hundred miles more and you're home! Still on the Mohawk trail, this morning you enter North Adams where, in 1745, stood Massachusetts' westernmost fort to protect the commonwealth against the French, the Indians, and the Dutch. There's a replica of the fort which you may visit two miles out of town.

In Williamstown you drive beside the graceful buildings of Williams College, founded in 1790.

Pittsfield was a nineteenth century literary center, as was Lenox. Here, in summer, came Holmes, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Melville. If you go through Lenox in August you'll be in time for the celebrated Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

Stockbridge is where Jonathan Edwards preached to the Indians in their own tongue back in 1735. The Mission House is open to visitors.



As you enter Connecticut, the hills still look pretty high. They are! Some stand 1,500 to 1,900 feet. You're beside the beautiful Housatonic River. At Kent Falls walk the trail to see the succession of cataracts which make this one of the most beautiful sights in the state. You can eat a picnic lunch here or broil a steak.

Where Route 37 joins 39, drive the west shore of 15-mile Candlewood Lake, set among more rolling hills. At Danbury you aim at the Merritt Parkway and you're home before you know it.

What's unusual about your home?

What have you done in your home to solve the problems your fellow readers are encountering, such as storage space, room for the extra guest, making rooms serve more than one purpose? Games to play on a trip

By Bess Ritter

If you've ever taken your children on a trip during which pauses for sight-seeing weren't possible, you know how monotonous an all-day journey can get. Boys and girls grow restless when they tire of watching the scenery. Here are some games both grownups and youngsters will enjoy. And you need no equipment other than things that you ordinarily have with you.

Geography

All you need is a book of safety matches. Tear off and throw away the striking strip at its base. Then your prop is fireproof. Say:

"I'm going to give a match to the person who can guess the country I'm thinking of." Pause. "It's a very cold place." "Siberia?" tries someone.

"No, but there's snow and lots of icebergs."

"Alaska?"

Shake your head. "But Santa Claus lives there."

Several will cry, "The North Pole!"

The one who shouts the correct answer first gets a safety match removed from the book. Now it's his turn to describe a particular place. The winner is the person who has the most matches when the game begins to drag.

Memory tester

Give each player 10 matches. The first one says: "I have an angelic face." The second says: "I have an angelic and beautiful face." The third player says: "I have an angelic, beautiful, and clever face."

And so on, down the alphabet. Any player who forgets an adjective or cannot supply a new one after a reasonable pause must forfeit one match. The one who finally has them all wins.

Word races

A wrist watch is the only prop needed for this one, but everyone must know the parts of speech. Time each player while he shuts his eyes and starts to name all the nouns he can think of. These are carefully counted by the group. Call time when one minute is up. The next player does the same thing with adjectives. The third tries adverbs, and so on. The reciter of the longest lists is declared champion. You'll be surprised to find how hard it is to think with your eyes shut.

Word quickies

What's That You're Saying, Don Wilson?

Don Wilson of the
ck Benny Program:

've found it, friends, I've really found it, the Raisin-Bran that n't soggy. My taster tells me Skinner's Raisin-Bran is made risper than any other Raisin Bran. Two well-known, inde-endent laboratories tested 'em all, and found the same nswer. So I said to myself, 'Don, old boy, why eat Raisin ran that's soggy, soggy, soggy when Skinner's Raisin-Bran crisper, crisper, crisper?' And, friends, I'm asking you the ame question. The best answer is to go get some crisper kinner's Raisin-Bran, and see for yourself."

many words as he can that begin with his own first initial. That is, Anna has just one minute, by your watch, to call out everything she can think of that begins with A. Bertha will take B. Charles, C. If clocks mean very little to your children see how many words can be shouted between red lights, telegraph poles, or yellow taxicabs.

Wit sharpener

Start with, "Why is Daddy like a table?"

Mary may answer, "Because he's strong."

John may say, "Because he's steady."

Aunty may reply, "Because he's square."

The others in turn may be compared with articles of food, dress or other inanimate objects. Because everybody loves self-analysis, this is sure to be entertaining.

Serial stories

Player number one creates a group of characters—Hero, Heroine, Villain, and Villainess. The second player makes up the story. The next player involves them in terrible trouble. The fourth gets them out of it. The fifth narrator ties up all the ends, and the story people live happily every after.

Try word games the next time you take a trip. There are types to banish restlessness for everyone—from 1 to 100!

Home furnishings answers

Q What is the most practical way to paint the walls in my baby's nursery? Mrs. L. S., Memphis, Tennessee.

A Paint the lower three feet of the walls a dark shade that won't show finger marks. Be sure to choose a paint that will wash easily. Then paint the upper part of walls and ceiling light, gay colors.

Q Are there any rules for arranging beds in a bedroom? Mrs. L. J., Detroit, Michigan.

A Your bedroom's size and shape usually determine where your bed can go. Do try to place the bed so the sleeper won't face the light. Do avoid placing the bed in the line of drafts. And do keep beds out of traffic lanes whenever possible. Putting beds in corners means only a little more bedmaking work—and adds lots of usable space to your bedroom.

Q Must I use a warm wall color in a bedroom that gets little sunlight? Mrs. R. V., Cleveland, Ohio.

A If you have used plenty of warm colors in your rugs, ceiling, and curtains, your walls can be painted or papered in a cool color. Every room needs contrast of warm and cool colors.

Make your old kitchen look like new

By Kay Hoffer

That's what the Wellingtons did. Their old kitchen had everything! From old-fashioned sink to unhandy pantry. Below, pictures show the old kitchen, then the new

Inconvenient pantry storage space, makeshift worktable, sprawling radiator, too much broken wall space, old-fashioned sink—this was the old kitchen at the Wellingtons

When you study these pictures you'll see that the Frank Wellingtons of Danielson, Connecticut, used to have a big, inconvenient, and unattractive kitchen. The kind you want to close the door to when company comes. In the pictures you see first a corner of the old kitchen, then the same corner transformed. Result is a kitchen the entire family enjoys and one to show off to company. If you're building or remodeling your old kitchen, see if the Wellingtons have an idea here for you.

AFTER

This is the same corner shown above. Pantry was walled over, is now a utility closet opening from the dining room. Dining-room door was moved several feet to the left to give longer working area. Picture window replaces the old double window so Mrs. Wellington has a good view of her garden and the path the youngsters take to school

PC Glass Blocks can make your home more cheerful

● By admitting a lavish supply of diffused, natural daylight in this music corner, PC Glass Blocks help to make it a more cheerful place. And, because of their insulating value, they protect the piano from the bad effects of temperature changes. At night, when inside illumination pours through them, PC Glass Blocks add a touch of real beauty—a friendly and welcoming highlight—to the home's exterior.

Not only here, but at stairwells, hallways, bathrooms—wherever more light is required—PC Glass Blocks fill the need adequately—and yet protect your privacy. Moreover, they aid in heating and air conditioning, eliminate chilling drafts, deaden outside noises, cut off disturbing views. And they do away with troublesome window sash, need no paint, rarely if ever require repairs or replacements, are easily kept sparkling clean.

Make your home more cheerful with the judicious use of PC Glass Blocks—whether you are building or remodeling. Meanwhile, send for our beautifully illustrated booklet which contains scores of suggestions on how to dress up your home with daylight. Simply fill in and return the coupon below. and managing that go into caring for a family, I hadn't had much time to think about Jim. I'd known that he was there—that the bills would be paid, the porch mended, the fuses fixed and the youngsters taught to skate and swim and play ball but there had not been much time to stop and look at Jim.

Now I stopped and looked. He was a little thinner on top and quite a bit more substantial around the middle. There were gray patches at his temples, lines around his eyes, and his shoulders had broadened with the load they had carried. However, he was obviously a good guy, as the children would put it, and he smiled a nice, understanding smile when he straightened out my scoring on the cribbage board. But every now and again, as I looked up at him, he'd be looking at me and there'd be a quizzical gleam in his eye, almost as though he were sizing me up. Was he perhaps? Had I been mother and manager for so long that he wondered what was left of the girl he had married? Was he wondering what I would do about the situation that we found ourselves in?

Almost a week went by before I began to find out. It was then, while shopping one day, that a display of new stamp catalogs stopped me in my tracks. Jim hadn't looked at stamps in years! But once they had been a very special weakness of his. So, one of the catalogs went home with me. I took home a brand-new hair-do, too—one that drew a swirl of waves across the back of my head and perched a silly, little bunch of curls over my forehead. Of course, Jim couldn't see the curls when he picked me up at the library, but when we got home and I took off my hat—he kissed me right on top of them.

"In appreciation of your appreciation," I laughed then, and tucked under his arm, the neat package that held the catalog.

"Why, thanks, Hon!" he exclaimed and, dropping into his big chair, he drew out his penknife and snapped the string in two.

When supper was ready, I called three times and then went to get him. He was sitting by the fire that was laid but not lit, with his book open on our cribbage table. An empty glassine envelope lay on the open book and a little pastel-colored river of postage stamps flowed across it.

"Where in the world did you get those?" I asked.

He was so completely engrossed that he jumped when I spoke. Then he smiled.

"Had 'em. See—here're some more." He put the fingers of his left hand into his vest pocket and—sure enough!—he pulled out another fat little envelope. "Just pick 'em up when I see them," he explained. And I had thought stamps were a thing of the past for Jim!

Of course, in a way they were because—during recent years—he had just tucked them into envelopes and boxes. Beginning that very night, he put his little envelopes into a card index and sorted his stamps into more and more envelopes. It took up a good deal of table space and couldn't be disturbed between sessions, so—that weekend—we set up an old desk in the playroom with a couple of good lights beside it. We put his catalogs and albums between book ends on the desk top, dug out an old reading glass and—after 20 years of shelving his pet hobby—Jim acknowledged it again.

He did a good deal of running up and down stairs gathering together various scattered bits of his hobby, while I sat by the desk in the playroom and laughed at him. Then, when he was making one trip to the attic, I stopped laughing. I couldn't imagine what he was bringing down, but something that was awkward to carry. I could hear it bumping against the wall as he turned the landing.

"Be careful, Jim," I called. "The paste's barely dry on that wall!"

He appeared at the top of the cellar stairs. "Sure, Hon. But you used to have a hobby, too, you know!" And there was my hooking frame. I hadn't looked at it since that dreadful time when twin cases of measles, mumps, and chicken pox came in such rapid succession that I'd wrapped it up and put it away.

"We'll be needing new rugs, anyhow," Jim half apologized, "if we give some of ours to the girls." Sure enough, we would! So, the first thing I knew, my frame was backed up to Jim's desk where the light was good, and we were both plying our hobbies for all we were worth. And—somehow with the snipping of my scissors and the rustle of Jim's turning pages, the silence that had filled the house began to disappear.

We really evolved very pleasant evenings all by ourselves—based on the premise that we enjoyed each other's company. When supper was over, we'd read the honeymooners' daily bulletin and move the colored pins that followed their trip across the face of our big, old map. Then we would settle down to work. It was fun. But it made such a very comfortable schedule that we could almost feel ourselves getting into a rut. That would never have happened in the old days because there were so many outside demands!

For years we'd been so busy with that unorganized social work necessary to the bringing up of daughters, that I'd almost forgotten about the outside work I used to do with teen-age girls. Now I dusted off my paints and brushes and began to teach stenciling one afternoon a week for our neighborhood group. It was right up my alley and I loved it. At night I'd find myself telling Jim about it and about the girls. As I came to know them better, I talked about them more and more. Jim grew interested and would ask about the happenings in class before I had time to tell him. And it was entirely Jim's idea that we have a picnic for the girls. He packed the car and he built the fire in one of the parkway fireplaces. He had a beautiful time supervising the frankfurters and toasting marshmallows, and we both felt as if we'd acquired a new family.

The girls must have sensed our interest because they took to dropping in at odd hours and for no special reason. The house echoed again to the sound of real voices and laughter, and we were glad. In fact the young voices sounded so good to us that we began to wonder how it would be to hear other voices we had known. So I phoned old friends that Jim and I were all rested up and hoping that they'd come in for supper and bridge on Saturday.

Even as we reached out to the world, the world reached in to us. The phone began ringing normally again and I—busy with a boiling pot of dye for my hooking rags or a new stencil or just the hurry that is part of housekeeping when other things are calling—would dash for it before I had time to hear the echoes of voices offering to answer for me.

When I told Jim about Saturday night, he wasn't so sure. "A party!" he exclaimed. "Why? We're getting on all right. Let's let it go at that."

"We can't," I reminded him. "The Rocks and the Browns and the Westervelts have all said they'd come. We can't just tell them not to."

He shook his head. "I suppose not."

Jim had loved parties in the old days, but he didn't seem much interested in this one. However, when Saturday itself rolled around, he put leaves in the dining table for me and, sitting in the kitchen with an apron tied up under his arms, he polished the silver. After that he stood in the dining-room door watching me arrange strands of ivy among the candlesticks on the table. Suddenly I missed him, the front door slammed and I heard the car start. It seemed queer that he should be dashing off in the middle of the afternoon, like that, without even saying where to. But I was pretty busy and didn't think much about it. Then, in hardly any time at all, he was back and I knew that Jim was remembering the old days, too.

In one hand he carried a box of chocolates and in the other a long green cone of Talisman roses. My table arrangement did a disappearing act, and Jim's roses settled into the space between the candlesticks.

Our party was like any gathering of old friends. We talked in twos, threes, and fours and occasionally, the whole table talked at once. It was under cover of one of those conversational storms that Elaine Westervelt (whose children are also grown and gone) leaned toward me.

When you have only each other

"My dear," she said, "you look positively happy. How can you? My house is so empty! With all of the children gone, there's nothing to do and nobody needs me. It's just the end!" She really meant it. Her mouth drooped at the corners and her brown eyes were tragically wide.

The end? Down the lane of our best crystal goblets, through the square of candlelight, over the bowl of opening rosebuds, I looked at Jim and found him looking straight at me. My breath caught in my throat. This time I didn't have to wonder what he was thinking—as I had six weeks ago. I knew! There was nothing quizzical in his glance at all. It was relaxed and content. For a split second we took satisfied stock of each other, then I turned back to Elaine.

"Why, Elaine!" I found myself saying, "Sure it's the end—of one of life's chapters. But—don't you know?—it's just the beginning of the next!"

● WILLIAM GREEN, President, American Federation of Labor

"For the working man, an increased investment in U. S. Savings Bonds can mean not only increased security but increased ability to take advantage of the opportunities that are part of the American way of life."

● WINTHROP W. ALDRICH, Chairman, Chase National Bank

"I believe that every individual who can possibly do so should buy more U. S. Savings Bonds. These bonds represent one of the best investments of our time."

● PHILIP MURRAY, President, Congress of Industrial Organizations

"The C.I.O. has endorsed every effort to encourage the worker to put more of his earnings into U. S. Savings Bonds. They represent both security and independence."

● CHARLES F. BRANNAN Secretary of Agriculture

"I am heartily in favor of the Opportunity Drive to buy more U. S. Savings Bonds. Everyone engaged in farming should recognize the importance of a backlog of invested savings as a means of realizing the agricultural opportunities of the future."

DURING MAY AND JUNE, the U. S. Savings Bond Opportunity Drive is on!

It is called the Opportunity Drive—because it is truly an opportunity for you to get ahead by increasing your own personal measure of financial security and independence.

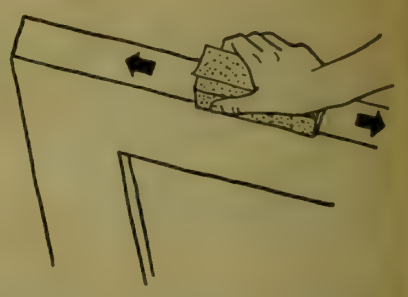
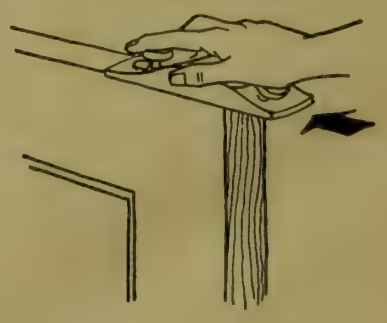
Make those doors work

By Raymond Yates

HOUSE doors that don't work properly are annoying, to say the least. Sometimes they stick. Sometimes they rattle or fail to latch. Sometimes they won't close.

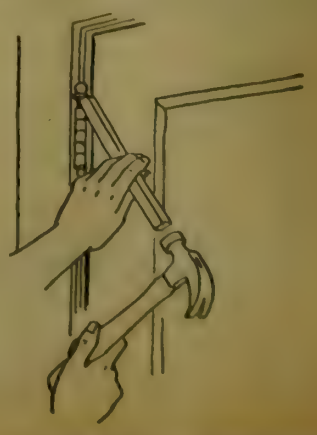


There are several causes of door ailments. Loose hinges, for example. Or settling of a house that distorts the frame of a door. Or shrinking, swelling, or warping of the door itself.

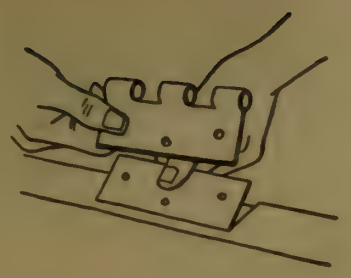


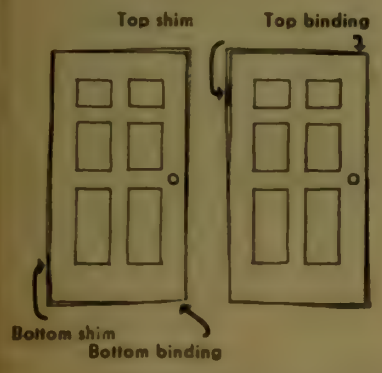
But if one or more of your doors is misbehaving, you are less interested in the cause than in what you can do about it. Fortunately, as the following sketches show, the cure for most door ailments is quick and easy.

Loose hinges. If a door sticks at one corner on the latch edge, check first to see if a hinge has worked loose. Try tightening loose hinge screws. If they won't hold, substitute longer screws. Or plug the screw holes with whittled wooden pegs dipped in glue, as sketched. Then reset the hinge with original screws driven into the pegs



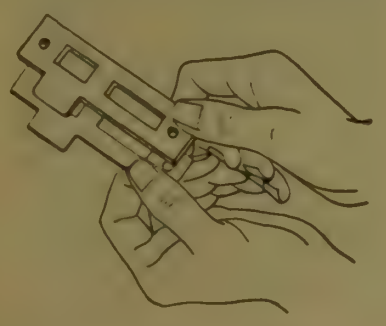
Sandpaper cure. Perhaps the hinges are tight, but a swollen door still sticks near a latch-side corner. To find the spot of contact, look for scratches in the finish. Or run a thin piece of cardboard between closed door and frame until it is stopped by the tight spot. Sand that spot with the grain, using medium-coarse sandpaper followed by fine sandpaper. Use a block





When to plane. Maybe you must remove more wood than you can conveniently take off with sandpaper. In that case shave the offending edge down with a block plane or small smoothing plane. If you work on the top edge of a door, always plane from the corner toward the center so you won't split out the edge grain

Removing a door. If you need to plane the bottom edge of a door, or work on the hinges, you'll have to take the door down. It's easy; doors weigh 20 to 40 pounds, rarely more. Open the door and block up the bottom corner on the latch side with old magazines. Then use a stick of wood and a hammer, as sketched, to tap out hinge pins. Remove bottom pin first, then top one, and door will be free. To rehang door, replace top pin first



Shimming the hinges. If there is a uniform gap between door and frame on the latch side, possibly so large the latch won't catch, you can shift the whole door over. Take the door down, remove hinge leaves from the frame, and put a matching shim of cardboard behind each hinge leaf as sketched. Sometimes it is necessary to shim out the hinge leaves on door, too

Shims end binding. If a door binds at the top or bottom and you prefer not to sand or plane the edge, you often can fix it by shimming out just one hinge as sketched. Such shimming will also center a door in a distorted frame. If a door binds against hinge side, remove both sets of hinge leaves, plug holes, reset hinges a fraction of an inch closer to outside of frame

Shimming the strike plate. Instead of removing a shrunken door and shimming out hinges, you sometimes can make a latch catch in its strike plate by shimming out the plate itself. Take off plate, cut a piece of cardboard to match it, and replace the plate with the thin shim of cardboard behind it

Remodeling strike plate. If your house has settled so the latch tongue misses the opening in the strike plate, look at the plate. If scratches show only a slight adjustment is needed, remove the plate and file it to fit. You may have to chisel out a bit of wood in back of the plate so latch will enter

Relocating strike plate. If scratches on the strike plate indicate that it will have to be moved ¼ inch or more to match the latch tongue, you'll have to take the plate off and move it. Fill the old screw holes with wooden pegs dipped in glue, extend mortise in the indicated direction with a sharp chisel, and replace the plate. Then chisel out the wood behind the plate opening, and fill the exposed part of the old mortise with wood plastic until level

Shrinking the whole door. If a door binds all along latch edge, or won't close at all, it's easier to take the surplus wood off the hinge side than it is to reset the latch. Take down the door and remove the hinge leaves from the door. Then plane entire hinge side, keeping the cut square. With a sharp chisel, cut mortises for hinge leaves in exactly the same positions as before, setting them flush with the surface. Replace hinges, rehang door

Barbecue skewers are fitted out like a fine cutlery set. Steel skewers are set in square walnut handles; the set is mounted on a walnut board with rope hanger. Your hands are far from the flame, but wieners, shish-kabobs, or meat balls cook to perfection right over the heat. Each skewer is 32" long, numbered for easy identification at a party. Kabob Skewer Set, $5.50, ppd. M. C. Flynn, Inc., 43 E. 59th St., New York 22, New York.

Miniature sewing kit for those quick-stitch jobs at home, at the office, or on trips is enclosed in a gold metal walnut shell. Just the size of a real walnut, it's tiny enough to slip into a purse, yet furnishes needle, thread, thimble, and pins whenever and wherever needed. Secure latch holds it shut in purse or drawer. Felt-lined, the Walnut Sewing Kit is $1 each, ppd. Spencer Gifts, Atlantic City, New Jersey.

A favorite table centerpiece, the ivy circle, comes now in break-resistant plastic in crystal, mint green, and ruby red. Filled with low greenery and small flowers, the ring is a gaily summery form of table decoration. The small Ivy Circle is 6" in diameter; $4.50, ppd. Larger, 10", is $6.50. Both for $10. Bodine's of Baltimore, 444 E. Belvedere Ave., Baltimore 12, Maryland.

To turn out big, fluffy omelets such as you see on the food pages of Better Homes & Gardens, you may want a special pan such as we show here. It's the folding kind, unavailable since before the war, that eases you through the touchiest part of omelet making and produces the kind of omelets your friends envy. The pan is polished aluminum, 10" across, with plastic handles; $2.95, ppd. The Post Mart, 260 E. 78th St., New York 21, New York.

"At last, the man comes into his own with a place to keep his tie pins, cuff links, and what-has-he! Treasure your photographs in a handsome album of plastic leather, red, green, tan, ivory, black, or brown. Gold-tooled pattern on the cover matches the name you request. Album's design permits it to lie flat when opened, leaves plenty of space to avoid bulging when filled. Li-Flat Photo Album 10½″x13″, with 50 black mounting pages; $5, ppd. Wegcraft Co., 409 So. Cedar Lake Rd., Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Goo-Goo the Duck is not only an appealing lawn ornament, but she earns her keep, too. Attach your garden hose to her; water pressure makes her head spin, thus throwing out spray through holes in the duck's beak. Covers from 4′ to 40′. Modeled from a decoy, in cast aluminum, Goo-Goo is enameled white in rough finish to resemble feathers. Goo-Goo is 14″ long; $7.85, ppd. J. J. Anthony, 1517 W. North Ave., Milwaukee 5, Wisconsin.

Sweet sentiment for a sweet lady is expressed by these heart-shaped wall plaques of fine ceramic. Each plaque is 8″ high, trimmed with a ceramic rose in true coloring and ribbon beading to match. A truly feminine touch for the room that belongs to the girl of your heart—whether she's 3 or 93—the plaques are white with pink or yellow roses and ribbons; $3.50 each or $6.75 a pair, ppd. The House of Moore, Watertown, Wisconsin.

With June brides everywhere, why shouldn't a little doll mother want a daughter getting married during this month of romance? This sweet bride is 5″ tall, of unbreakable plastic with movable head, legs, and arms. Her white satin gown, trimmed with dainty net, fastens with a snap that's easy for little fingers to fasten. The net veil adds a true note of bridelike beauty. June Bride Doll is $2.10, ppd. Circus Town, 2639 Beaver Ave., Des Moines 10, Iowa.

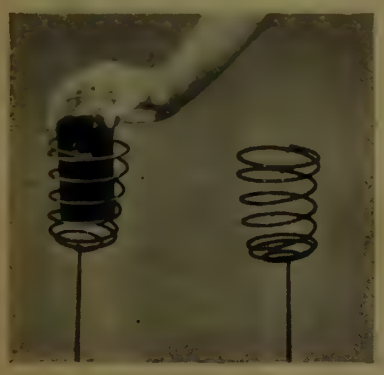
Hot weather is just ahead and you'll be serving ice cream and sherbet often. If it melts down faster than you like, serve it in an Ice Bowl. The bowls are pastel plastic with distilled water trapped between the walls. Freeze the bowls in your refrigerator; serve desserts or gelatine salads in them to stay icy cold for a long time. Bowls are 5" across. Set of four Ice Bowls, $4.95, ppd. Ward Phillips Co., Box 3451, Merchandise Mart, Chicago 54, Illinois.



The chubby little boy blowing bubbles stands guard over your tot's laundry. The generously roomy bag is clear plastic with hand-painted design of boy or girl in pastel colors. Two special small pockets keep socks and hankies separate. Vertical opening makes it easy to tuck laundry inside. Bag is 27"x16"; suspended from a rigid rod. Laundry Bag, $3, ppd. Bren Linda Products, 545 Fifth Ave., New York 17, New York.

Take it easy—that's the best summer slogan of all. And taking it easy involves some really comfortable sitting and rocking. Here's just the rocker for it, fashioned from Southern cypress wood, treated against weather wear, and shaped to fit a weary body. Don't sit in it if you've anywhere to go very soon—plan to sit and relax for hours. Cypress Rocker, $12, f.o.b. factory. Littletree Company, Winter Park, Florida.

Little wooden buckets, less than pint size, are made of redcedar and bound in brass. They may serve cigarettes or candy for you, hold paper clips or pins on a desk, catch odds and ends anywhere in the house. Authentically reproduced miniatures of the old cedar water buckets, these are 3 inches high. Souvenir Buckets are 6 for $3, ppd. The Bucket Shop, Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

You're out on the lawn relaxing with a tall, cold lemonade. But set the glass down between sips, and it tips over, every time, unless you've a holder for the glass like these spiral design Beverage Sticks, made to hold a glass or soft-drink bottle. Sharp points stick the holders into the lawn near easy chairs or hammock. Beverage Sticks are metal, 3' long, in assorted bright enamels; set of six, $2.50, ppd. T & B Sales Co., Box 2504, Tulsa 1, Oklahoma.

THE MAN NEXT DOOR

For 10 minutes after I see a movie with Bob Montgomery or Doug Fairbanks, Jr., I seem reborn with aplomb and suavity. . . . Even my wife notices a weird difference in me. . . . But after one red traffic light, I'm my old half-irked self again.

"I've a guilty feeling," confesses Phyllis Gowan, drying her hair in the back-yard sun, "when my kids misbehave I've helped by forgetting what I told 'em not to do."

Don't quote me to any of your highbrow friends, but I suspect that 1,000,000 copies of a really good calendar do more for art in the home than the 10 best American art galleries.

My neighbor, the high-powered executive in the boxy cement house, confides that a hot tub and some instrumental music do more to relax his nerves than a visit to his psychoanalyst.

My two neighbors in the duplex around the corner torture me with opposite views of the rent control law. The landlord, who lives in one half, says it's ruining him. The tenant, in the other half, says the law's saving him from destitution. Wonder what'd happen if they swapped?

Around our house almost every burst of originality complicates life still further. . . . We brought home some small shells from Florida and mingled 'em with the gravel in the garden path, and now (what with sharp fragments) the kids can't go barefoot the rest of the summer.

⬆ One of our town's smartest hostesses serves a tray of ice water as a sign her parties are ended. . . . She vows she'll have no guests lingering past midnight when she's invited 'em for 5 to 7 o'clock. . . . (But some of the more brazen souls merely complain the ice water's too weak.)

I don't think we American men can achieve equality with women until it's just as important to have extra girls at a polite party as it's now considered to have extra men. (And who cares a whoop what Emily Post says!)

The boy next door resents the tree lovers' new taboo on carving initials and hearts in the bark. Maybe it's because he suspects his more realistic girl would settle for a gold pin studded with a few gems.

"It requires almost as much strength of character to prolong a neighborhood feud," reflects Les Gowan, bending for some torn-up arithmetic papers on his front lawn, "as it does to wind it up in a friendly way."

Next to our refrigerator, the biggest thing we bought when we got married was our davenport, and now, I've been socked almost as much to reupholster it as it cost new. Hot tip to the June bride: Get your new davenport complete with a slipcover.

I've found it doesn't take any longer to repaint our garden furniture than it does to play 18 holes of golf. It just seems longer. ➡

My wife twits me because one of my five favorite tunes this year is Victor Herbert's "Indian Summer."

"That's for an old man!" she says. (I can only argue in self-defense that it was one of my five favorite tunes 25 years ago, too.)

Don't look now, but one of the 1949 crop of June brides in our block thinks the nicest wedding present from Pop would be four free years in college for the two of 'em. Pop, on the contrary, wishes she'd been interested in an older man.

The self-made man around the corner complains that, as his children grow up, he has to give 'em bigger and bigger allowances while the chores they do get fewer and fewer. Someday he expects he'll have to give 'em each a house and lot and begin mowing their lawns.

It's only one man's opinion, but from what I overhear, it strikes me that a woman who keeps her figure under control can dress better on half what it costs a stylish stout.

Maybe it would keep your wife's luggage down to a minimum if she knew experienced travelers estimate that a woman carries three pounds of baggage for each year of her age.

If I had to sum up all my wisdom as a householder in one final piece of advice to a young couple about to build a house, or buy one, I'd tell 'em: Better get a 5-room house on a 100-foot lot (or bigger) than a 10-room house on a 50-foot lot.

. . . When you stand outside your doorway with your wife in the late June dusk, to see if your youngest is somewhere in sight,

. . . When your daughter discovers at 17 that she can wear the first evening dress you ever bought your wife,

. . . When your boys give a week's fishing trip with you priority over their more urgent summer plans,

. . . When you turn the wheel over to Junior for 100 miles on a vacation trip and exchange glances with his amazingly youthful mother,

. . . Then you know marriage and family life will be the golden thread in our civilization long after weekends on the moon become a bore.
